On the question,

Will the House concur in the amendments made by the Senate?

Mr. SOWERS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the amendments made by the Senate.

QUESTION OF INFORMATION

Mr. SURFACE. Mr. Speaker, this is the liquor bill or the bill pertaining to malt or brewed liquors or beverages as they choose to call them now. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of information.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question of information.

Mr. SURFACE. Mr. Speaker, it is necessary at this time to confine my remarks solely to the subject of concurrence or non-concurrence?

The SPEAKER. The only question before the House is on the amendments inserted in the Senate. The gentleman must confine himself to that question.

Mr. SURFACE. Mr. Speaker, that destroys the orderly sequence that I had in my mind that I wished to present, but one fundamental fact at least I will bring before the members of this House, and that is that this bill provides for selling in packages in stores. Now, what kind of condition will we have when packages of liquor, loose liquor can be sold in the stores as it says here: "Persons engaged in the sale of food or beverages." That is the stores selling the food.

There are many other features in this bill that I should like to have the privilege and the apportunity to speak upon, but unfortunately, I cannot. I just want to say this, that I hope that there are enough Christian people in this House to vote "no" on this bill on concurrence.

QUESTION OF PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question of parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Speaker, I understood the clerk to read the Printer's No. as 1373 or something like that. I have No. 1604 of this bill on my desk, and I am just wondering what the correct Printer's Number is. Maybe it has gone back again.

The SPEAKER. Number 1604 is the correct Printer's number. The Chair thanks the gentlemen from Berks for calling attention to the fact.

QUESTION OF PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. TUMELTY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of parlimentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Philadelphia will state his question of parlimentary inquiry.

Mr. TUMELTY. Mr. Speaker, are we voting on the amendments as read by the clerk or on all the amendments in the bill?

The SPEAKER. On all the amendments inserted by the Senate.

Mr. TUMELTY. Mr. Speaker, I have been trying to read possibly one hundred amendments that have been put into this bill by the Senate this morning. One of the things that we fought for on this floor was to keep the package retailer out of this bill, so as to keep the boys and girls at drug stores and other places from buying malt or brewed beverages in bottles at any time.

Now, that is back in the bill and I would ask everybody to vote "no" on the motion to concur in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. PFAFF. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I rise to oppose the motion to concur in these amendments to House Bill No. 2436. In these amendments the Senate has restored the package retail license. This particular form of license was eliminated in this House from the original bill to put the sale and distribution of beer on a higher plane in this Commonwealth. We are really interested in keeping beer away from the youth of this Commonwealth. I think we should vote down these amendments and give the legitimate distributor who will only serve people qualified to receive, or old enough to buy the beer, and I ask the members to vote against the concurrence in these amendments.

Mr. SOWERS. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, when this bill was in the House, I led the fight against it. I was particularly anxious to restore the power to the county treasurers. The Senate has restored the powers to the county treasurers. The Senate has not centralized the beer control in the liquor control board, and this House on my motion struck out the package store. I have been canvassing and I am personally still against the package store, but I do not believe I could win; therefore I would say that we might as well close the fight and end it. Somebody has to lose, when I am licked I take my medicine gracefully.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, as one of the sponsors of this bill I am slightly desirous of having a postponement of the vote on this motion to concur in the amendments. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Sowers, who made the motion to concur in the amendments withdraw his motion so that the members may familiarize themselves more with the amendments and that a vote be taken later in the day.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Philadelphia Mr. Sowers, agree to withdraw his motion temporarily?

Mr. SOWERS. Mr. Speaker, it is coming to the closing hours. We ought to make up our minds.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, I did not hear whether or not the gentleman desired to press his motion.

Mr. SOWERS. Mr. Speaker, I stated that I felt it was coming to the closing hours of the session, and we might as well dispose of it now, instead of within an hour or two or tomorrow. Therefore, I would like to press the motion and ask for a vote.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, these amendments have been considered by the sponsors of the bill. Most of the matters contained in the amendments were discussed previously. I myself am heartily in favor of the amendments inserted by the Senate, but inasmuch as we are getting to the close of the session, and if we do not take action immediately upon this bill there is some danger that the regulation of the liquor traffic will be in the same chaotic condition that it has been for the last two years. I ask every member to support this motion of the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Sowers, and concur in the amendments of the Senate. It is the only way we will get regulation. The only way we will get proper regulation. Therefore, I again ask the members of the House to concur in the amendments and vote "aye" on the motion.

Mr. GATES. Mr. Speaker, may I interrogate the gentleman from Allegheny, Mr. Eberharter.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Allegheny permit himself to be interrogated?

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, I will.

Mr. GATES. Mr. Speaker, I have not had the opportunity of going over this bill since it has been reprinted. I would like to have an interpretation of page 22, "the board may in its discretion refuse to grant a new license for premises situated within three hundred feet of a church, school or hospital." I would like to ask the gentleman whether that has been completely deleted or has it been taken care of in some other part of the bill.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, that has been completely deleted and leaves the law in this respect exactly as it is at the present time.

Mr. GATES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman please tell me and does the gentleman mean to tell us that you can put a liquor place right up against a church in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or against a public school, or a parochial school or hospital?

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the gentleman from Armstrong, Mr. Gates, this bill refers only to malt beverages and has nothing to do with liquor licensing and keeps the law in that respect as it has been in the past.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, while we are in the closing hours of the session, there nevertheless is sufficient time to take 15 or 20 minutes or half an hour so that those who may desire to support this bill may have a chance to read it, therefore, I would like to move, Mr. Speaker, that the motion to concur be laid upon the table until the members have had time to read the bill, and then if we have enough votes to pass this bill, we have votes enough to take it off the table. I move that the motion of the gentleman from Philadelphia be tabled.

I withdraw my motion to lay upon the table and yield to the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Sowers.

MOTION POSTPONED

Mr. SOWERS. Mr. Speaker, I move you that the motion to concur be postponed for one-half hour.

The motion was agreed to.

On the question,

Will the House concur in the amendments made by the Senate?

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Speaker, as author of the bill, I move that the House non-concur in the amendments made by the Senate.

On the question,

Will the House agree to the motion?

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to interrogate the gentleman from Monroe, Mr. Achterman.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Monroe permit himself to be interrogated?

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I will.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Monroe the reason for his motion of non-concurrence.

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Speaker, because it is changing the existing law as it now is in connection with the Department of Internal Affairs.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, in other words, the gentleman's objection is to the change in the administrative code, giving back to the Department of Internal Affairs the full powers it had before the act of 1929.

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Speaker, that is correct, because that Department should be thoroughly and completely responsive to the Governor's office.

Mr. TURNER. The department, Mr. Speaker, is headed by an elective officer, is it not?

Mr. ACHTERMAN. That is right, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. TURNER. A constitutional Officer, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. ACHTERMAN. That is correct, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. TURNER. And, Mr. Speaker, one of the oldest offices in the Commonwealth, is that not right?

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Speaker. I presume that that is correct likewise, but I might add for the gentleman's information that the particular duties of the office do make it entirely responsive. Enlarging my remarks to the gentleman from Delaware, I wish to state that the peculiar duties of that office are involved in those of the governmental functions, particularly of the Governor, and I feel that it should be responsive and closely allied with the Governor's office, and the very fact that that is so is the reason for the present law and there is certainly no present reason why there should be a change. For that reason I ask the members to vote non-concurrence in the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, does the amendment change anything except the appointive power? In other words, let me phrase that in this way,—Do these amendments change the powers of the Department of Internal Affairs in any respect except as to the appointive power over its own employes?

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Speaker, it of course destroys that personal touch which is necessary and essential to have between the two offices—to have the real cooperation necessary between the two offices. I am pointing out also the fact that is what it actually does, and that is what I understand this House is interested in.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, it has always been one of the strange fictions in our government, created I think by the changes in the administrative code of 1929 by which the Department of Internal Affairs, while it was headed by an independent officer, an elective officer independent of the executive, the appointive power over its employes was turned over to the executive. I think those of us who have given some thought to the government of Pennsylvania in the past have always agreed that this anomalous situation should not exist, and we ought to do either one of two things, we either ought to have a constitutional amendment abolishing the election of the Secretary of Internal Affairs and making him an appointive officer under the Governor, or we ought to give back to the Department of Internal Affairs the powers which it had.

I think the executive,—I think you heard me say before on the floor of the House that I have always believed,—not only because the present executive happens to belong to another party, but when the executive was of my own party,—I have always believe that the Governor of Pennsylvania wields too much power of patronage, and therefor wields too much influence in the Legislative halls, and when they added in 1929 the selection of the employes of the Department of Internal Affairs, they disrupted a great department. Gradually they have been stealing from that department, each incoming Governor has been stealing some of its powers from that department.

It is a great department—it should be a great department,—it should be the place where are reposed a lot of administrative functions. It should be continuing and should not be changed by the change of the executive of the Commonwealth, and I therefore think the changes made in the Senate are proper changes, that the amendments are proper and that to the Department of Internal Affairs ought to be returned powers which it had in the past and which were taken away from it in 1929.

I ask you to vote "no" on this motion.

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish merely to point the fallacy of the argument of the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Turner, in that he said that we should go back to the situation that existed previous to 1929. He has also mentioned as a corrolary that we ought to amend the constitution. That amendment to the Constitution will only accomplish what the present law now is and if that is true, he should ask the members on his side of the House to vote to sustain what the law now is, and with that I am in accord, consequently I am asking the members on this side of the House, and I also ask the Republicans for their vote of non-concurrence, for the purpose of maintaining the law as it now exists.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I have a great deal of respect for the legal ability of the gentleman from Monroe, having spent quite some time with him in the Judiciary General committee during the session, and therefore I have great respect for his reasoning powers. I don't know whether it is due to the lateness of the hour at which he arrived in bed this morning or due to the lateness of the hour I went to bed, that makes it impossible for me to follow his line of argument which he stated a few minutes ago. When the people of Pennsylvania elect a man to head the Department they do not mean that he is to be a figure head in the department, with a lot of employes over whom he has no direct control, and who are responsive to another elective officer. Therefore if you want to give this patronage to the Governor, then you should abolish the elective office of the Secretary of Internal Affairs. But if you want to continue to elect the Secretary of Internal Affairs, then you ought to give him the power of appointment so that he can operate his Department and follow out the policies which he believes in and for which he stands.

On the question recurring,

Will the House agree to the motion?

The SPEAKER declared the ayes appear to have it,

Whereupon, a division was called for, eighty-three members voting in the affirmative and sixty-five in the negative the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

Ordered, That the Clerk inform the Senate accordingly.

RESOLUTION FOR CONCURRENCE

The Clerk of the Senate being introduced presented an extract from the Journal of the Senate, which was read as follows:

In the Senate, June 21, 1935.

Resolved (if the House of Representatives concur), That House Bill No. 1687, Printer's No. 1610, entitled "An act to amend sections one thousand four hundred and two, two thousand five hundred and fifty-two, two thousand five hundred and fifty-four, section two thousand five hundred and fifty-six as amended, sections two thousand five hundred and fifty-seven, two thousand five hundred and fifty-eight, sections two thousand five hundred and fifty-nine, two thousand five hundred and sixty-seven as amended, and section two thousand five hundred and sixty-eight, and to repeal section two thousand five hundred and fifty-three of the act approved the tweny-third day of June, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-one (Pamphlet Laws, nine hundred thirty-two) entitled 'An act relating to cities of the third class; and amending, revising and consolidating the law relating thereto,' providing for the collection of city, county, school and poor taxes in cities of the third class by the city treasurer as tax collector; providing for his compensation and for deputies, clerks and assistants and their compensation to be fixed and paid jointly by the city, county and school district; requiring the city treasurer to give one bond as treasurer and collector of all of said taxes, the premiums thereof to be paid jointly by the county, city and school district; and generally revising and clarifying the powers and duties of said tax collector," be recalled from the House for further consideration.

Ordered, That the Clerk present the same to the House of Representatives for its concurrence.

On the question,

Will the House concur in the resolution of the Senate?

Mr. PARKS. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, as the sponsor of this Bill, I ask the House to concur in the amendments of the Senate, but I am asking that you vote "no" on the resolution of the Senate asking for its recall.

This is the first real taxpayers' bill that gives relief on taxes that has passed both the House and the Senate. This bill amends the act of 1933 that becomes effective on treasurers elected this fall, and it raises the salaries in many cases and the bill of 1933 was inconsistent as it set the salary of the tax collectors of third class cities of over fifty-five thousand population at $7,500. In fact, a city of fifty-five thousand would pay seventy-five hundred dollars and the city of Erie with one hundred thirty-five thousand population would pay seventy-five hundred dollars. This bill of mine corrects this by making seventy-five hundred dollars the maximum amount, and it adds the collection of the county taxes. If this bill would fail, it may cost the city of Altoona ten or twelve thousand dollars more than the present situation. In Altoona, the city treasurer gets six thousand dollars and collects all taxes.

I ask the members to vote "no" on this resolution and ask for a roll call.

On the question recurring,

Will the House concur in the resolution of the Senate?

The SPEAKER declared the nays appeared to have it,

Whereupon, a division was called for, seventy members having voted in the affirmation and seventy-eight in the negative the question was determined in the negative and the resolution was not concurred in.

Ordered, That the Clerk inform the Senate accordingly.

APPROPRIATION BILLS ON THIRD READING

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up at this time House Bill No. 3052, Senate Bill No. 1586, Printer's No. 626, on page 3 of today's calendar, appropriation bills on third reading.

Agreeably to order,

The House proceeded to the third reading and consideration of House Bill No. 3052 (Senate Bill No. 1586), entitled:

An Act to amend section two of the act approved the nineteenth day of September one thousand nine hundred and thirty-four (Pamphlet Laws seven) entitled "An act transferring money from the Liquor License Fund to the General Fund and providing for the subsequent return from the General Fund of the transferred money" by extending the time for the repayment of the amounts transferred

On the question,

Will the House agree to the bill on third reading?

It was agreed to,

On the question,

Shall the bill pass finally?

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, this measure is the first of a series measures to which some members of this House are opposed. In order to justify the passage of these measures it is necessary to understand why they are before us. They are indirectly a legacy from the last Legislature which was summoned to proceed in its wisdom to meet the pressing financial necessities of the State.

When the Legislature met in Special Session the group of which I am now a member came into this Hall with a concrete definite tax program which would have met the necessities of the State then and there. As those who are familiar with the proceedings, either by reading the newspapers, or as older members of this House knew that the group, then the minority, were not even permitted to present a tax measure. Instead of making proper provisions for the financial needs of the Commonwealth due to the necessity of raising money for relief, the majority group disregarding financial sanity transferred funds from special accounts and made them available for relief purposes. Those funds, gentlemen of the House, were transferred on the basis of specific promises that they would be repaid at a definite time.

During the Special Session I said and other members of this group said that we had grave doubts as to whether that money would be repaid in conformity with the obligation or promise that was made by the House to the people of this State.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this House, and particularly the majority group in this House, is the custodian of the promises made by this administration and in a peculiar sense the other branch of this General Assembly is the custodian of the promises made by the preceding administration.

We had a right to expect, however much we may differ as to the financial details of a program, that there would be one thing that the majority group in the other branch of this Legislature would do if it didn't do anything else, and that was to present the concrete outline of a definite program, a tax program, designed to redeem the promises that majority group in the other branch of the Legislature had made.

Now, members of the House, we face a practical situation and are confronted with a condition and not a theory. There is pending in the other branch of the Legislature a bill making it possible to borrow money against estimated tax incomes. That money can be borrowed only if the budget is balanced. The budget can be balanced only by extending the time for repaying the money due the special accounts. We can only balance the budget by breaking the promises made, but if the measure making it possible to borrow money against estimated receipts passes, and the money is borrowed then it will become possible in the ordinary procedure to repay the money due that special account. It will be possible for this Administration by a round-about means to redeem the promises made by the dominant group in the other branch of the Legislature and which makes this round-about procedure necessary.

Now, Mr. Speaker, under any other circumstances I could not support this series of bills, but I know as a practical proposition that if you do not support this series of bills you would probably have to resurrect the resolution I introduced the other day, and instead of adjourning sine die you would have to adjourn until some date later in the fall in order to meet the problems of the State.

It is an imposition that we should be compelled to take this action; it is an imposition that the majority group which opposed the action in the last special session should find it necessary to do this not only in order to keep the finances of the State upon a level basis, but actually to preserve the honor of the Commonwealth. And so I say to the members on both sides of the House and particularly to the new members that we are bound by the situation that confronts us. This is the second time that the sponsor of these bills has drawn measures for which he has been responsible, appeared in the person of these measures with a pistol leveled at our legislative heads and said "You must do this."

Well, apparently we must, but it is essential that we understand and the people of this State understand why we are acting as I believe we should act in the present emergency.

Mr. WITKIN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I rise in opposition to this bill. The gentleman from Cambria, Mr. Andrews has correctly stated the definite promise that was made by the last Legislature. In connection with that promise I took quite a part, and one of the members of the majority party of this House properly, in April of this year, quoted from the Legislative Journal of last year wherein I said as follows: "The Legislature of Pennsylvania has never failed to fulfill their duties and have always maintained their honor and their integrity and I am sure that the next Legislature will be able to meet that situation."

I further stated, "I am not the next Legislature. The next Legislature will well know what this Legislature has said, and that this money must be paid by a specified time."

As for myself and my colleagues of the Republican party who were here at that session of the Legislature, I refuse to be a party to the breaking of that faith. I said then that I would stand for the repayment of this money at the specified time and I say now as I have always advocated on the floor of this House that where promises are made they must be kept and I say to my Republican colleagues that every man here who voted at the last session of the Legislature for the repayment of that money within a specified time ought to vote against this bill.

These bills should be defeated because when we procured funds from the various departments, as was stated on the floor of this House, and transfered those moneys to the General Fund, it was with the definite understanding and the distinct promise that we would pledge our honor and pledge our word to return those moneys at a particular time, and for those reasons I ask my Republican colleagues at least to vote against this bill.

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Speaker and ladies and gentlemen of the House, we have before us these bills. We do not want them any more than the other side wants them, but if we do not pass them now we will have to stay here until we carry out a program to pay that money back. It is true, as the gentleman said, that at the last session we promised that the money would be repaid; that the next Legislature would provide for it and would be able to meet the situation. It is also true that he on his side opposed every tax measure that we attempted to put through to pay this money back, so I ask you to vote for these bills so that we can balance the budget and go Home.

Mr. WITKIN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, the gentleman from Berks is not quite correct in his facts. While it is true that we on this side of the House opposed certain taxation, and while it may be true, as the gentleman from York, Mr. Cohen, stated yesterday, we ought not to deprive persons in need of money, nevertheless it is not true that this side of the House did not realize the problem back in March of this year. The gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Turner, on at least two or possibly more than two occasions spoke before this House, offered resolutions and warned you that we stood in a position of facing a crisis with respect to hospitals, old age pensions and and the blind. He implored you, and no man could do it more ably, to appoint a committee in order to delve into these matters so that we could find ways and means so as not to face the issue that we are facing today, facing a stone wall; a deaf ear was turned to his pleas for cooperation to solve these problems. The responsibility for failing to heed his warning was yours and not ours. You are the majority party in control of this House ,and when one of the minority leaders in this House on another occasion pointed out to you later that you had made a mistake and that you ought now to permit that committee to be appointed, you again turned a deaf ear, and you cannot now pass the responsibility over to us, but you must assume it yourselves, because you would not even let us have a committee in which you yourselves as the majority portion of that committee would permit the minority to find ways and means of solving this situation. So do not try to pass over to us which belongs on your shoulders.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I do not think that we are going to solve the problems by which we are confronted by saying that it is your fault or it is all of our fault. The problem we have here is to pass these bills. It is absolutely necessary that that be done and it is absolutely necessary that that be done in order, as I intimated earlier in the day, that the beneficiaries of the non-preferred funds of the Commonwealth may receive their annuities. However, I do not think it has been quite clearly presented to the members of this House that it might not be necessary to utilize these acts. There has been a bill in the House presented by our floor leader, Mr. Ruth, which will allow the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to borrow $50,000,000. This is a new expedient in the government in our Commonwealth and I am calling the attention of the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Witkin, and also the attention to the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Turner, because that is what he has been advocating, that apparently we have found the medium whereby the Commonwealth can borrow the money on anticipated taxes. At the present time we do not have the constitutionality of that particular bit of legislation determined. I is our plan immediately after the passage of that particular act, to get a ruling from the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. If that ruling is favorable, and the Commonwealth is able to borrow that $50,000,000 constitutionally, it will not be necessary to resort to these bills. These bills passing today will be laid upon the Governor's desk for a period of thirty days. During that time a decision of the Supreme Court will be had on that particular bill, and if it is construed favorably to the Constitution we will not have to resort to these measures of transfer. However, in case that bill is not declared constitutional it is absolutely necessary, as has been intimated and admitted by the parties on both sides of the House for the benefit of balancing the budget, for the benefit of our hospitals, of our aged and our blind and other beneficiaries of the Commonwealth that these transfers be effectuated.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, during the last campaign both parties pledged themselves to reduce the taxes on real estate. In my particular district, which is the city of Wilkes-Barre, I was notified by city council that they had placed in their budget the total abount of $180,000, I think, from these different funds which they expect to get back this year. Then when they found they would not get it back until December I understand they took steps to borrow the money, and I was positively informed that if we did not pay that money back, they must increase the millage on real estate, and they will have to do that all over the State,—I don't care where it is, if we do not pay this money back according to law, they will have to raise the millage on real estate. That is the reason I intend to vote "no" on this bill.

On the question recurring,

Shall the bill pass finally?

The majority required by the Constitution having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative.

Ordered, That the Clerk return the same to the Senate with information that the House has passed it without amendment.

REASONS FOR VOTE

Mr. McCREARY. I vote "no" on this bill because I proposed a bill, House Bill 1250, that would have paid this.

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, reasons for voting "aye" on McClure Senate Bills 1585, 1587, 1589, 1591, 1592, 1593, 1594, and 1595 are as follows:

As I previously stated on several occasions on the floor of this House, I am and always will be unalterably opposed to the transfer of moneys from the Firemans Fund, School Fund, Liquor Fund, Motor or Highway Fund to be used for any other purpose due to the fact these funds are trust funds and municipalities have prepared their budgets in anticipation of receiving these moneys. The above bills sponsored by Senator McClure, Republican from Delaware County extends the time of re-payment or return of transferred money taken from these above Special Funds by the last Republican Administration in their special session held in 1933. Instead of the Republican majority in the House and Senate passing adequate tax legislation to meet the emergency that existed in 1934, they "robbed" these special funds. I realize now that an emergency still exists and we, the Democratic majority in the House have fully met this emergency by passing an equitable tax program striking at the larger corporate interests heretofore protected.

I fully realize that I am not voting for further transfers, but just to extend the time of re-payment, and in order to prevent a chaotic condition in this Commonwealth and balance the budget of this State, and only for these reasons, I desire to be recorded as voting "Aye."

Agreeably to order,

The House proceeded to the third reading and consideration of House Bill No. 3051 (Senate Bill No. 1585), entitled:

An Act to amend section two of the act approved the nineteenth day of September one thousand nine hundred and thirty-four (Pamphlet Laws six) entitled "An act transferring money from the Liquid Fuels Tax Fund to the General Fund and providing for the subsequent return from the General Fund of the transferred money" by extending the time for the repayment of the amounts transferred

And said bill having been read at length the third time, considered and agreed to.

BILL ON FINAL PASSAGE

Mr .BLUMBERG. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up at this time House Bill No. 2880, Senate Bill No. 484, Printer's No. 427, on page 2 of today's calendar, bills on final passage postponed.

Agreeably to order,

The bill having been called up from the postponed calendar by Mr. BLUMBERG,

The House resumed the consideration on final passage of House Bill No. 2880 (Senate Bill No. 484), entitled:

An Act to amend section seven of the act approved the eighteenth day of April, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-nine (P. L. 549), entitled "An act to permit the use of voting machines for recording and computing the vote at all elections, including primaries, in any county, city, borough, or township of the Commonwealth, at the option of the electors thereof; prescribing regulations with reference to the adoption, requirements, examination, purchases, installation, preparation, custody and demonstration of use of voting machines; providing rules and regulations for the conduct of elections held with voting machines; prescribing the qualifications, number and duties of election officers in election districts in which voting machines may be used; placing duties upon county commissioners and the Secretary of the Commonwealth; providing for redivision of wards of cities and boroughs into election districts, and the consolidation of election districts; providing for the payment of expenses incident to the purchase and use of voting machines by the counties in which they are used; and providing penalties for violation of the provisions of this act," as amended; further regulating the construction of voting machines.

On the question recurring,

Shall the bill pass finally?

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I merely wish to call the attention of the members of the House to the bill that is now before you. It is an amendment to the voting machine act of 1929. The original act of 1929 contained a provision that the machines may be constructed so that each separate voting device could be locked during an election if they were not being used for the recording of a vote. The result of that section of the bill within the next few years showed that it led to fraud in various elections. The result was that in 1931 the bill was amended to remove that section entirely. This act now proposes to amend this voting machine act again inserting that provision, inserting that section that was in the original act, but changing it from "may" to "shall," so that it would read, that all machines constructed and sold after the passage of this amendment, if it is passed, shall be constructed so that on each line all of the empty voting devices shall be locked.

May I call your attention to the reason why fraud has occurred in the past? It is necessary in fixing the machine, if this amendment goes through, to provide so that each section on the machine can be locked. If I am not mistaken there was an election contest in Philadelphia,—I do not remember the name, but if I am not mistaken it was a congressional contest in which they were using a machine so fixed that one of the congressional candidates did not receive a single vote in his district. It was found that under his name it was locked so that no vote could be recorded for him, and I urge the members to consider carefully their vote on this bill. I for one, shall vote against it.

Mr. BLUMBERG. Mr. Speaker, might I reply to my friend from Luzerne and call to your attention the real necessity for this amendment to the voting machine act? As Mr. Mason of Luzerne has called to your attention, at the present time there is no provision in the voting machine law requiring that counters that have no candidates be locked, so that at the present time we have a series of buttons and no candidates appearing under those buttons. They have covers which can be pulled down as though you were voting when you are in fact not voting.

Now, the contest to which my friend refers involves a different set of circumstances. What occurred was that a certain candidate received no votes in that particular precinct because of the failure to lock the counters, and a certain number was handed out as the designation of that particular candidate. That number was voted by the voters of that district, and the result was that it registered blank so that this candidate got no votes.

Now, the effects of this amendment is to effectively lock all counters that have no candidates, so that when a voter goes into the machine, he can only use those counters which have the names of some candidates beneath them. Now, the fraud acts the other way; if you don't lock these counters tricks can be played. For instance you can take the name plate of a candidate under column 19-A and move that name plate under column 20-A, which has no candidate, and the voter pulls down 20-A and 20-A is in effect a blank space and 19-A has no votes registered on it. This amendment is for the purpose of preventing such fraud or preventing the use of the machines in this manner. It does not apply to any voting machine in the state now in use, and goes further and does not apply to any voting machine now contracted for and not delivered, so that in the interest of clean elections, clean, honest elections, this amendment has been proposed on that basis and on that basis alone. I ask your support for this bill.

On the question recurring,

Shall the bill pass finally?

On the question.

Will the House concur in the amendments made by the Senate?

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the amendments made by the Senate.

On the question,

Will the House agree on the motion?

Mr. WITKIN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House. the amendments to this bill inserted by the Senate, I would ask my colleagues to vote against as I am opposed to the principal of taxation where the taxes are divided in the matter of collection. If we have a five mill personal property tax, having four mills collected in one manner and one mill collected by the state, that in my opinion is poor legislation. The one mill collection by the state would be cumbersome and expensive in the manner of collection. If we must raise the tax from four mills to five mills, the manner of collection should remain as it now is, and not be divided so that business people will not have to make one return to the state and one return to the county. I believe it is bad in principal, and I, herefore, ask the members of the House and particularly my Republican colleagues to vote against these amendments.

Mr. SPROUL. Mr. Speaker, is it in order at this time to vote on all the amendments except the one that the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Witkin, mentioned about which there is controversy?

The SPEAKER. There has been no request made so far that the question be divided.

Agreeably to the provisions of the Constitution the yeas and nays were taken and were as follows, viz:

BILL ON THIRD READING

Mr. WESTRICK. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up at this time House Bill No. 3060, Senate Bill No. 1510, Printer's No. 671 on page 13 of today's calendar, bills on third reading.

Agreeably to order,

The House proceeded to the third reading and consideration of House Bill No. 3060 (Senate Bill No. 1510), entitled:

An Act to safeguard human health and life by providing for the issuance of permits to and regulation of persons and entities selling milk and milk products conferring powers and imposing duties on the Secretary of Health the Advisory Health Board and otherwise providing for the administration of the act and imposing penalties.

On the question,

Will the House agree to the bill on third reading

It was agreed to.

On the question,

Shall the bill pass finally?

Mr. WESTRICK. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, this bill is the same proposition that was before us several months ago,—April first, to be exact, known as House Bill No. 178. At that time it passed this House by a vote of one hundred ninety-eight to four. Then it went over to the Senate and died there in Committee. A few weeks ago that bill was revived and brought out of the Committee on Agriculture on the part of the Senate, and we are here now to do our part to make this a law.

A few days ago there was placed upon your desks a supposed brief over the signature of John H. Light in which he protests the passage of Senate Bill No. 1510.

I have been a member of the Grange for twenty-eight years and up to this time I have not once been contacted by him, this man Light, who is supposed to be a Grange leader. Up to the present time the members of our Committee on Agriculture on this side of the House have not been contacted by this supposed Grange leader, and as far as I can find out very few of the members on the Republican side have been contacted. At this late hour my deduction is that such objection is not one of sincerity. In the face of his objections many members of our Committee have been receiving many requests from local granges all over the state requesting that this bill be put over and enacted into law.

This is primarily a consumers' bill because it is a gold bond, a guarantee of wholesome milk products, produced under certified sanitary conditions. It is endorsed by the medical and health authorities of our boroughs and cities.

This is also a producers' Bill, since it eliminates from business the unscrupulous, chiseling producers of unwholesome and filthy milk. It further prevents our neighboring states from dumping into our state inferior, cheap, uninspected cream and ice cream mixture.

The farmers of the state as well as the members of my committee ask your hearty support of this proposal so that it may be enacted into law. By your votes tonight we shall decide whether or not we want sanitary milk products. May we have your help to strengthen this farm industry?

On the question recurring,

Shall the bill pass finally?

Agreeably to the provisions of the Constitution, the yeas and nays were taken and were as follows, viz:

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, this is the bill which we thought was brought before us a while ago, the one providing for a Constitutional Convention. I voted for House Bill No. 147 when it passed through the House. I am in favor of holding a Constitutional Convention, but I am certainly opposed to the amendments which the Senate has forced into this measure.

As it passed through the House, it provided for three delegates from each of the thirty-four congressional districts with the provision that each person should vote for two, which meant that we would have minority representation from each district. It also provided for twenty-seven state wide delegates for which each elector would vote for two, providing for minority representation, but in the form in which it now comes to us, it provides for no minority representation by districts. There is a chance in the state wide delegates, but it is so slight for the small groups that it denies practically all minority prepresentation. It means that the Constitutional Convention, which will have the duty of reviewing our fundamental law for the first time in sixty years, will be made up entirely or nearly entirely of the majority party.

I feel that that is not a fair proposition. It should have been put in such form that we would have at least a chance for minority representation in the various districts. For that reason I am voting "no."

On the question recurring,

Will the House adopt the report of the Committee of Conference?

SENATE MESSAGE

HOUSE BILL CONCURRED IN BY SENATE

HOUSE BILL No. 1876.

An Act to amend section one thousand two hundred and nine of the act approved the ninth day of April one thousand nine hundred and twenty-nine, (P. L. 343), entitled "An act relating to the finances of the State government; providing for the settlement, assessment, collection, and lien of taxes, bonus, and all other accounts due the Commonwealth, the collection and recovery of fees and other money or property due or belonging to the Commonwealth, or any agency thereof, including escheated property and the proceeds of its sale, the custody and disbursement or other disposition of funds and securities belonging to or in the possession of the Commonwealth, and the settlement of claims against the Commonwealth, the resettlement of accounts and appeals to the courts, refunds of moneys erroneously paid to the Commonwealth, auditing the accounts of the Commonwealth, and all agencies thereof, of all public officers collecting moneys payable to the Commonwealth, or any agency thereof, and all receipts of appropriations from the Commonwealth and imposing penalties; affecting every department, board, commission, and officer of the State government, every political subdivision of the State, and certain officers of such subdivisions, every person, association, and corporation required to pay, assess, or collect taxes, or to make returns or reports under the laws imposing taxes for State purposes, or to pay license fees or other moneys to the Commonwealth, or any agency thereof, every State depository and every debtor or creditor of the Commonwealth," as amended, providing that in certain cases where political subdivisions of the Commonwealth are delinquent in paying bills to the Department of Revenue because of unavoidable financial difficulties, the interest charges shall be stricken off.

With the information that the Senate has passed the same without amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Speaker now calls to the Chair the Chief Clerk.

The CHIEF CLERK (William P. Gallagher) in the Chair.

THANKS EXTENDED TO THE SPEAKER

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, when we came here on the first day of January, we elected a man as Speaker who has had one of the most trying sessions we have had in this House for many years. I am very sure we all agreed that he did his work fairly, allowing everyone to be heard who desired to be heard. His decisions were fair for each one, and I wish to offer the following resolution to honor the man who has so ably conducted this session, the Honorable Wilson G. Sarig.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

The fair and impartial manner in which the business of this House was conducted during this session has fully justified the action of this House in the selection of its Speaker. The early training he received along the banks of the Ontelaunee moulded the man who so ably led this House through a troublesome period, conspicuous for its divergence of views among Members. At the close of the Session, with partisan battles ended, nothing can be more fitting than to do honor to him who in presiding over this House, silenced no rightful protest and denied no one a voice raised in the cause of justice; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Members of this House extend their collective and individual thanks to their Speaker, the Honorable Wilson G. Sarig, for the able manner in which he presided over the Sessions of this House, and for the fair and impartial manner in which he conducted its business and recognized the rights of individual Members; and be it further Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon the Journal of this House and that a copy thereof be presented to the Honorable Wilson G. Sarig.

On the question,

Will the House adopt the resolution?

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, it is with a feeling of pleasure that I arise at this time to make a few remarks in connection with this resolution. Since we have met here in this session, we have engaged in many debates. As members we have quarreled among each other on the floor of the House. We have taken opposite viewpoints and we have fought from different sides of the House, but in all of those arguments, in all of those quarrels, I can say, I think for each and every member of the House, that the Speaker has displayed the art of presiding to the highest degree. In every one of his rulings, he has been fair and impartial, as has been stated in the resolution.

He has indeed shown himself to be just like a father to every one of us and I am sure that whatever sense of satisfaction we may have in knowing that this session is now drawing to a close; whatever feeling or relief we may have that we are to end our duties here; whatever sense of satisfaction we may have in the knowledge that we have all tried to do our best in following the dictates of our conscience, the satisfaction and relief is tinged with a little bit of sorrow in the knowledge that we must say goodbye to the Speaker.

Mr. Chief Clerk, it is with a special thrill of pleasure that I rise to second the resolution offered by the gentleman from Berks, Reverend Ruth.

Mr. WITKIN. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, when I first came to the Legislature in nineteen hundred and twenty-five, Wilson G. Sarig was the leader of a handful of Democrats who were then the minority party. As the years went by that handful grew, and the Democratic Party became the majority party of this House.

It did not take me or any of the members of the Legislature who came here long to recognize in the briefest space of time that the leader of the minority party during the various sessions from nineteen twenty-five down to and including the last session, was a man of integrity, a man of honesty, a man of straight forwardness and one who led his party will and to the best of his ability. When there was discussion as to who was to be elected by the Democratic Party to be the Speaker of the House of Representatives at this session, I dare say there was not a single Republican who know Wilson G. Sarig, who knew his accomplishments and who knew the manner in which he conducted himself, that did not hope that he would be the candidate who would be selected by the majority party of this House.

He was selected and became the Speaker of this House. He has worked assiduously and with a great deal of zeal and vigor. He has had a very difficult session over which to preside. The fact that the session lasted as long as it did was no fault of his. The length of the session was due not to the fact of his being lax or tardy but rather to the troublous times and the many factors with which he had to contend. He graced the presiding Chair with dignity and decorum. He endeavored to serve the party that nominated him, and he endeavored to serve the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to the best of his ability, and I, on behalf of myself and every one of the Republican members of the House, have the highest regard and the highest respect for any man in any office who does the job the best way he knows how and discharges it to the best of his ability.

I feel that I would be remiss if I did not, accompanying the statements concerning the Speaker, mention the fact that he brought with him his delightful and charming daughter, who took care of, in the best possible manner, the duties that were assigned to her and who acted with courtesy toward every member of the House and helped him to carry on the work that he had to do.

I want to say to Wilson G. Sarig on behalf of the minority membership of this House that we have the highest confidence in his honesty, in his integrity of purpose, and as be brings down the final gavel, I know that we will all say that he has done his work well and with credit to himself, to his party and to the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and if I may quote from the words of the late John S. Patterson, one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, now departed, by saying to Wilson G. Sarig, that we wish to him and to his family for the balance of his years that the darkest shadow that may ever cross his path or that of anyone beloved by him be that of a "dancing sunbeam."

Mr. SHEPARD. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, I am delighted to have the opportunity of standing here and raising my voice in praise of the fairness, the squareness and the very fine reception that has been accorded the members of this House of every group by the Speaker of this Assembly.

During the short time that it has been my privilege to inflict my presence upon the other persons whi inhabit this globe I have traveled a great deal from the rocky coast of Maine to the Golden Gates of California, and from the Great Lakes on the north to the wide open spaces of Texas, and I have been privileged to serve here in this House, but I want to say that in all of my experience and in all of my stay in the legislative halls, that Wilson G. Sarig has been the best Speaker under whom I have ever served.

There have been times, of course, when the debate has been quite hot and tense, and there have been times when some of us seemed to have been inebriated by the enthusiasm of our own verbosity, and yet despite all of that the Speaker has remained calm and fair and just in all of his dealings, and I hope that when the Democratic majority shall have grown larger and larger, that we shall still have as the presiding genius of this body, Wilson G. Sarig.

I add my word of praise and appreciation to the fine genius that he has exercised in presiding over this session of this Assembly.

Mr. McDEVITT. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, last fall at the general election both parties began to decide who they would nominate for Speaker. It was immediately apparent that in each party there was one outstanding man. In the Republican party we decided upon Mr. Patrick Conner, the gentleman from Philadelphia. Mr. Conner has been a member of this House since nineteen eleven, and the oldest Republican member in the House from the point of service, and next to the gentleman from Elk, Mr. Flynn, the oldest member of the House in the point of service.

He is a man whom we all love and respect, and I feel that if we had had a Republican majority in this House, that Mr. Connor would have been a very fine man to fill that position.

At the same time the Democrats chose Mr. Sarig. I inquired as to just what type of man Mr. Sarig was. I was informed that for years he had been the leader of the Democratic minority; that at all times in his dealings with the majority party as well as the party led by the gentleman from Cambria, Mr. Andrews and the party led by the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Hoopes, he had been fair and square.

I want to say to Mr. Sarig that as a Republican member of the House, I believe that he has conducted himself in the Speakership at all times as a gentleman. I have enjoyed my service in the House and I believe all of the Republicans have under his guidance as Speaker, and I want to say that if we must have a Democrat as Speaker, I wish him every success.

The CHIEF CLERK. I will now call on that sterling independent Democrat from Cambria, Mr. Andrews.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chief Clerk, you might have made it 18 karat instead of sterling.

Ole and Olga had been keeping company for fifteen years. Ole never had the courage to propose. But finally one evening he did propose. Ole was sitting on one end of the sofa and Olga was sitting at the other. They were old fashioned people. After the proposal nothing was said for some time. Finally Olga said, "Ole, why don't you say something?" Ole says, "I tank I bane talk too damn much already."

I think probably I have talked too much already, and were there are any other field than the resolution I would run. It has been my privilege to serve under two Speakers. It has been my privilege to be a friend of both. At the beginning of this session it was my privilege to second the nomination of Wilson G. Sarig as Speaker of this House, and you remember that at that time, speaking on my own behalf as the leader of my own party, and on behalf of my affiliate, the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Ruth, I felt confident in selecting Mr. Sarig, that he would be impartial and that he would be infinitely patient with an untrained membership.

He has been impartial, he has been infinitely patient, he has been kindly. The new members have found him a parliamentary father. He has been honest; he has done a wonderful job under great difficulties. The new members probably do not realize how much fell upon his shoulders because some of us were not able exactly to carry our own parliamentary load.

We all realize the extent, I think, but we do not know how to do some particular thing, the Chair controls and he can save us. In the two Legislatures in which I have served I can say that in neither Legislature has either Speaker ever thrown me because I did not know what to do; both Speakers have always saved me. And so it gives me infinite pleasure to second the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Ruth.

The CHIEF CLERK. I will now call on the 18 karat Republican from Delaware County, Mr. Turner.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, as I arise here tonight, I am grateful for one thing, the calm and the quiet of the House, the peace after the storm, which allows me an opportunity to say something without raising my voice to the degree that I expect it to be heard over in the Senate.

I rise with a great deal of trepidation after these speeches by the leaders and by those who have been dubbed by the newspaper correspondents as orators. I rise with a great deal of fear in attempting to do anything with the floral bouquets that have been laid at the feet of the Speaker. I feel that anything I might say or add in a complimentary way would be like casting perfume on a honeysuckle vine.

There have been so many flowers piled up this evening in these brief speeches that I feel that those words which I might say would be like casting dandelions among these beautiful floral tributes, but as an humble member of the Republican ranks and one of those inconspicuous members of the House, I feel that perhaps I should say something in behalf of this man.

I delved into his history a little bit in an endeavor to find out something of his life, and an intimate friend told me this story. They said that shortly after he was born he was lying in his cradle one night and his father and mother were sitting along side of it, one on each side, looking at their new child. The mother as she sat there fondly looking at the man who is now Speaker, envisioned that boy tramping off at six years of age to public school; and then she envisioned him in high school and going to college and becoming a teacher, and then getting into politics and going to the Legislature and rising to the office of Speaker of the House of Representatives in this great Commonwealth.

As she sat there with this great vision before her, longing and thinking of this vision of the future, she looked at her husband and said "John what are you thinking about?" And he said "I was just wondering how the hell they could make such cradles for two dollars and a half."

Now, you may feel perhaps that that is just an idle story, but after all the characteristics of those parents we find moulded into the son.

When I came here into the House, also in 1925, the Speaker, as has been said, was the leader of a small flock. I became a great admirer of this man because of his independence, because of his willingness to take the floor and to fight for those things which he believed to be right, whether they came from the Democratic side or whether they came from the Republican side and I shall always be grateful to you, Mr. Speaker, for the fact that when we put up that battle in nineteen thirty-three to try to bring about a balanced economy in the state government, that notwithstanding the fact that the large majority of his party were against the measures, because the Speaker had been a member of the sub-committee that brought forth the legislation that he was unwilling and refused to go back on that committee, and stood like a rock and voted for it.

I know of no higher tribute that I could pay, I know of no words that could better express the real character of the man, his real meaning here as a legislator, than those which I have just related.

I have heard it said by two of the former Speakers that he was the father of the group, and I am grateful for the fact that if he was the father of the group when I came here, as I recall now it was only twenty, now it seems to be one hundred and seventeen.

I feel like that speech that Shakespeare recounts over Caesar. I will have to paraphrase: "I come here not only to praise Caesar but to bury him." I want to say to the Speaker that I know when he goes back to his own district the people will return him, no matter who the candidate is against him, they will return him to the House. Therefore, we will not say with Mr. Eberharter goodbye but au revoir.

When we come back in nineteen thirty-six, Mr. Speaker, with a Republican majority in the House, we will welcome you back here on the floor and we will welcome you as a member who we know will contribute to the happiness and the prosperity of the people as Pennsylvania as we know you have endeavored honestly and sincerely in the trying times during which you have been Speaker.

The CHIEF CLERK. I will now call on the man from the land of laurels and high mountains, the gentleman from Monroe, Mr. Achterman.

Mr. ACHTERMAN. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, I desire only to add a few brief remarks to those of the gentlemen who have preceded me.

One of the gentleman called attention to the fatherly qualities of our Speaker, but I as a new member of the House, as a freshman, let us say, desire to call attention to our Speaker, the teacher. He found us new members very apt pupils in one respect, that is to aid the older members in actually making these halls, his school-house, a bedlam, but the words of praise or those words in which he used tact in ignoring our errors, and above all, the diplomatic manner in which he guided us over the rough spots, making us feel at home, making us believe really that we were legislators until, in fact, we did finally understand the workings of this House, and it is with that thought in mind that I rise for the purpose of adding my word of praise to the apt manner in which the Speaker not only guided us but made it possible to carry on.

The CHIEF CLERK. I will now call on the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Hoopes.

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, I appreciate your applause in advance. It is always safer to get it first. Perhaps after I am through you will not feel like applauding.

It is peculiarly fitting that the resolution honoring the Speaker of this House should be offered by a member from Berks County, and that this comment on that resolution and endorsement thereof should come from another member from Berks County.

It gives me great pleasure to congratulate the members of this House upon the wisdom which they have shown in selecting the leadership in this House. Listening to the story told by the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Turner, I couldn't help but think that there was one slight error, which perhaps the gentleman from Delaware could not help, and I am sorry that I cannot remedy,—I think the story would have been truer to text if the quotation from the father of the Speaker had been given in the original Berks county Dutch. I am sorry that I cannot offer you the translation. Perhaps later the Speaker will gratify us by giving it to us in the original, because I am sure it lost considerable of its savor in the translation.

The gentleman from Allegheny has referred to the Speaker as a father. During the times when he was verbally spanking the members of the House, he certainly reminded me of a father and he also reminded us of a father in the kindly manner in which he did it, and I am very sure we all appreciated it.

The thing I feel that most of us did not realize is the physical burden which the Speaker entails to the holder of that office. To stand up there day after day and say "also the following" or "the House agrees to the bill" or whatever the formality may be and to keep it up time after time and hour after hour and at the same time to put up with the bedlam, and pandemonium and lack of attention on the part of the members and preserve an even temper is something that is worthy of the highest praise.

When I first came to this House in 1931, as a new member with absolutely no knowledge of the conduct of its proceedings, I admit that I did not expect to receive any recognition. I expected to be ridden over roughshod. I expected that when I tried to speak that I would be shouted down and that the Chair would pay no attention to my attempts to get the floor. I am glad to be able to say that after having served under three Speakers, I have found that I was utterly and entirely mistaken, that I have been able to get the floor at anytime I desired it, and I have been given the opportunity of fully expressing the opinions of the small minority which I represent upon the questions before this House. That is true of the Speaker who presided at the first session that I was here, Mr. Goodnough, who is now the Chairman of the Public Service Commission and the Speaker who presided at the session of 1933, who is now sitting upon the floor of this House, the Honorable Grover C. Talbot. And the present Speaker has fully carried out in that regard the example of his predecessors, and I have never had any difficulty in obtaining recognition and expressing my opinion upon this floor, and I feel that that is the highest tribute that I as the representative of the smaller minority of this House can say to the Speaker. He could easily have over-ridden me, although I have a voice, as the gentleman from Delaware said awhile ago, that could be heard over in the Senate, if necessary. Nevertheless I know that if the Speaker chose to over-ride the small minority, it could be done, and that, no doubt, he would be upheld by the House, but the Speaker did not do that, and it is to his credit and honor that he did not do so and that this body has been a deliberative body and that the viewpoints of all minorities have had the opportunity of expression.

It is, therefore, with the keenest pleasure on behalf of the socialist minority in this House, I rise to second the resolution in honor of my fellow Berks Countian, the Speaker, the Honorable Wilson G. Sarig.

On the question recurring,
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

The SPEAKER. Ladies and gentlemen of the House I have been deeply impressed with the many kind compliments which have been paid me. I am sorry that I do not have the voice to make a fitting reply.

If I may indulge in a little talk in a light vein, the proceedings that have been taking place remind me of a story that was told down in Berks County. As I listened to all the eulogies, I was not exactly sure whether I was myself or who I was. The story as told is this: There was a man living down in Berks County who had never been very kind to his family; he had never been very kind to his wife; he had never been very kind to his neighbors, but he was a good church member and paid well in the church. So, when he was buried, the minister felt called upon to pay him some very fine eulogies. While all this was going on the wife sat there under her veil, and she shook her head. She couldn't believe when the minister said what a kind and devoted husband he had been. The daughter couldn't believe when he told what a kind father he had been, and all the neighbors sat there and shook their heads when the minister was telling them what a kind neighbor he had been. Finally the widow couldn't stand it any longer, and she leaned over to her daughter, who was also under her veil and she said, "Mary, sneak up to the coffin and see whether that is really your father."

I am just a little bit at a loss to know whether I really am the fellow that deserves all these fine compliments.

One of the humorous things that occurred to me during the session was this, many times I was called upon to reprimand in a sense, or at least to call the attention of the members to their conduct when I myself had been guilty of the same conduct for sixteen years.

I want to state that I tried, speaking in a light vien, to conduct the Speaker's office on a very high moral plane, even higher than that which was described by the Reverend Ruth last night. You remember the floor leader last night in his address told about a fellow who brought a very pretty girl to his home. He wanted to marry her, and the Reverend said, "Bring her around." The Speaker has never, although he has seen members of the House strolling around the streets of Harrisburg with pretty girls and pretty women, asked any of them to bring them around.

Speaking seriously, there is one thing in connection with my selection as Speaker in which I have always taken pride. It is true that I was the candidate of the minority five times before I was selected; and frankly, I had never expected when I was the candidate for five times, that I would get within a thousand miles of the Speakership, but as fate had it I landed here, and the thought I want to leave with you is this: Coming from a poor family, having served as a hired boy on the farm from ten to seventeen, I feel that my elevation to the Speakership has at least stressed the fact that in Pennsylvania the door of opportunity is still open to the poor man.

If I may indulge in some reflections of my experience here in the House as Speaker, there is one suggestion that I would offer to future Speakers, if it is possible to work it out, and it is this: I have felt a number of times that it wasn't exactly fair that the Speaker should be called upon to preserve order from the rostrum. No Judge would think for a moment of being compelled to preserve order in the court room from his bench, and I feel that there should be some system evolved sooner or later so that the control of the House could be arranged other than by the Speaker.

I remember one of my former ministers telling me that everytime he had to talk about money from the pulpit it took the edge off his sermon, and I feel that the Speaker in being compelled to preserve order and decorum from the rostrum has his attention detracted from the work which he is called upon to do.

Naturally I appreciate the many compliments and the many roses that have been thrown at my feet. During the years that I have been here I have looked upon the Legislature as a kind of mirror, as a kind of screen in which is reflected the entire life of Pennsylvania. If you stop to think what Pennsylvania means, you can readily understand the procedure in this House and the conflicting ideas and ideals. Pennsylvania is really a small empire, composed of more than ten million people, and probably of thirty-five or thirty-seven nationalities, many religions, races and creeds, varied industries, mining agriculture, railroading and what not, and in this Hall is reflected every one of those cross currents in the life of Pennsylvania. Here are many groups with a social background that goes back into Europe for a thousand or two or three thousand years. All come here, all have a right to be heard, and there is represented here every idea and every ideal in this great Commonwealth, reflected in the discussions upon the various issues before this body. That to my mind represents true democracy. You are only the mouthpiece, you are only the spokesmen for the various elements that exist in this Commonwealth, from the Delaware river to the Ohio state line and from the New York state line to the Maryland state line. If you look out over the state, you will find that these varied opinions, these varied discussions that are carried on here are all reflected back home in your districts. They are all there if you look for them, and you only reflect them in the great common picture, in the great "melting pot," as we may call it, which is the Pennsylvania Legislature, where these ideas and ideals come to clash, and where in a peaceful democratic way these issues are ironed out.

I sometimes think the greatest compliment that I can pay this House and to the Houses before is the fact that after the session is over, after the fights are over—and I have always loved a good fight—I think it brings out the best that is in the members when they engage in these contests and these debates, after it is all over, when every idea and every ideal has been brought out on the floor, when this clash of opinions and this clash of ideas is over, when the smoke has cleared away—and the last day has come, there is always a feeling of good fellowship, there is always that kindly humon touch which says, "I am sad. I feel sad to say goodbye to my fellow members." If I may be permitted to compare this House to a school, I feel the same way as I do on the last day of school every session. I feel that there has grown up between me and every member a certain line of contact, a certain kindly feeling which makes it more or less sad for all of us to say goodbye and to go back to our homes. And after all, members of the House, that is the greatness of democracy, that we can fight, that we can bring together these various ideas and ideals and then go back to our homes with nothing but the kindest human feeling in our hearts, and that is the feeling that I hold towards the every member of this House tonight.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I have listened to the fine compliments and the fine tributes that have been paid to me. No doubt some of them were overdrawn, but I do say that I have enjoyed the session and that I have tried at all times—I may not have succeeded, but I have tried at all times to be fair and to give every member of this House a square deal in the discussion of the various questions before it, and it is with that consolation and that thought I am leaving the rostrum at the end of the session, feeling that I have tried to do my duty, and that is all that anybody can do.

I want to thank you sincerely for the compliments you have paid me, and if you ever come into my native town or my native section, I will welcome each and every one of you, and invite you to stop at my house for a kindly handshake and a kindly greeting. I thank you.

The SPEAKER (Wilson G. Sarig) in the Chair.

THANKS EXTENDED TO THE CHIEF CLERK

The SPEAKER. The Chair now recognizes the gentleman, from York, Mr. Cohen.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, last November, with the advent of the Democratic victory, the Democratic Party had imposed upon it added duties and responsibilities. We were confronted with the necessity of selecting a man who could operate the mechanics of the General Assembly. It had been more than a half a century since the Democratic Party had been in control of the House of Representatives. It was only too fortunate that the Democratic Party was able to fine a man with the capabilities as the Honorable Chief Clerk of this House.

In addition to the responsibilities that are normally placed upon the Chief Clerk in a time of financial distress, we felt it would be expedient to abolish the office of Resident Clerk, and in so doing we imposed upon the honorable gentleman the added duties and responsibilities of the office of Resident Clerk. How well he has acquitted himself in the performance of those duties is only too well known, to the members of this House. With a comparatively new group of employees, with a greatly curtailed personnel he has found time to administer to our wants and to our desires.

As the session became long and drawn out, as our pay checks stopped coming, as the difficulties of the session became more pronounced, the Honorable Gentleman resorted to the very, very fine expedient of advancing our travelling checks before they were due. To those who know the workings of this House, to those who know the responsibilities that are imposed upon the Chief Clerk, to those who know the obligations of his office, I feel that this House should join in a tremendous seconding of the resolution which I have the honor to present.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Members of the House of Representatives be extended to William P. Gallagher, Chief Clerk, for his many acts of kindness to Members, for the fair, impartial and efficient manner in which he conducted the affairs of his office, and especially for his help in times of distress.

On the question,

Will the House adopt the resolution?

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, in rising as a member of the minority sector of this legislative battlefield, I regret that my rather extemporaneous remarks cannot be delivered in an oratorical manner, but perhaps if I recall some of the kindly deeds which William P. Gallagher has done in his capacity as Chief Clerk for the members of the House, he will better realize why we are saying to him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant of this Legislature for the things you have done during the present session."

First of all, I wish to state that William P. Gallagher comes from the same county that I do, born in the little Borough of Plymouth, with its slogan, "Shawnee against the world." The county of Luzerne is proud of Mr. Gallagher for the success that he has so honestly and faithfully attained.

Let me recall to the members of the House the unfailing courtesy that has been shown by the Chief Clerk and his staff during the six months of this session.

Let me recall likewise to the members of the House the fact that the door of the Chief Clerk's office was always open and that the word "welcome" was always upon the doormat for each and every member regardless of his political faction.

Let me likewise recall the numerous requests that have been made individually of the chief clerk, and the willingness with which he has carried out those requests, whether they have been small or whether they have been burdensome.

Particularly let me recall to the members of the House a few pertinent facts that we really appreciated more than the Chief Clerk really realizes, the fact that on the first day of each and every month those salary checks were ready for each and every member regardless of whether the session was on or whether it fell later in the week.

The fact is, as the gentleman from York has already stated, that when the pocketbooks of the members became empty, it was William P. Gallagher who thought of the plan of securing a portion of our travelling allowance, so that the members would be able to meet the expense of coming to Harrisburg. It was William P. Gallagher who several hours ago had the kindness, the courtesy and the consideration to offer to the members of the House a trout supper as a welcome interlude to this last week's grind. Above all, William P. Gallagher has been fair in his conscientious recording of each and every vote that has been called during this session.

I hope and I am certain that every member will unanimously and enthusiastically endorse the resolution submitted by the gentleman from York, Mr. Cohen, and in so doing, show to the Chief Clerk of this House that we as members do appreciate his kindness and we do appreciate his courtesy and we say that no Chief Clerk in the past nor any Chief Clerk in the future can be any better and do as much for the members as Mr. William P. Gallagher has done.

On the question recurring,

Will the House adopt the resolution?

It was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

The SPEAKER. The Chair now takes the pleasure of presenting to the members of the House the Chief Clerk, William P. Gallagher.

Mr. WILLIAM P. GALLAGHER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House. I did not know I would be called upon again after injecting myself into the proceedings of the House as temporary presiding officer less than a half hour ago. I certainly do appreciate this resolution and the kind things said about me by the gentleman from York, Mr. Cohen, as well as the laudable words from my neighbor the gentleman from Luzerne, Mr. Mason.

During the session we endeavored to do whatever we could, particularly when we knew the session was going to be a long one, to relieve the tension and strain on the members. Of course, I served as Chief Clerk of the Senate for ten years, and I knew something about the work, but as Mr. Cohen pointed out, our list of employes was materially cut down; in fact we have but 78 employes as compared with 99 employes in the Senate, with a membership in the House of four and a fraction times more than the Senate. This gives you an idea of how difficult the work has been, and in that connection I wish to state that if it had not been for the hard, efficient work done by the men under the Chief Clerk, as well as the cooperation of the members, it is more than likely that we would not have achieved as many good results as we now are able to point to.

Again I thank the members for this fine expression of friendship and kindness. I will say to you that the latch string of the Chief Clerk's Office will always be out to you. If you want anything, write, telephone, telegraph or send any kind of message, or come in person, and we will do our utmost to take care of your wants.

THANKS EXTENDED TO THE CHIEF CLERK FOR DINNER

Mr. VanSICKLE. Mr. Speaker, although the subject matter of this resolution has been spoken about, I feel that it should be introduced. It is sponsored as well by Mr. Coakley, Mr. Simon, and that large public benefactor and sterling statesman from Delaware, Elwood Jackson Turner.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Whereas, There was introduced in the House of Representatives, On May 30, 1935, Act No. 5001, Printer's No. 187654, by Mr. Innerman, entitled 'An Act—To persuade, induce, and invite members of the General Assembly to dine on fish et cetera at late Thursday and early Friday hour, and

Whereas, This "Last Bill of the Session" was accepted with alacrity by the two hundred and eight members of the House, and the employes, and

Whereas, The full purpose of said bill was carried out to the great enjoyment and pleasure of all members and employes aforesaid, and

Whereas, It is a known fact that the Chief Clerk of the House, William P. Galagher was the lobbyist responsible for the successful passage of this Act, therefore

Be It Resolved, That the Memers of the House of Representatives, Employes, and Friends, who were his guests do hereby extend their grateful appreciation for a very pleasant and enjoyable evening of food, fun, and laughter between Democrats and Republicans—sans dictaphones.

On the question,

Will the House adopt the resolution?

It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED CHAPLAINS

Mr. NAGEL. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, when the majority side of this House assembled at the beginning of the year, they had in mind one thing, and that was the taxpayer, wherein they might save in the operations of this government. They set about trying to discover ways whereby they might eliminate the things that were costly and yet not reduce the efficiency of this great Commonwealth. Among the many things that were considered was the office of Chaplain in this House, and in order to reduce the expenses of the State, the Honorable Marshall Shepard and the Honorable Frank W. Ruth patriotically stepped forward and volunteered their services free of charge.

These Reverend gentlemen performed their duties faithfully and efficiently, and might we not say that all the good we have accomplished in this session might be due in large measure to their imploring the Divine Being for guidance, direction, and wisdom in our deliberations? And might it not also be said that had they not offered these prayers and implorings that our session might have been a failure, therefore, that this House may find expression of its appreciation I offer this resolution.

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That this House extend to the gentleman from Berks, the Honorable Frank W. Ruth, and the gentleman from Philadelphia, the Honorable Marshall L. Shepard, its deep sense of appreciation of their services as Chaplain of the House.

On the question,

Will the House adopt the resolution?

It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED DIRECTOR LEGISLATIVE REFERENCE BUREAU

Mr. VanSICKLE. Mr. Speaker, there is one man connected with the Legislature who has burned the midnight oil, and he has burned the midnight oil due to the almost unlimited demands upon his time and ability. He has faithfully and willingly and unfailingly in every respect tried to meet our demands, to guide us and to a great extent has been responsible for the successful passage of many acts. I refer to the Honorable John H. Fertig, the Director of the Legislative Reference Bureau, and his employees, and I therefore present the following resolution.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

The Legislative Reference Bureau prepared for introduction during this Session at the request of Members and departments, thirty-eight hundred and thirty-five bills and resolutions, a number greater by at least one-half than that prepared at any previous session.

This large number of requests placed upon the Director and the members of the staff of the Bureau a tremendous amount of work which necessitated long hours of thought and study and endless tedious labor.

The assistance of the Director was of particular value to the members in the matter of advice upon bills requested and those already presented, and always was he found most willing, courteous and obliging in helping those who sought the benefit of his advice.

As a result of the efforts of the Bureau, the work of the Members of this House has been made easier, their cares have been lessened, and mistakes have been righted; therefore be it

Resolved, That the House, realizing fully the indefatigable work performed and the long hours of service contributed by him, as well as the value of his advice upon all matters submited to him, extends to Honorable John H. Fertig, the Director of the Legislative Reference Bureau, its thanks for, and appreciation of, the valuable assistance rendered by him during the present Session; and be it

Resolved, That the thanks and appreciation of the House is also extended to the other members of the staff of this Bureau for their aid and assistance during the Session; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded by the Chief Clerk of the House to the Director of the Legislative Reference Bureau.

On the question,
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES OF HOUSE

Mr. LONGAKER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, for the past hour more or less the experienced members of the House have been paying tribute to those of our number who have been selected to fill high office, high places, places of great trust and importance.

It is therefore rather fitting that I, as one of the newer and less experienced and humble members, should at this time rise to offer a resolution concerning the feeling that we members of the House, have for those who occupy less high positions namely the officers and other employes of the House. As new members of the House especially these officers and employes have aided us in learning the ropes and in learning our way about and in providing us with the facilities that we must have for those features of the Legislature which came to our attention, and I am certain that all the members of the House will join in adopting this resolution for those who have served so well, and just as it is largely true of any operation, surely it is also true of this great operation known as the Pennsylvania General Assembly, that the smallest gadget and the smallest part must always function properly.

So, it has been in the past five or six months of this year. Those employes and officers of the House in their lesser positions have responded well. They have carried out their respective duties so that our work here and the tasks that we are called on to perform have been made better and more efficient and more pleasant. Therefore, Mr. Speaker and members of the House, it gives me great pleasure to offer at this time a resolution tendering the thanks of the House to the employes and officers of the House of Representatives.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Members of the House of Representatives be tendered to all the officers and employes of the House for the able and efficient manner in which they have attended to the duties of their respective offices, and the uniform courtesy manifested by them toward all the Members of the House during this session.

On the question,
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED OFFICIAL REPORTERS

Mr. KANE. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I take pleasure in paying tribute to the class of men who stand by in any and all emergencies. I refer to the House Reporters who take down everything we say patiently, report it faithfully, and when it is ultimately printed, truthfully. We have these men to rely upon in this unfortunate era between the decline of the newspapers and the rise of the dictaphone. In another session everything will be reported with perfect accuracy. These gentlemen have stood by us in this emergency and have taken down everything which we said, important or unimportant, and I think there are very few things we have said which have been important.

I can remember a story that my father told about his grandfather, who, by the way, was a Free Trader and a Democrat, believe it or not. He was also the head of the school board of the City of New York, a very independent old Scotchman. One time they made the mistake of inviting him to a dinner in honor of Andrew Carnegie. The old Free Trader stood up, when he was called upon to make a speech, and said, "I would rather not be robbed, but, gentlemen, if I have to be robbed, I would rather be robbed by that prince of robbers, Andrew Carnegie."

Gentlemen, there have been many times that I would rather not be reported, but if we have to be reported, it is well that we be reported by those princes of reporters, the reporters of this legislature.

They say it takes three generations to make a gentleman and I think sometimes perhaps it might take three generations to fully appreciate the excellence of good stenography. My grandmother was my grand-father's secretary. My father in 1892 married his stenographer, and to those of you who have often asked the question as to where I got my wife, I will say that while a student at the University of Pittsburgh I married the stenographer of Doctor Oliver, the head of the history department. I am, therefore, thoroughly aware of the excellence of good stenographers. Now, I have two daughters coming along and I have wondered how it would be if having two daughters they could possibly like their parents marry stenographers in turn, but now since I have come down to the legislature I see that there is an answer to that question. I see the opportunity for my two daughters to find some very excellent gentlemen engaged in the profession of reporting.

You may probably remember the story of Hans Breitman who went to the Civil War. His father gave him some very good advice by telling him to be careful and not get shot. In the meantime his mother filled his bucket with ginger bread and honey.

I wish at this time to offer a resolution and this box of cigars on behalf of the delegation from McKean County to the House stenographers. There is no way we can show our appreciation other than by what we do. You all remember the story about the fisherman from Berks County who went out fishing and took along some liquid refreshment for his bait. He happened to look down and saw a snake that had a big frog in its mouth. He reached down and poured a few drops of the whiskey down the snake's throat. Shortly after that he fell asleep and when he awakened he found in the neighborhood of two hundred snakes, each with a frog in his mouth.

If there is anything we can do, I don't know of anything better than to express upon the record our highest appreciation and esteem of their faithful service, and on behalf of the legislature I offer the following resolution.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That the House of Representatives extend its appreciation to all the members of the staff of the Reporters of the Legislative Journal for the highly satisfactory and efficient way in which the debates and proceedings of this session have been reported.

On the question,
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED TO HOUSE STENOGRAPHERS

Mr. JOHN A. SMITH. Mr. Speaker and members of the House it gives me a great deal of pleasure to present the following resolution.

The resolution was read by the clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That the thanks of the House of Representatives be exended to the House stenographers for their courteous and efficient service during this session.

On the question,
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED PAGES

Mr WEISS. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, in view of the long winded speeches that have been made, I would consider it a pleasure to offer a resolution to give honor to the finest group of young men in this House, Mr. Harry Michlovitz and the page boys who have given untiring and efficient service to the members and to the Speaker. I offer the following resolution.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Members of the House of Representatives be tendered to Harry B. Michlovitz, and his Pages for their agility and fleetfootedness.

On the question,
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED BUREAU OF PUBLICATIONS AND PRINTER

Mr. TROUT. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, probably the most important force in the transaction of the business of the House is the one that we least think of. They are the people who are responsible in the Bureau of Publications and the Public Printer. One of the surprising features of my experiences here in my first session, having been in the printing business for the last quarter of a century, was the speed and efficiency with which the printing was done and the various bills as they were presented came back to the House ready for consideration, and I say to you members of the House that the speed of business, the enactment of the bills is very essential so far as the printing is concerned.

Recognizing that fact, Mr. Speaker, I would like to present this resolution.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Whereas, During the Session that is now closing, the amount of printing has been greater than ever because of the increased number of bills and resolutions introduced; and

Whereas, The unusual labor placed thereby upon the Public Printer and the Director of the Bureau of Publications has been most successfully performed without any inconvenience being caused to this Legislature; and

Whereas, Great credit is due to the said Director of the Bureau of Publications and his assistant, Samuel L. Pickens, and the State Printer for their cooperation in keeping the files up to date and making possible the consideration of bills as they appeared on the daily calendar; therefore be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives hereby extends its congratulations to Mr. Linn, the Director of the Bureau of Publications, and Mr. Pickens, and to the Public Printer, for their contribution to the work of the session; and be it further

Resolved, That the Chief Clerk of the House forward copies of this resolution to the said Director of the Bureau of Publications and to the Public Printer.

On the question,
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED PRESS

Mr. GEORGE E. DOWNEY, Mr. Speaker and members of the House, continuing this offering of bouquets there is an unofficial group connected with the House to which I am sure we are all grateful and in honor of the Press I offer the following resolution.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That the thanks of the House of Representatives be tendered to the Press for the satisfactory manner in which they have reported the proceedings of this legislative session to the public.

On the question.
Will the House adopt the resolution?
It was unanimously adopted.

THANKS EXTENDED PARLIAMENTARIAN

MR. RUTH. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, you have had many resolutions, but we have had none for the most important position in the entire House. Those members who have been on the Rules Committee know that the steam that is driving the House in its course is the wonderful work of the Parliamentarian, Mr. Moore.

The PARLIAMENTARIAN (S. EDWARD MOORE). Mr. Speaker, the hour is late, therefore my remarks will be very brief. I deeply appreciate the unexpected expression of good will toward me by the membership of this House. The session has been long and difficult, but I do want to assure each of you whatever assistance I may have been to any member has been a privilege and a pleasure.

VOTE OF THANKS EXTENDED PARLAMENTARIAN

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Speaker, I want to move that this House give a rising vote of thanks and appreciation to the person we call Eddie Moore for the wonderful service that he has given to us during this session.

The motion was unanimously agreed to by a rising vote.

GIFTS PRESENTED TO MEMBERS

MR. NOTHNAGLE. Mr. Speaker, Ladies and Gentlemen of the House, for years Spain has enjoyed its spectacular Bull-fighting and do yet, thereby making it an Old Spanish Custom. We don't fight the Bull in this country, but it is an Old American Custom to throw the "Bull", coming down from the time, about 150 years ago, when we threw "John Bull." For years it has been a custom in this House to collect a fund with which to give Speaker, Chief Clerk, Desk Officer's, Stenographers, and Pages some little token to remember the occassion, and along with it some little "joke present" for some of the members which are not intended to be taken seriously nor to offend. This Fund has been collected during the last two Sessions by a committee with a chairman, secretary and treasurer, all donations are credited by the secretary to the donor and paid over to the treasurer, who opens an account and pays all bills, and to whom anyone can refer as to the amount collected and disbursed.

The committee this year decided on a Souvenir Pin for each of the members, these have been handed out to you already, and I now desire to present to Charles Baldi and John Dent, who have struggled so hard to pass the "Race Horse bill" and failed and that they may be prepared for the next time, we present each with a "string of Horses."

In the absence of that wonderful orator from Lehigh, Al Rinn the silver tongued orator who claims to have addressed 50,000 people in Madison Square Garden at one time and for which he received $1,500.00 or thereabouts, who has been inadvertably called away we are going to ask his collegue James McDermott to take home to him this miniature Rinn Road and a number of Auto trucks over which he can control Sunday Traffic.

To our friend Al. Robinson who worked so hard for Fishing Laws for Allegheny County, where fishing does not exist, we present to him this bunch of "dried Herring" so that he will be sure of his.

To that "beau-brummel" the adonis of Waynesburg, Roy Furman this book of Movie Stars that he can look over at his leisure.

To Al. Wasserman of Philadelphia, we present this "canteen and helmet" as we look to him as our "gungadhin."

To that quiet "deep thinking Colleague of mine from Delaware County" John Weidemann who has a number of bills still in Committees but whose amendments to someone elses bills covering them have been passed and signed by the Governor and whose amendments have made the Rinn bill famous, we present this medal and give him the title of "Chief Amender."

At a meeting some nights back where a number of Democrats were talking of a long session and the "wearing affect thereof" especially on the pocket-book, our friend Sam. Stevens, said that he would have to return to his vocation, that of Blacksmith, in order to make a livelihood we therefore present to him this "mule shoe" so he will be prepared to see that his friends are well "shod" in the future.

All the members present know that we have a Castor but few are aware that we have two, one that you would least expect could stand where I stand and with his "rod and fly" make a cast and strike the face of yonder clock as John Yourishin is the champion "fly catcher" of the state and for fear that he may run out of bait, we present him with this "frog" and guaranteeing it to keep green and to be used in case of emergency.

To that faithful friend of every member, officer and employe who steadfastly refuses a gift, we have left in the Chief Clerk's office this morning a metal Jardinere of Egyptian pattern filled with flowers, not as a gift, but a reminder.

To the Pages and the stenographers in the Clerk's office we present you cash, which we feel will be acceptable and with which you may buy what you deem best.

To the Official stenographers, the parliementarian and the other desk officers, in whole, amounting to sixteen we present to each of you this leather Military Set.

SILVER SERVICE PRESENTED CHIEF CLERK

MR. NOTHNAGLE. Now to you Mr. Chief Clerk, remembering well the Lake Trout Dinner, that you so kindly furnished us with, shortly after mid-night this morning, and for which we want to thank you, assuring you of our appreciation and enjoyment, and for fear that at some other time you might want to entertain us, and find yourself short of silverware, we present to you this Chest of Solid Silver, and trust that you may live long to enjoy it.

CLOCK PRESENTED SPEAKER

MR. NOTHNAGLE. To you Mr. Speaker, for fear that when you return to your vocation, after this vacation and no longer have the Gavel to weild and break, we present to you this bunch of "switches" and ask that as you train the youngsters after the fashion you trained us, in the way we should go, that you will be merciful and spare the rod.

In as much as you will be called upon in the Fall to respond to the duties of your vocation and that you must be there on time, so as to open and not like the House which never opened on time, we have selected this beautiful Chime Clock, which not only strikes the hours, but the quarters, so you will have three warnings before the hour arrives, and your voice will be heard to exclaim, "the hour having arrived this House will now come to order."

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to sincerely thank the members of the House for the beautiful present which they have presented to him. The Chair assures you that he not only appreciates the material value of the present but very deeply appreciates the message of good wishes accompanying the gift. I shall always keep and cherish it to end of my days. I thank you.

The Chair wishes at this time to thank the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Nothnagle for the very fine and appropriate manner in which he has presented the various gifts to the members and employes.

The majority required by the Constitution having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the amendments were concurred in.

Ordered, That the Clerk inform the Senae accordingly.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Mr. HALUSKA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Cambria will state his question of personal privilege.

Mr. HALUSKA. Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a statement that early in this session I was afforded the opportunity of sponsoring one of the labor bills for this Administration, which was known as the Women's Forty Hour Bill. It has been my ambition since that date to have this bill enacted into law. I worked hard with members of this House and have listened patiently to the members who have given constructive as well as destructive criticism. The bill finally passed this House and went over to the Senate for concurrence. It came back from the Senate. The only way I could recognize the bill was that it bore my name. However, a Committee on Conference was appointed, and we met on several occasions. I have yielded from forty hours to forty-four and then from forty-four to forty-eight hours on this bill. The Senate, however, has shot it full of holes and has made many exemptions. One of the most vicious exemptions that any legislative body could possibly make was exempting hotels, restaurants, dining rooms, any eating places, from the provisions of this act.

Mr. Speaker, if that bill becomes law, all of the hotels, dining rooms, and eating places could work seventy-two or eighty-two hours a day.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. WITKIN. Mr. Speaker, I very much regret at this stage of the proceeding having to rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. WITKIN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman under a question of personal privilege cannot discuss the merits or demerits of a bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed and will confine himself to the question of personal privilege.

Mr. HALUSKA. Mr. Speaker, I am making a statement, I am trying to tell this House why it was impossible to compromise on a forty hour bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Cambria will proceed.

Mr. HALUSKA. Mr. Speaker, I regret very much to say that after holding several conferences with the committee appointed jointly by this House and the Senate, we were unable to agree on House Bill 371, so that the Women's Forty House Bill will be a dead issue for this Session.

The SPEAKER. The remarks of the gentleman under his question of personal privilege will be spread upon the Journal.

COMMUNICATION

The Speaker laid before the House the following communication which was read by the Clerk:

Your kindness and sympathy will always be held in grateful remembrance.

Mrs. L. F. Benchoff and Family.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Mr. HARKNS. Mr. Speaker, at this time I yield to the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Wasserman, and would like to be recognized after he makes his statement.

Mr. WASSERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleeman from Philadelphia will state his question of personal privilege.

Mr. WASSERMAN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, last night when the Conference Committee on Senate Bill No. 147 met we finally concluded to correct provisions in the Senate Bill as it came over in the House. The Conference Committee agreed unanimously to the changes and when the report was to be signed it appeared that I could not be located at the time. For that reason the Conference report as it came to the House did not have my name on it.

I want to say now that had I been present at the time I would have signed that report because the report was unanimously agreed upon by the conference. I want to take this opportunity at this time, if I may, to remove some misunderstandings concerning my attitude toward Senate Bill No. 147. As I said the other day when the bill came before us for final passage I was in favor of the flat pension idea, which was the idea that the blind have endeavored to put across here and in the Senate. With that idea I am very much in accord and so expressed myself the other day. I do not want to leave any misunderstanding as to my attitude.

As to some of the other provisions in Senate Bill No. 147, I do not oppose these provisions. I questioned whether the Department of Welfare was opposed to this provision, and as a result, the other night when the Conference Committee met Dr. Sheele pointed out that he was not in favor of some of the other provisions, and as a consequence we adopted the report as Dr. Scheele requested. I want to make my position clear in this matter in view of possible misunderstanding.

The SPEAKER. The remarks of the gentleman under his question of person privilege will be spread upon the Journal.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Mr. HARKINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question of personal privilege.

Mr. HARKINS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to concur in the remarks of the gentleman from Philadelphia, Mr. Wasserman. He did participate in the Conference Committee meeting and the report was unanimously adopted. The only reason that the signature of the gentleman from Philadelphia does not appear on the report is that he could not be located and it was feared that the report might not be ready if we had to wait to locate Mr. Wasserman.

I wish now as chairman of the Committee dealing with this bill to thank Mr. Wasserman for his suggestions, for his earnest efforts and for his cooperation both in the Committee and in the conference in regard to this bill.

The SPEAKER. The remarks of the gentleman under his question of personal privilege will be spread upon the journal.

RESOLUTION

CONGRATULATING HONORABLE JAMES J. McDERMOTT

Mr. HOLSTROM offered a resolution which was twice read considered and adopted as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Whereas, It has become known to us, that imposing facts are inevitably co-related, inasmuch so that the Fates have put into juxtaposition the birth of one of our illustrious members of this Assembly, with that of the day upon which the death of this epoch-making session of our Legislature occurs;

Whereas, These acts being authentic, it seems fitting, that this august body, take definite recognition of these facts, and indite into the records of this House, the information so described:

Whereas, The Honorable Member of the House to whom we refer is but an embryo in affairs of such moments as have taken place in this Session, but withal, has adapted himself to the circumstances presented, and has, with unswerving zeal, carried out his pledges to his Constituents, to himself and to his God,

Therefore be it resolved, That this, the House of Representatives in closing session assembled, take this opportunity of expressing their felicitations to their fellow member, who will testify to his love and esteem for all of you, within the scope of his acquaintance, we refer to and give you the name of the Honorable James J. McDermott, Assemblyman from the First District of Lehigh County.

APPOINTMENT OF COMMITTEES

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of Resolution No. 169, Printer's No. 1601 the Chair appoints the the following committee: Messrs. Nagel, Decker, McCreary, Gates and John A. Smith.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of Resolution No. 176, Printer's No. 1594 the Chair appoints the following committee: Messrs. Dent, Harkins and Sowers.

On the question,

Will the House concur in the amendments made by the Senate?

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Speaker, this is the general appropriation bill in which I think we are all most interested. There are some changes which have been made in the Senate and to which I think the attention of the members of the House should be particularly drawn. I refer to the fact that the appropriation to the department of Military Affairs has been increased and also changed, and I want to call the attention of those members of the House, particularly those who are interested in labor, to this particular amendment. Those of you who have been familiar with past general appropriation bills know that there is always an item in the appropriation to the Department of Military Affairs providing for the expenses incident to field services rendered by the Pennsylvania National Guard under orders of the Governor in repelling invasion, subduing invasion, riot, tumult or disorder, or the prevention of the same, and when such guards must be placed on duty under orders of the Governor under extraordinary circumstances for the protection of property or human life—and so forth.

Now, that is a provision that has always appeared in the General Appropriation bill. The amount which is usually allowed for that purpose, which was included in this bill at the time that it passed the House, was $50,000, and that was the only amount that could be used for that purpose. However, when it got over to the Senate they consolidated this item with four or five other items and gave a total amount to the consolidated item of one million, one hundred sixty-two thousand dollars and the amount allotted for this particular purpose apparently, although you can't tell, as I said, the item has been consolidated with a number of others,—was increased but in any event as it passed the House they would only have had $50,000 for that purpose, whereas under this bill as amended they would have over a million dollars.

You ask "Why are you interested in this particular appropriation for the suppression of riots and so forth?" I am interested in this because primarily the only cases in which the National Guard has been called out for such duty have been strikes and the fact that the appropriation that can be used for this purpose has been multiplied by twenty, and further due to the fact that the appropriation to the Department of Labor and Industry has been cut and may have been entirely economic. Nevertheless that is the fact that appears in the bill.

Now, I understand, in fact I have been told by the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House, that the Department of Labor and Industry has agreed to accept that cut. However, if you are going to cut the Workmen's Compensation Law and which enforces the factory inspection laws, which carries out the mediation of labor disputes, and all those various functions which assist labor and then turn around and multiply the appropriation to that department or that particular item in the bill which may be used to break strikes, I feel that the attention of the House should be called to that fact. I feel that this is a very dangerous change, and a change which should not be allowed to pass unchallenged.

You may think that I am barking at a shadow, that this is something that is not likely to occur, but I happen to know that some of those in authority are expecting labor troubles. I realize that a suggested amendment to the General Appropriation Bill at this stage of the proceedings is not a very popular act in this House. However, I feel that inasmuch as there are a number of Conference reports that have not yet come in, upon measures which I understand we are going to stay here and wait until they do come in, I believe that it would be entirely possible to reprint a couple of pages in this bill without reprinting the entire bill and put in a clause which will leave no doubt in the minds of the members of this House as to what it means. The fact that this particular appropriation has been so drastically increased at a time when labor troubles are anticipated and at a time when the appropriation to the Department of Labor and Industry has been cut, is something I think we should not let go without doing something about it. Therefore, I propose to offer an amendment which will definiately provide that no money expended from this appropriation item shall be used in connection with a labor dispute.

If you are sincere, as I understand the opposition will say, that they do not fear that it will be so used.—if that is their answer to this, let us put it in the bill; let us have no doubt about it; let labor understand that this House at least understands it.

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The SPEAKER. The amendment will be read by the Clerk.

The amendment was read by the Clerk as follows:

Amend Sec. 2, page 25, line 26, by inserting after the following: "Provided, That no moneys shall be expended from the one million, one hundred and sixty-two thousand dollars ($1,162,000) appropriation made by this item for National Guard purposes in connection with any labor dispute."

On the question,

Will the House agree to the amendment?

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I understand from the amendments presented by the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Hoopes, that he is objecting to the fact that in the General Appropriation Bill the expenses and salaries for the Department of Military Affairs are also included in the appropriation in the amount that is indicated. The wording of the act allowing that money to be utilized for the quelling of riots and suppression of riots, and so forth, I wish to call the attention of the gentleman from Berks to the fact that that item was carried in the Budget at $50,000. In the Appropriation Bill of the Session of 1933-34 that item was carried in the Budget at the sum of $150,000. It appears that during the past few sessions they were never required to call upon that sum for anything near the amount of the appropriation. It has been the idea of the present Appropriation Committee to more or less combine the appropriation so as to give the Department greater flexibility in the administration of the funds.

Now, if we had to carry that item of $50,000 in the Appropriation Bill it would have been necessary to increase the total appropriation by that amount. We have done the same thing as far as State owned hospitals, State owned prisons, State owned mental institutions, State owned defectives' schools. We lump those appropriations, and that gives those departments a greater flexibility and at the same time saves the Commonwealth the necessity of including a larger amount in the appropriation bill.

Now, if the gentleman from Berks, has any fear that the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, who in reality is Commander-in-Chief of the National Guard, is going to utilize that vast sum of $1,625,000 for the quelling of riots, or any labor dsputes, I wish to allay those fears on the part of the gentleman from Berks. That amount can be expended only at the discretion of the Governor and I feel that the attitude of the Governor of this Commonwealth has exemplified to the members of this House, his liberal opinions, his fairness will clearly indicate to the members of this House and to the people of the Commonwealth that there need be no fear whatsoever that that sum will be utilized as the gentleman from Berks has indicated.

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Speaker and members of the House it is not my purpose in offering the amendments to reflect upon the Governor of the Commonwealth. Now, that the Chairman of the Appropriation Committee has raised that question, I do not feel that this House should pass the buck to the Governor or go on record in the manner which will let us hold the bag in case such action is taken. The safe thing for us to do if the Governor has no intention to use the fund for that purpose, let us put it in the bill definitely and then there will be no doubt about it. The bill as worded permits twenty times as much to be used for the purpose as was in the bill originally when it went through the House, and the fact that they cut the Department of Labor and Industry at the same time as I said before, may or may not be significant. In times like this I do not want to take any chances. We do not want the National Guard to be used to break strikes as it has been used under former administrations. We do not want to take any chances of that happening. Let us put this amendment in providing that these funds cannot be used in connection with labor dpisutes, and then we will be clearly upon record. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a roll call.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, I realize that we would all like to get through and go home but I feel that this is rather an important question and I feel that I should say something from this side of the House.

As many of you know it has been my privilege and pleasure to work with the Chairman of the Appropriation Committee, and I know the very high standard of quality set by him in this work. I believe this is the proper procedure, to lump this appropriation.

The gentleman from Berks is drawing very widely upon his imagination, in the first place. In the second place I am amazed as a member of the Legislature that any member should raise any question as to the appropriation of money to quell riots and insurrections. That is a police power and I do not believe it has been abused in the state of Pennsylvania.

I know of no recent time when it has been abused or when anybody has accused the Executive of abusing that power, but the fallacy of his statement lies in this, that it takes $650,000 of that sum to pay the operating expenses of the National Guard. So that is out of the picture.

There is also the expenses of the Armories of the state amounting to something around three hundred thousand dollars,—I do not have my budget here and I do not recall that amount accurately. It takes $100,000 to purchase land at Indian Town Gap upon which the Federal Government has promised to spend some three hundred or four hundred thousand dollars for buildings, so that you will find that the amount of one million six hundred thousand dollars carried in this bill is taken up almost entirely by actual operating expenses. When you consider that $50,000 is a very small amount and sufficient to call out but a very small number of the National Guard for a very short time in case of riot or insurrection certainly the people of Pennsylvania and I believe the laboring men of Pennsylvania,—I resent on behalf of the laboring men of my district any implication that the laboring men of my district do not want adequate protection in case of riot or insurrection.

Suppose an emergency should arise and it was limited to $50,000; supposing it took $100,000 to call out the National Guard. The Governor in that situation, under this act would be in position to call out the National Guard and to expend $100,000 for that purpose. Perhaps by cuts during the biennium in some other places that could be done, but to say that one million two hundred thousand dollars is tremendously increasing the amount that could be used for that purpose is an absurdity in view of the expenses of the National Guard and in view of the expenses of the State in the maintenance of the Armories and in the maintenance of the reservation at Indian Town Gap and the purchase of land, equipment and so forth.

The expenses in the Adjutant General's Department and like items are all in this bill and they are all items that must be met as we go along through the biennium, and therefore only a very small portion of this could be utilized.

Mr. HOOPES. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Turner, as to the use of the National Guard to suppress labor, I do not believe that very many members of the House have such a short memory, and I think that most of them know that it has been so used, and that this particular measure makes it possible for it to be used to a greater extent than ever before. I checked through this particular item. When the gentleman said that all but $50,000 had been taken out, I disagree with him. There is at least $100,000 in the items which he mentioned, and which were taken out of this bill when these amendments were made by the Senate. It does double the amount that can be used for the suppression of riots and tumult and certainly I am not in favor of using the National Guard against peaceful picketing, and breaking strikes as it has been used in the past, and as the State police also have been used. That is the reason I want to see this amendment put in the bill, so that there is no doubt as to how this money can be used.

On the question recurring,

Will the House agree to the amendment?

SENATE INSISTS ON AMENDMENTS NON-CONCURRED IN BY THE HOUSE

The Clerk of the Senate being introduced, informed that the Senate has insisted upon its amendments, non-concurred in by the House of Representatives, to House Bill No. 977, entitled:

An Act to amend section three of the act approved the third day of June one thousand nine hundred and thirty-three (Pamphlet Laws one thousand five hundred twenty) entitled "An act making an appropriation out of the Motor License Fund to the Department of Highways for allocation to and expenditure in the various political subdivisions of the Commonwealth for the maintenance of certain streets and roads during the calendar years one thousand nine hundred and thirty-four and one thousand nine hundred and thirty-five and requiring political subdivisions to reduce their tax rates for road and street purposes for said years providing for certification of mileage of public roads and streets by municipal authorities to the Department of Highways and providing for the use and maintenance of road building machinery and equipment belonging to such political subdivisions by the Department of Highways in carrying out the purposes of this act" providing for the expenditure of such appropriation for the construction of second-class township streets roads and bridges requiring the reduction of tax levies by such townships and validating tax levies of townships made after the last day now fixed by law for such levy

Mr. MOUL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its non-concurrence and concur in the amendments made by the Senate.

On the question,

Will the House agree to the motion?

Mr. WOODSIDE. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, if this motion is carried, the result will be that the townships probably will lose approximately five million dollars under the act of 1933, P. L. 1520. This House appropriated to the Department of Highways for use in the townships of the second class the sum of $11,352,000.

In section 5, of that same act it is provided that all of the funds so appropriated shall be paid to the said political subdivisions, — — —

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. SHUGARTS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. SHUGARTS. Mr. Speaker, the bill is not before the House for debate. There is nothing before the House except the amendments made by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question before the House is the amendments made by the Senate.

Mr. WOODSIDE. Mr. Speaker, that is what I am speaking on. Now, the Highway Department at the end of 1935 will have an unpaid and unexpended balance of about five million dollars. In other words they will have expended approximately five million dollars less than the eleven million three hundred and fifty-two thousand dollars appropriated by the act just referred to.

Under the act in section 5 this money would go to the townships of the second class, to be expended by them. If this motion is passed this act as amended in the Senate will then provide that this five million dollars unexpended shall be added to the appropriation made by any other act appropriating funds for the same purpose for the years 1936 and 1937.

Now, this is the result, if the Highway Department does not expend the eleven million three hundred fifty-two thousand dollars, and there is no indication that they will expend the amount which is appropriatel by this session for expenditures, if they do not expend the full amount which is appropriated by this session for expenditures on second class township roads, they certainly won't expend the five million dollars which we have appropriated in 1933. So, to concur in the motion that has just been made will result in short changing the townships of the second class in the sum of five million dollars, or approximately five million dollars.

For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I feel that we should not concur in the amendments and that we should vote "no."

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, under the Parkinson Act, the Highway Department was only permitted to spend the money on maintenance of second class township roads. That is the reason for the balance that was left over. Under this act as amended they also spend the money for construction of township roads and bridges, repairing and maintenance. Also the amendment permits the validating of the levying of taxes by the townships after the last day now fixed by law for such purpose.

Prior to this act they could only use the money for maintenance. There could be no construction, there could be no repair of bridges. If we concur in this motion, the Highway Department may construct and maintain roads and bridges in townships of the second class, and I ask the members of the House of Representatives to vote in favor of concurring in the amendments.

Mr. WOODSIDE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to interrogate the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Ruth.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Ruth, permit himself to be interrogated?

Mr. RUTH. I will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. WOODSIDE. Mr. Speaker, I would to inquire of the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Ruth, whether there is any guarantee to this House or by the Legislature of this House that this five million dollars unexpended under the act of 1933 which are referred to and the amount which will be appropriated by this act will actually be spent by the Highway Department.

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman has had the same experience I have had in regard to every township that goes after the construction of township roads. The reason that the state could not use that money was because they could not use it for construction purposes. I am sure it is clear to every member of this House that when it is possible to build roads with this money the Highway Department can use every cent of the money of the appropriation.

Mr. WOODSIDE. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the remarks made by the gentleman from Berks, Mr. Ruth, that the Highway Department did not spend the full amount, despite the fact that many dirt roads could have had expended upon them a great deal more money to keep them in the shape that they should have been kept, and that there is absolutely no guarantee that the Highway Department will spend this money on the roads of townships of the second class, therefore, I still say that we should vote "no" on this motion.

Mr. STOCKHAM. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, this bill as originally drafter would have a very telling effect upon the property taxes in these second class townships. This money has not been expended and to return it to the townships would mean in most instances the wiping out of road taxes which is a very particular benefit to the property taxed and in that respect is of value to the property holders in all townships in the Commonwealth.

As amended it does not permit of that, and since we are seeking relief from property taxes to accept these amendments nullifies all the requisites of the original act, and I believe that we should be against them.

On the question recurring,

Will the House agree to the motion?

Agreeably to the provisions of the Constitution, the yeas and nays were taken.

Mr. STOCKHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a verification of the roll.

The roll was verified and was as follows:

The majority required by the Constitution having voted in the affirmative, the question was determined in the affirmative and the report of the Committee of Conference was adopted.

Ordered, That the Clerk inform the Senate accordingly.

RESOLUTION No. 154

Mr. OMINSKY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up at this time Resolution No. 154, Printer's No. 1283.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, May 20, 1935.

Whereas, The Fairmount Park Commission of the City of Philadelphia has grown in scope and control in supervising a tract of land which was developed from a nucleus of five acres acquired in the year 1812, to the proportion wherein it now has the control and supervision of over 6500 acres of park and park areas, as well as the many buildings and improvements thereon, and

Whereas, The said Commission may in its discretion dispose, distribute, or revise the aforesaid acres of land and all that is upon it, and

Whereas, The said Commission receives from the taxpayers of the City of Philadelphia, and other public sources a large sum or money to disburse as it deems proper in the running of its affairs, and further

Whereas, It is alleged that the said Commission is czaristic in its attitude and considers itself a law unto itself, and

Whereas, This attitude was recently demonstrated when the aforesaid Park Commission "pickled" House Resolution Serial No. 191, Legislative Journal, Page 2817, which Resolution was unanimously adopted by this House on the 29th day of April and transmitted to the Park Commission by the Chief Clerk on the 30th day of April, said Resolution having advised the Park Commission that this House was in favor of placing the Park Guards who are under the Commission's supervision, on an equal basis with the Policemen and Firemen with regards to rest periods and vacation, and

Whereas, It is desirable that legislation be enacted properly to provide for the supervision, auditing, and control of the said Board, so that the said Commission may heed the voice of the people, and not the voice of a select few, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized to appoint a Committee of Five members of the House of Representatives, whose duty it shall be to make an investigation of the books, records, management, and operation of the Park Board, also known as the Fairmount Park Commission of the City of Philadelphia, to the extent that may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this Resolution, and for the information of the House of Representatives, and

Resolved, That the Committee shall make a report to the House of Representatives as early as possible, either at this session, if feasible, or at the next special session of general session of the House of Representatives, and be it further

Resolved, That the said Committee through its Chairman or through a majority of its members, shall have power to issue subpoenas under the hand and seal of its Chairman, requesting and commanding any person or persons to appear before them and to answer such questions touching matters which are properly inquired into by the Committee, and to produce such books, papers, records, and documents as the Committee may deem necessary. Such subpoenas may be served upon any person and shall have the force and effect of the subpoenas issued out of the Courts of this Commonwealth. Moreover, each member of said Committee shall have power to administer oaths and affirmations to witnesses appearing before the Committ. Any person who shall wilfully neglect or refuse to testify before said Committee, or to produce any books, papers, records, or documents, shall be subject to the penalties provided by the laws of the Commonwealth in such cases.

On the question,

Will the House adopt the resolution?

It was adopted.

So the question was determined in the affirmative and the motion was agreed to.

The resolution was read by the Clerk as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 11, 1935.

Whereas, There has been much criticism directed against the State Board of Pharmacy to the effect that the board is no longer complying with the provisions of the law under which the board was created; and

Whereas, It is alleged that the board has repeatedly shown favoritism to certain persons and to the graduates of certain pharmaceutical schools; and

Whereas, It has been charged that the board permits certain privileged persons to meet a lower standard of qualifications than it does other persons; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized to appoint five members of this House whose duty it shall be to fully, fairly and impartially inquire into and investigate the practice of the State Board of Pharmacy, particularly as to the educational requirements; whether there exists any evidence of favoritism and whether the members of the board are properly qualified and are carrying out the duties imposed by law on said board.

Resolved, That the said committee shall make a report on its findings to the House of Representatives at its next session.

Resolved, That the said committee shall have power to issue subpoenas under the hand and seal of its chairman requesting and commanding any person or persons to appear before them and to answer such questions touching matters properly being inquired into by the committee and to produce such books, papers, records and documents as the committee may deem necessary. Such subpoenas may be served upon any person and shall have the force and effect of subpoenas issued out of the courts of this Commonwealth. Each member of said committee shall have power to administer oaths and affirmations to witness appearing before the committee. Any person who shall wilfully neglect or refuse to testify before said committee or to produce any books, papers, records or documents shall be subject to the penalties provided by the laws of the Commonwealth in such cases.

On the question recurring,

Will the House adopt the resolution?

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, with some reluctance I would like to interrogate the sponsor of this resolution, Mr. Melchiorre.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Philadelphia permit himself to be interrogated?

Mr. MELCHIORRE. Mr. Speaker, I will.

QUESTION OF PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of parlimentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Luzerne will state his question of parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, I understand that to take a resolution from the table it requires one hundred and five affirmative votes. According to the record there are only ninety-three affirmative votes.

The SPEAKER. In answer to the question of parlimentary inquiry, the gentleman is informed that the resolution was placed on the table by a majority vote and it was taken off the table by a majority vote. There is no rule which requires one hundred and five affirmative votes to take a resolution from the table. Does that answer the gentleman's question?

Mr. MASON. It does, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the sponsor of this resolution the reason for its introduction.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from philadelphia permit himself to be interrogated?

Mr. MELCHIORRE. Mr. Speaker, I will.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the sponsor of this resolution the reason for its introduction?

Mr. MELCHIORRE. Mr. Speaker, for the reason that the resolution is explanatory in itself.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, is it not true that while there is contained in the language of this resolution a sweeping allegation, the charges are in reality directed to only one member of the board?

Mr. MELCHIORRE. Mr. Speaker, that is true.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, in the preamble of this resolution there is the language that there is criticism of all sorts against the board, and I would like to ask the gentleman from what source these charges emanated.

Mr. MELCHIORRE. Mr. Speaker, various sources, especially in the city of Philadelphia and pharmacists in general in South Philadelphia that have brought these things to my attention.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, on Wednesday night of this week while I and the rest of the members of the House, at least the majority of them, were engaged in horseplay, a resolution was introduced calling for an investigation of the State Pharmacy Board.

I am frank to confess that it caught me off guard, as it did the majority of the House, and the resolution passed without opposition.

I made a personal investigation after the resolution was introduced among not only the members of the Board but I tried to get a sort of cross section of opinion from the druggists in the state, for the members of the House, and I found a unity of opinion against an investigation of this sort.

I think in the closing hours of this session it is unfair I think it is unwise, and I think it is unjust. It is just possible that there may be some changes in the Board by reason of the change in the administration, and I do not think that the men, the members of the Board, business men of course, ought to be removed, with a stigma against them, and being forced to continue business with that stigma against them.

I ask every member of this House to vote against this resolution.

Mr. OMINSKY. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, it is not my intention to keep you longer than necessary regarding this resolution. This resolution merely states that there have been certain charges made against the Board. I feel that very member of this House ought to be sufficiently interested to find out whether those charges are true or not. Also the Board itself should be interested enough to clear itself of anything that might be wrong, if there is something wrong.

Therefore, members of the House, in fairness to this House and in fairness to the Board, I feel that an investigation should be made, and that later on, if nothing has been found wrong, I am sure the sponsor of this resolution will apologize to the Board. Therefore, I ask you to vote "aye" on this resolution.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I have been in touch with our druggists back home. Our druggists are one hundred per cent against this investigation.

Mr. HERMANSEN. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I feel that to instigate an investigation of this magnitude merely on rumors that are made is a bad procedure, and we are setting a bad precedent here, if we are going to take these things seriously to the extent that we order an investigation just because there have been rumors or charges coming from the public. I think that these things should come here in written requests to the House as a whole and not to individual members of the House.

Mr. MELCHIORRE. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, this resolution was not introduced in the House as a camoflouge. In order to clarify the situation that the gentleman has just spoken about, I wish to say that we have actual facts to warrant an investigation. Had I not had any facts to go before the committee to be appointed to make the investigation, I would never have presented this resolution to the House. We have the facts and we want to present them.

Mr. KANE. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, I would like to call the attention of the House to the fact that this being a House committee for inquisitorial matters, it probably under the law, has no power between sessions when the House is not actually sitting.

I cite 21 District Reports, the case of Commonwealth versus Costello, in which the Penrose faction attempted to have the Vare faction in Philadelphia investigated by the House. They had no power under the court's decision. I think it would be a very unfortunate thing for the House, in the closing minutes of the session, if we would put through a resolution of this sort without the proper consideration. I doubt very much if it is anything more than a futile gesture and I ask the members to vote "no."

Mr. LONG. Mr. Speaker, I desire to interrogate the gentleman from Lackawanna, Mr. Coleman.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Lackawanna, permit himself to be interrogated?

Mr. COLEMAN. I will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the gentleman whether or not any of the members of the Board objected to this investigation?

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am very frank to say that the entire Board shared the belief that I do not that the facts do not warrant an investigation and are of course against it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. Speaker, from the statement of Mr. Coleman, I presume that the members of the Board are confident that those allegations are not true. Therefore, I see no reason why they should oppose a resolution which will in effect vindicate the Board and clear them of these charges which have been made.

W have investigated many things in this House, and I have never heard any one get up and oppose an investigation, and in the same breath state that they are clean. There is no appropriation on this investigation. There is none asked. Therefore, in order to vindicate the Board, and at no expense to the House or to the State, in justice to the Board and in justice to the sponsor of the bill, I ask you to vote for this resolution.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, when the resolution was introduced, talked to the sponsor of the resolution, and he stated to me, if I recall correctly, one specific charge of favoritism. There is no organization in the history of America from the time of the Minute Men of Concord down to the Elks Club that there has not been some sort of favoritism. If one man gets a license from the State Pharmacy Board, I see no reason in the world why that should warrant an investigation. I do not feel, of course, that any Board in the Commonwealth, like Caesar's wife is above suspicion.

My view point frankly on this thing is that somebody is seeking a medium for the expression of some resentment against one member of the Board. I see no reason why everybody on that Board should be tarred with the same stick and I ask the members to vote down this resolution.

Mr. RUTH, offered a resolution and asked and obtained unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The resolution was twice read, considered, and adopted as follows:

In the House of Representatives, June 21, 1935.

Resolved, That the Speaker appoint a committee of three to wait upon His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth, and inform him that the House of Representatives is ready to adjourn sine die this day at 12 o'clock noon.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as a committee on the part of the House to act in conjunction with a similar on the part of the Senate to wait upon the Governor and inform him that the General Assembly is ready to adjourn sine die this day: Messrs. Ruth, Shreiner and Furman.

GAVEL PRESENTED TO THE SPEAKER

The CHIEF CLERK. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, it is an old custom that on the final day of the session the Chief Clerk presents a gavel, the symbol of authority, to the Speaker of the House.

I am about to perform that very pleasant task and in connection with doing so I might state that although ordinarily it is a gavel that will withstand all kinds of shocks, I cannot guarantee that it will do that when in the hands of the former "blacksmith" from Berks County. When this gavel goes to pieces, although the Speaker may not be able to save the pieces, I know he will save the gold, because it is gold banded, while the gavel itself is ivory.

With these thoughts in mind, and with the kindest sentiments of the Chief Clerk, as well as the members of the House, I present the Speaker with this gavel.

The SPEAKER. Mr. Chief Clerk and members of the House, there have been so many kind things said of the Speaker, that the Speaker can hardly find words to express himself.

The Speaker, however, wishes to say to the members of the House that he very deeply appreciates this gift, that he will always cherish it, keep it, and admire it.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO WAIT UPON THE SENATE

Mr. FLINCHBAUGH. Mr. Speaker, the committee appointed by you to inform the Senate that the House is ready to adjourn sine die at 12 o'clock noon this day has performed that duty.

The SPEAKER. The Committee is discharged with the thanks of the House.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO WAIT UPON THE GOVERNOR

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Speaker, your committee appointed to act with a similar committee on the part of the Senate to wait upon the Governor and advise him that the General Assembly is ready to adjourn Sine Die this day has performed that duty.

The SPEAKER. The committee is discharged with the thanks of the House.

THANKS EXTENDED TO SERGEANT-AT-ARMS

The SPEAKER. At this time the Chair wishes to thank the Chief Sergeant-at-Arms, and also his assistants for the splendid cooperation in maintaining order during the sessions of the House.

STATEMENT BY MR. TURNER

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, in the few remarks that I made a few minutes ago I overlooked something that has been in my mind, and of which I have spoken privately to a number of men in and about the Legislature in the last few days.

The most important committee in this House is the Committee on Appropriations. Perhaps, aside from the Committee on Ways and Means—because of its work with the revenue raising measures—the most important committee in this session was the Committee on Appropriations. When the announcements were made of the chairmen of the Committees for this Session, I wondered whether the gentleman, who is the head of that committee, had sufficient legislative background to actually perform the task that was set before him, because I knew that the work of the Committee on Appropriations in this session would be more difficult than it had ever been before. It is an all-time consuming job; it is one that has taken the entire attention of every man who has served as chairman during my time in this House.

Along about the latter part of March I went to the Chairman of the Appropriations Committee and discussed the work of that Committee. I offered at that time to cooperate with him, because as perhaps only a few members of the House know, I had been engaged in the same kind of work that he was, so that we on the Republican side might be equally as well informed as you men on the Democratic side. We Republicans set up an organization, and and office in the Capitol so that we might have the necessary information and when the General Appropriation Bill came along, we would know just exactly what was going on. I sent a man who had had years of experience as Secretary of the Appropriations Committee into the office of the present Appropriations Committee to find out just what they were doing and how they were making out. The reports that came back to me were entirely satisfactory. It rather amazed me that the help in that office, the assistants in the office of the Appropriations Committee had been as able as they were to amass their information and to gather their facts together with reference to the General Appropriation Bill, and the other work of that Committee. From that time on I had the finest cooperation from the Chairman of the Committee.

He played absolutely fair and square with me. Every detail of the work of the Committee was open and above Board. He was frank and honest in his statements, and I don't believe that he kept anything back from me, as he had an opportunity to do, but he offered me every opportunity to delve into their work.

So I feel that these words should be said in these closing minutes of the session. I think you of the Democratic Party can be proud of the Chairman of the Committee, and that the Speaker should feel complimented, that the Committee on Committees should feel complimented that they chose this man for the post of Chairman of the Committee.

It seems to me in proper appreciation that I should mention the assistants in the office, and I refer particularly to Mr. McLaughlin, whom I see sitting in the back row of the House, and who throughout this session has worked arduously. I have gone to that office late at night after sessions, and he was there; I called early in the morning and found him on the job. I have never asked for information that he has not been able to gather it readily. He always seemed to have a grasp of the situation.

Let me again repeat that I think you ought to be proud of the Chairman of the Committee, that he should be proud of the assistants he chose to help him in that work. And personally I want to say that I have a deep appreciation of, and friendship for the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from York, Mr. Cohen.

STATEMENT BY MR. COHEN

Mr. COHEN. I feel highly complimented by the remarks of the gentleman from Delaware. I want to impress upon the entire membership of this House that it was only due to the cooperation of the gentleman from Delaware that the Committee on Appropriations was able to perform its work as it has done. Through his efforts, I might say, for the first time possibly in the history of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the General Appropriation bill was passed by the House amended in the Senate, and the amendments concurred in by the House without the necessity of a Conference Committee. That saved a tremendous amount of time. The work of collecting the information necessary for the drafting of an appropriation bill is a sizable job. It was through his efforts, through his cooperation, his ability and guiding inspiration, and particularly his efforts and help that he gave the Committee in examining the various departments to ascertain the various necessities and requirements of those departments that we were able to do that work for the House.

I also wish to note on the record the fact that I was also ably assisted by the gentleman from Erie, Mr. Barber, and it was through the efforts of these two men that we have been able to present to this House the General Appropriation bill, as well as an omnibus bill for hospitals and an omnibus bill for homes, and I feel it was because of their efforts that these bills have been concurred in.

I also feel that I might comment on the fact that it was my purpose to inform the gentleman from Delaware of what was going on in the Committee, so that he in turn could inform the Republican members of this House, and the Republican members of the Senate. It was the endeavor of this Committee to treat the members of this House with equal fairness and squareness.

STATEMENT BY MR. BARBER

Mr. BARBER. Mr. Speaker and members of the House, on behalf of the Democrats of the House, I feel that I as a Democrat and as a member of the Democratic Committee of this House, and as a member of the Appropriation Committee, would be derelict in my duty if I didn't say something to supplement the remarks of the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Turner.

I have heard the gentleman from Delaware, Mr. Turner, and other gentlemen on the Republican side say that for the first time in the history of the Appropriation Committee in this House they as a minority, or any minority party, or any one other than the Chairman of the Appropriation Committee knew what was going on in that Committee; knew why things were being done and how they were being done, and I think that endues not only to the everlasting tribute of the gentleman who did the work on that Committee, but the everlasting tribute of the Democratic party that they have inaugurated something that it will be well for the General Assembly, not only the House of Representatives, but the Senate of Pennsylvania to follow, a method whereby members not only of the House, but the members of the Senate can become acquainted with what is going on.

I think that the members of the House, on the Democratic side especially, should by a rising vote thank the gentleman from York, Mr. Cohen, and I so move.

The motion was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE

The SPEAKER. This being the day and the hour fixed by Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and House of Representatives as the time when the General Assembly shall adjourn sine die, I now declare the 131st Regular Session of the House of Representatives adjourned without day.

CORRESPONDENCE IN RE FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,
Governor's Office, Harrisburg, January 1, 1935.

To the Honorable, the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

I have the honor to present herewith for your consideration a copy of a letter addressed to me from The President of the United States, dated December 17, 1934, together with copies of the enclosures to which he refers, and a copy of my reply, dated December 18, 1934.

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

The White House,
Washington, December 17, 1934.

My dear Governor:

I am enclosing a copy of a letter to me from Mr. James A. Moffett, the Administrator of the Federal Housing Administration. This letter calls my attention to the need for certain legislation to make Titles II and III of the National Housing Act more effective.

Amendments to existing State laws seem to be called for in practically every State—forty-four of them—in which State Legislatures are meeting this winter.

Mr. Moffett tells me that the bill passed by the Legislature of the State of New York, in Special Session last August, seems to meet the general needs. I am enclosing a copy of this bill.

It would give me great satisfaction if you would give this matter your most careful consideration with the object, if you approve, of obtaining legislation in your State in 1935.

If you would care to have any further information in regard to the details or objects relating to this subject, I shall be glad to have you call on Mr. Moffett at any time.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

His Excellency,
Gifford Pinchot,
Governor of Pennsylvania,
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

Washington, December 11, 1934.

My dear Mr. President:

In order that the Federal Housing Administration may attain a full measure of success throughout the country, it is essential that banks, insurance companies, building and loan associations, trust companies, fiduciaries, and other investors be able legally to make insured mortgage loans, and to invest in insured mortgages and in national mortgage association obligations, as provided by the National Housing Act.

You may recall that Title II of the National Housing Act, in order to create a sound mortgage market and induce mortgage money to finance new construction, provided for the insurance of long term, low interest-bearing, fully amortized home mortgage loans, by authorizing the creation of a federal mutual insurance fund. Title III of that Act authorizes the creation of national mortgage associations subject to the supervision and control of the Federal Housing Administrator. The object of these associations is to provide a liquid market for home mortgages and thus to aid in establishing a more sound national credit system.

At the present time there are in the states various statutory limitations upon loans and investments by the aforementioned investing institutions, which restrict their ability to benefit fully from the National Housing program. A similar limitation upon the lending power of national banks has already been removed by the Congress.

The legislatures of many states will convene during the next few months. Could you not, with propriety, suggest to the Governors of these states that their statutes should be amended as soon as possible so that banks, insurance companies, building and loan associations, trust companies, fiduciaries and all other investors under statutory restrictions might be permitted legally to make insured mortgage loans and to invest in insured mortgages and in national mortgage association obligations as provided by the National Housing Act.

Respectfully yours,

J. A. MOFFETT,
Administrator.

The President,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

STATE OF NEW YORK
No. 195 Rec. 60
IN ASSEMBLY

Extraordinary Session

August 17, 1934.

Senate bill, No. 187, introduced by Mr. Wald, amended on second reading, ordered reprinted, and passed.

An Act to authorize corporations and private bankers subject to the provisions of the banking law to make loans, advances of credit and purchases in accordance with the provisions of an act of Congress, entitled "National housing act," approved by the president on June twenty-seven nineteen hundred thirty-four, and exempting such loans, advances of credit and purchases from the application of general statutes.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by the federal housing administrator, acting pursuant to the act of congress, entitled "National housing act," approved on June twenty-seventh, nineteen hundred thirty-four, and to such regulations as the banking board finds to be necessary and proper, corporations and private bankers subject to the banking law are authorized.

(a) To make such loans and advances of credit and purchases of obligations representing loans and advances of credit as are eligible for insurance pursuant to title one section two of such national housing act and to obtain such insurance.

(b) To make such loans secured by mortgages on real property as are eligible for insurance pursuant to title two of such national housing act and to obtain such insurance.

No law of this state prescribing the nature, amount or form of security or requiring security upon which loans or advances of credit may be made, or prescribing or limiting interest rates upon loans or advances of credit, or prescribing or limiting the period for which loans or advances of credit may be made shall be deemed to apply to loans, advances of credit or purchases made pursuant to the foregoing paragraphs (a) and (b).

2. Subject to such regulations as the banking board finds to be necessary and proper, building and loan associations and savings and loan associations are authorized to secure insurance from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation pursuant to title four of such national housing act.

(2473 Rev. 11/20/34)

Governor's Office, Harrisburg, December 18, 1934.

The President,
The White House,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. President:

Many thanks for yours of December 17th. I shall take great pleasure in laying your letter and the enclosed document before the coming session of the Legislature. Action upon it, however, will devolve upon my successor.

Sincerely yours,
/s/ GIFFORD PINCHOT.

REASONS FOR PARDONS GRANTED BY THE GOVERNOR FROM SEPTEMBER 12, 1934, TO DECEMBER 31, 1934

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,
Governor's Office, Harrisburg, January 1, 1935.

To the Honorable, the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

I have the honor to present herewith the reasons for pardons granted by me from September 12, 1934, to December 31, 1934.

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of Peter O'Halloran: No. 241 September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that Peter O'Halloran, convicted of attempted extortion by threats to kidnap, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of Montgomery County, on February 10, 1928, be pardoned.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant in 1928 pleaded guilty to attempted extortion by threats to kidnap. He was sentenced to a term of from 5 to 15 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary. In 1931, his sentence was commuted to a minimum term of 3 years, 7 months and he was released on parole. His employment and conduct records prior to, during, and subsequent to his incarceration have been excellent.

The applicant was employed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard from 1918 to 1925. He cannot be re-employed there unless he receives a pardon.

Respectfully submitted,
E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
RICHARD J. BEAMISH,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
WM. A SCHNADER,
Attorney General.
PHILIP H. DEWEY,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

The above recommendation is approved:
GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Governor.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of Walter Czyzewski: No. 657, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of Walter Czyzewski, convicted of larceny, receiving stolen goods, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia County, on June 1, 1931, be commuted from five years to three years, four months, expiring on October 1, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1931, the applicant pleaded guilty to larceny and receiving stolen goods. He was sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary for from 5 to 15 years. We believe he has been sufficiently punished. Our reasons follow:

(a) The applicant was never involved in any other trouble.

(b) His conduct and employment records during his incarceration have been very good.

(c) He has served over one-half of his minimum sentence.

The applicant will be on parole until 1946. Employment has been assured.

Respectfully submitted,
E. S. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
RICHARD J. BEAMISH,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
WM. A SCHNADER,
Attorney General.
PHILIP H. DEWEY,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

The above recommendation is approved:
GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Governor.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of Edward G. Concelman: No. 1395, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of Edward G. Concelman, convicted of robbery, receiving stolen goods, in the County of Oyer and Terminer of Beaver County, on December 14, 1932, be commuted from two and one-half years to one year, ten months, expiring on October 14, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant was convicted of robbery and receiving stolen goods in 1932. He was sentenced to the Western State Penitentiary for a term of from 2½ to 5 years. He is suffering from a tubercular infection of the lungs and has recently undergone an operation for an enlarged thyroid gland. He has been a tubercular patient in the hospital the entire period of his confinement in prison. We believe that his physical condition will be improved if he is released from prison. His parents are financially able and willing to take care of him if released.

The applicant will be on parole until 1937.

Respectfully submitted,
E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
RICHARD J. BEAMISH,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
WM. A. SCHNADER,
Attorney General.
PHILIP H. DEWEY,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

The above recommendation is approved:
GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Governor.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of John S. Thomson: No. 1427, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of John S. Thomson, convicted of attempted extortion and malicious mischief, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia County, on April 2, 1932, be commuted from five years to two years, six months, expiring on October 2, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1932, the applicant pleaded nolle contendre to attempted extortion and malicious mischief. He was sentenced to serve a term of from 5 to 10 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary.

The report from the Board of Trustees of the Eastern State Penitentiary states that the criminal behavior was probably the result of overwork and worry. Doctor F. H. Leavitt, after a careful examination of the applicant said, "The patient (the applicant) exhibited no evidence of any mental disease whatsoever at the time of the examination. I consider him to be mentally well and able to again take his place in the community. There is no reason to believe that the amnesic period which occurred in 1932, is apt to occur again." Doctor Paul Holmer, Assistant Director, Bureau of Mental Health, Department of Welfare, also made an examination of the applicant and he states, "With the information we now have of rather bizarre, entirely purposeless behavior, lasting over a period of approximately three months, followed by what is quite evidently a complete recovery * * * with a history of absolutely exemplary behavior over a period of more than two years since admission and with the complete absence of any symptoms suggestive of mental disease at this time, we are forced to conclude that his recovery is complete. There is certainly nothing to indicate that his prognosis would be anything but favorable. I would, therefore, recommend that he be favorably considered."

The applicant has served approximately two and one-half years of his minimum sentence. We believe he has been sufficiently punished.

The applicant will be on parole until 1952. Employment has been assured.

Respectfully submitted,

E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
RICHARD J. BEAMISH,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
WM. A. SCHNADER,
Attorney General.
PHILIP H. DEWEY,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

The above recommendation is approved:

GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Governor.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of William John Hankey: No. 1472, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of William John Hankey, convicted of breaking penitentiary, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of Centre County, on February 9, 1934, be commuted from four years to eight months, expiring on October 9, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1924, the applicant was convicted of robbery and sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary for from 4 to 10 years. He was transferred to the Rockview Farm Prison in 1925, and in the same year escaped from that institution. He pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and escaping and received an additional sentence of from 4 to 10 years. He has been incarcerated for over 10½ years. With the exception of the escape charge, his conduct record during his incarceration has been excellent. We believe he has been sufficiently punished.

The supervisor of paroles and the Board of Trustees of the Eastern State Penitentiary recommend a commutation of sentence.

The applicant will be on parole until 1944. Employment has been assured.

Respectfully submitted,

E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
RICHARD J. BEAMISH,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
WM. A. SCHNADER,
Attorney General.
PHILIP H. DEWEY,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

The above recommendation is approved:

GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Governor.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of Charles Ohls: No. 1837, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the sentence of Charles Ohls, convicted of (1) burglary, (2) breaking and escaping in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Luzerne Centre County, on January 17, 1922, June 25, 1932, be commuted from 10 years 5 years a minimum of 5 years, 8 months and maximum of 10 years to 1 month, expiring on (1) Sept. 11, 1934, (2) Oct. 11, 1931.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1922, the applicant pleaded guilty to burglary. He was sentenced to serve a term of from 5 to 10 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary. In 1925, he was transferred to the Rockview Farm Prison. In the same year he escaped from that institution. In 1932, he was arrested in Alaska. He was returned to Pennsylvania and received a sentence of from 5 to 10 years on the escape charge. The applicant's work and conduct record while in Alaska was very good.

The trial judge states that he is entitled to consideration. The Board of Trustees of the Western State Penitentiary will recommend for parole to Alaska.

The applicant will be on parole until 1949. Employment has been assured.

Respectfully submitted,

E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
RICHARD J. BEAMISH,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
WM. A. SCHNADER,
Attorney General.
PHILIP H DEWEY,
Secretary of Internal Affairs.

The above recommendation is approved:

GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Governor.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of John Brodhead: No. 1846, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of John Brodhead, convicted of burglary, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of Allegheny County, on January 15, 1930, be commuted from 17 years to 4 years, 9 months, expiring on October 15, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant was convicted of several charges of burglary in 1930. He was sentenced to serve a term of from 17 to 34 years in the Western State Penitentiary. He has served almost five years of his minimum sentence. We believe the applicant has been sufficiently punished. Judge Lencher recommends a commutation of sentence.

The applicant will be on parole until 1964. Employment has been assured.

Respectfully submitted,
E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of Joseph Potter: No. 1847, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the sentence of Joseph Potter, convicted of robbery being armed with an offensive weapon, carrying concealed weapons, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Erie County, on October 7, 1926, June 6, 1931, be commuted from 8 years to a minimum of 6 years, 3 months and a maximum of 8 years, expiring on October 6, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant was convicted of robbery in 1926, and was sentenced to the Western State Penitentiary for from 3 years, 8 months to 8 years. The prisoner was released on parole in 1930. In 1932, he pleaded guilty to the charge of carrying concealed deadly weapons and received a twelve day sentence. He was returned to the Western State Penitentiary to serve the remainder of his unexpired term for violation of parole.

The applicant has pulmonary tuberculosis. His brother, Doctor B. P. Potter, Brooklyn, New York, will place him in a sanatorium if released.

Respectfully submitted,
E. C. SHANNON,

In re application of Grant Harbold: No. 1849, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons, recommend that the minimum sentence of Grant Harbold, convicted of larceny, receiving stolen goods, in the Court of Quarter Sessions, of Huntingdon County, on September 25, 1933, be commuted from one and one-half years to one year, one month, expiring on October 25, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant was convicted of larceny and receiving stolen goods in 1933. He was sentenced to from 1½ to 3 years in the Eastern State Pentientiary. The applicant has served over one year of his minimum sentence. He was never convicted of any other crime. An investigation reveals that there is some doubt as to his guilt.

The trial district attorney states, "* * * I think this man (the applicant) should be paroled at the end of the one year sentence." The trial judge states that in his opinion the applicant can safely be paroled.

The applicant will be on parole until 1936. Employment has been assured.

Respectfully submitted,
E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
RICHARD J. BEAMISH,

In re application of William J. Baker, No. 1870, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of William J. Baker, convicted of breaking and entering, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Allegheny County, on May 16, 1930, be commuted from eight years to four years, five months, expiring on October 16, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant pleaded guilty in 1930 to several charges of breaking and entering. He was sentenced to serve a term of from 8 to 16 years in the Western State Penitentiary. We believe he has been sufficiently punished. Our reasons follow:

In re application of Michael Thomas Downey, No. 1871, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of Michael Thomas Downey, convicted of murder, second degree, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Northampton County, on June 29, 1931, be commuted from ten years to three years, three months, expiring on September 29, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant was convicted of murder of the second degree in 1931. He was sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary for from 10 to 20 years.

The trial judge states, "I recommend him (the applicant) to your generous consideration." The trial district attorney states that he would have accepted or recommended acceptance to the court of a plea of guilty of manslaughter, that the applicant did not have a fair trial in the fullest and completest sense, that he was very poorly defended and that the application is meritorious.

The Board of Trustees of the Eastern State Penitentiary and the supervisor of paroles recommend a commutation of sentence. Many responsible people also have recommended clemency.

The applicant will be on parole until 1951. Employment has been assured.

Strickler, convicted of embezzlement, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions of Franklin County, on June 6, 1931, be commuted from five years to three years, four months expiring on Octobr 6, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1931, the applicant, while Clerk of the Courts of Cumberland County, embezzled approximately $5400.00. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary for from 5 to 15 years. We believe he has been sufficiently punished. Our reasons follow:

(a) The applicant was never involved in any other trouble.

(b) His conduct and employment records during his incarceration have been excellent.

(c) He has served over 3 years of his minimum sentence.

The trial district attorney, supervisor of paroles, and the Board of Trustees of the Eastern State Penitentiary recommend a commutation of sentence.

In re application of Robert E. Swanhart: No. 1882. September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of Robert E. Swanhart, convicted of breaking, entering, and receiving stolen goods, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Allegheny County, on November 6, 1930, be commuted from five years to three years, eleven months, expiring on October 6, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1930, the applicant pleaded guilty to breaking and entering, larceny and receiving stolen goods. He was sentenced to the Western State Penitentiary for from 5 to 10 years.

The trial judge states, "I consider his (the applicant's) application generally meritorious and in my judgment he can safely be released from prison." The trial district attorney states, "Information has come to me from a reliable source, indicating mitigating circumstances and convincing me that the rehabilitation of this young man can best be accomplished by his early release on parole. I, therefore, desire to recommend the granting of his petition."

The applicant will be on parole until 1940. Employment has been assured.

In re application of Edward E. Donnelly: No. 1890, September Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the sentence of Edward E. Donnelly, convicted of robbery being armed with an offensive weapon, assault and battery with intent to kill, failure to stop to render assistance, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions, of Philadelphia County, on November 20, 1924, November 17, 1933, be commuted from 30 years to a minimum of 6 years, 11 months and a maximum of 30 years, expiring on October 16, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1924, the applicant was convicted of robbery, being armed with an offensive weapon. He was sentenced to from 15 to 30 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary. The minimum sentence was commuted to 6 years, 1 month in 1930, and he was released on parole. In 1933, he was convicted of assault and battery by auto and failure to render assistance. He was sentenced to serve 3 months in the Philadelphia County Prison. Because of the conviction, he was returned to the Eastern State Penitentiary, to serve the remainder of his unexpired term of 23 years and 7 mo[illegible]

The trial judge states, "Technically and legally the revocation of a parole is unassailable, but I recommend for the Board's careful consideration, purely from a social viewpoint, the undue harshness of the law's mechanical operation in this instance * * * I unhesitatingly recommend this as a case for clemency." The trial district attorney appeared before us and stated that he is in accord with the recommendations of the trial judge.

An investigation made at the direction of the Superintendent of Police of Philadelphia, disclosed that there is considerable doubt as to the applicant's guilt on the charges which caused his return to the penitentiary as a parole violator.

The applicant will be on parole until 1957. Employment has been assured.

In re application of Francis P. Ryan: No. 505, November Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of Francis P. Ryan, convicted of breaking and escaping, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Centre County, on December 3, 1927, be commuted from three years to one year, three months, expiring on December 10, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1927, the applicant was convicted of breaking, entering and larceny. He was sentenced to the Western State Penitentiary for from 3 to 6 years. After being incarcerated for only a few months he escaped. He was recaptured the same day. On the breaking and escaping charge he was sentenced to serve a term of from 3 to 6 years, to begin at the expiration of his original maximum sentence.

The warden of the penitentiary states, "Ryan has completed the maximum term of his original sentence one year ago, and I believe, in view of the fact that his father has stated that he will provide him with a home, that the application for clemency is worthy of favorable consideration." The trial judge and the supervisor of paroles recommend clemency.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of William Charles Baker, convicted of breaking and escaping, in the Court of Quarter Sessions of Centre County, on January 18, 1929, be commuted from three and three-fourth years to four months expiring on December 1, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1923, the applicant, sixteen years of age, was convicted of larceny of an automobile, and was sentenced to the Mifflin County Jail for from 9 to 18 months. He escaped from that institution, but he was captured within a short time. On the charge of breaking and escaping he was sentenced to serve a term of from 3 to 6 years in the Western State Penitentiary. He escaped from that institution and after being at liberty for 3 years surrendered himself to the authorities in Philadelphia. For this escape he was sentenced to from 3½ to 7½ years in the Western State Penitentiary. He has been incarcerated approximately 8 years for stealing an automobile and breaking and escaping. We believe he has been sufficiently punished.

In re application of Michael Evancho, No. 850, November Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of Michael Evancho, convicted of voluntary manslaughter, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Lackawanna County, on May 28, 1931, be commuted from four years to three years, six months, expiring on November 28, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant and a number of others sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary were recently transferred to the Pennsylvania Industrial School.

The Superintendent and the Board of Trustees of the school have requested us to recommend a commutation of sentence in order than the young men who were transferred from the penitentiary would be eligible for release on parole the same as the boys originally committed to that institution. It is hoped that this will improve the discipline in the school and further the work of rehabilitation.

The district attorney's representative from Philadelphia told us at the open session that as to the applicants from Philadelphia County, the district attorney was in accord with this proposal and heartily approved its purpose. We also endorse the plan.

In re application of F. J. Tyrrell, No. 876, November Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of F. J. Tyrrell, convicted of murder, second degree, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Allegheny County, on January 19, 1929, be commuted from ten years to five years, eleven months, expiring on December 19, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant was convicted of murder in the second degree in 1929. He was sentenced to the Western State Penitentiary for from 10 to 20 years. He has served over six years of his minimum sentence. We believe he has been sufficiently punished.

Warden Ashe of the Western State Penitentiary states, "I have been informed by our Mr. Coulter that he has personally interviewed both Judge J. F. Stotz and District Attorney Andrew T. Park, and was informed by Mr. Park that he would recommend that the sentence imposed on Tyrrell be commuted, while Judge Stotz stated that while he would not recommend, he would in no way oppose a commutation of the ten year minimum term of sentence imposed by him on January 19, 1929. It is my opinion that further imprisonment of this applicant will only tend to lessen his power to readjust himself to society when he has been granted his liberty." The Board of Trustees of the Western State Penitentiary specially recommend this case.

The applicant will be on parole until 1949. He is a lawyer and expects to reestablish himself in his profession.

In 1930, the applicant pleaded guilty to burglary. He was sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary for from 5 to 10 years. We believe he has been sufficiently punished. His conduct and employment records during his incarceration have been excellent. He has served over four-fifths of his minimum sentence. The applicant was never involved in any other trouble.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

In 1928, the applicant was sentenced to a term of from 3 to 6 years in the Eastern State Penitentiary for entering with intent to steal, larceny, and receiving stolen goods. In 1931, he was released on parole. On June 27, 1934, he was given a final discharge from parole.

A deportation warrant has been lodged by the Federal Government and unless a pardon is granted the applicant will be deported to Italy. Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant pleaded guilty to extortion and was sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary for from 4 to 8 years. He was never involved in any other trouble. His conduct and employment records during his incarceration have been excellent. He has served almost two-thirds of his minimum sentences. We believe he has been sufficiently punished.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

BOARD OF PARDONS

In re application of Albert Hall: No. 1984, November Session, 1934.

To His Excellency, the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: The above application having been heard, upon due public notice, in open session, the undersigned members of the Board of Pardons recommend that the minimum sentence of Albert Hall, convicted of robbery, in the Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Session of Luzerne County on February 5, 1931, be commuted from five years to three years, ten months, expiring on December 5, 1934.

Our reasons for making this recommendation are as follows:

The applicant and a number of others sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary were recently transferred to the Pennsylvania Industrial School.

The Superintendent and the Board of Trustees of the School have requested us to recommend a commutation of sentence in order that the young men who were transferred from the penitentiary would be eligible for release on parole the same as the boys originally committed to that institution. It is hoped that this will improve the discipline in the School and further the work of rehabilitation.

The district attorney's representative from Philadelphia told us at the open session that as to the applicants from Philadelphia County, the district attorney was in accord with this proposal and heartily approved its purpose. We also endorse the plan.

Respectfully submitted,

E. C. SHANNON,
Lieutenant Governor.
JOHN J. OWENS,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.
WM. A. SCHNADER,
Attorney General.
PHILIP H. DEWEY,

SUMMARY REPORT SALINITY SURVEY DELAWARE RIVER.

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,
Governor's Office, Harrisburg, January 14, 1935.

To the Honorable, the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

I have the honor to present herewith the preliminary report of the Delaware River Salinity Survey, conducted under the direction of the Sanitary Water Board of the Department of Health.

This survey was a result of the controversy between Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York concerning the impounding of certain of the upper waters of the Delaware River to augment the water supply of the City of New York.

In order to protect Pennsylvania industries and water supplies dependent on the lower reaches of the Delaware River, Pennsylvania authorities asked that certain specified releases of water be made from the impounding of the Delaware waters, to prevent salt water from the lower Delaware from inflicting great injury on Pennsylvania industries and water supplies, especially at or near Philadelphia.

This survey has determined that releases of water already arranged for under a decision of the United States Supreme Court will prevent damage from salinity to Pennsylvania interests.

It establishes standards for the protection of Pennsylvania in any future handling of the waters of the Delaware.

The value of this survey as a basis for guarding Pennsylvania's water supply and industrial interests, now and in the future, is immeasurable.

GIFFORD PINCHOT
December 14, 1934.

Hon. Gifford Pinchot,
Governor of Pennsylvania,
Harrisburg.

My dear Governor:

It gives me great pleasure to be able to transmit to you a preliminary report carrying the conclusions of the work done in the Salinity Survey of the Delaware River carried on by the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering of the Department of Health under special appropriations given by the Legislatures of 1931 and 1933.

This research project is outstanding in the character of the work done and the importance of the conclusions reached. It broke new ground and is pioneer work in this particular phase of civil engineering. We were able to secure a number of instruments of precision that had never been used in any work of this type and which demonstrated their value at once and have enabled the engineers in charge to secure scientific results never before reached.

The value to the State of this report when it is presented in its final form cannot be overestimated. It gives us incontrovertible data to be used for the protection of the municipal water supplies of Pennsylvania's citizens necessarily secured from the Delaware against possible future diversion from the headwaters to municipalities in other States, and also to be used in estimating the effect of Federal projects, such as the proposed Tocks Island Reservoir; incidentally, when certain facts were brought to the attention of the Army engineers, the plans for the proposed trans-New Jersey Canal were modified in accordance with data submitted to them with the result that if and when the canal is built along the plans now contemplated, there will be no danger to the Delaware River from salinity.

The data developed has also been of inestimable value to the industries along the lower Delaware in giving them a sense of security from injury which otherwise might have resulted from the advance of the tidal salinity prism.

The underlying reasons for this research study were the problems which were brought before the State as intervener in the Delaware River suits brought by New Jersey before the Supreme Court to prevent the diversion of water for New York City, and it forms a sound scientific basis for the opinions advanced by the engineers representing the State which resulted in the adoption of the Pennsylvania plan for periodic releases from the proposed impounding reservoir. At that time we had nothing except opinions to present; the State now has definite, scientific proven data.

It gives me great pleasure to submit to you this very complete, but preliminary report before the end of your administration. From the scientific and engineering standpoints, I think that it will go down in history as one of the most outstanding achievement in engineering research anywhere in the Country, and it has occurred during your term of office.

In the engineer's report the outline of work remaining to be done is given. This will not alter the conclusions, but will complete the fully rounded out research, and we have every reason to believe that this will be fully completed by the end of the fiscal year.

Yours very truly,

THEODORE B. APPEL, M. D.
Secretary of Health

TBA-R

December 14, 1934.

Theodore B. Appel, M. D.
Secretary of Health,
The Capitol,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Dr. Appel:

I have the honor to transmit herewith a preliminary final report on the Salinity Survey of the Delaware River made pursuant to your request for reports on major activities of this Bureau during the past 4 years for the information of the Governor.

All of the progressive steps needed to find the physical laws governing the advance and retreat of salinity in the tidal Delaware have been completed. These laws have been supplied to a study of 13 of the 27 years of stream flow record, and the other 14 years sufficiently examined that there appears no doubt but that the conclusions drawn in this report will remain unchanged by the completion of the study.

You will note in the conclusions at the end of the report that the proposed impounding of upper Delaware water by the City of New York as allowed by the Supreme Court of the United States, will not do damage to Pennsylvania's interests so far as salinity is concerned and that the releases from these reservoirs as proposed by Pennsylvania engineers in the Delaware River Case will result in material benefits so far as salinity is concerned to Pennsylvania's public and industrial water supplies derived from the tidal Delaware.

These conclusions are of profound importance to the Commonwealth because the Supreme Court of the United States in the Delaware River Case granted leave to any of the litigant sovereignities to re-open that case. So far as salinity invasion is concerned, this report shows from an engineering point of view, benefits rather than damages, because of the releases as aforesaid.

It is of real importance to this Commonwealth and to the engineering profession that the unfinished office work of this research be completed before the close of this biennium, for while it will not change the conclusions the results will probably strengthen and confirm the present conclusions and thus add to the engineering soundness of the whole investigation.

It gives me a great deal of pleasure to make of record that the success of this pioneer engineering research problem of magnitude was attained because of the skill, zeal and fidelity of the corps in direct charge of the work. During its conduct they were confronted with many scientific and engineering problems without precedent and the solving of such new problems deserves commendation.

Connection with this work has been a source of much pleasure to me.

Respectfully submitted,

MEMORANDUM
CHIEF ENGINEER
of the
PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

MEMORANDUM IN RE
SALINITY SURVEY OF THE DELAWARE RIVER

This survey was a sequela of the Delaware River Case before the Supreme Court of the United States. For an understanding of the relevant subjects involved, the following statements are made.

In 1923, by legislative authority, the Governors of Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey appointed Commissioners to negotiate and execute a compact between the three states relative to the waters of the Delaware River. This was done in 1925. The compact was only ratified by the Legislature of New York.

Subsequently, the Governors of the three states again appointed Commissioners who again conducted negotiations and in 1927 executed a second compact intended, inter alia, "to enable each of the said States to make use of a part of the water thereof for the purpose of meeting present and reasonably prospective needs." This compact was ratified only by the Legislature of New York.

In accordance with the relevant provisions of the unratified 1927 compact, the city of New York prepared plans to augment its water supply to the extent of 600 m.g.d. by impounding the water of certain New York intrastate streams tributary to the Upper Delaware River. The project was approved by the proper authorities of the State of New York.

Thereupon, the State of New Jersey in 1929, prayed the Supreme Court of the United States to issue its writ of injunction to the State and City of New York to restrain the carrying out of this water supply project, alleging that many damages would result therefrom. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania was granted leave by the Court to enter the case as "Intervener" to protect the interests of this State.

In the forepart of 1930, the Court appointed a special Master to take testimony and make report to the Court. During the hearings, New Jersey made much account of alleged increase in salinity over the oyster beds in Delaware Bay which, they averred, would be caused by the diminution of high flows of the upper Delaware River because of the proposed impounding of water and diversion to New York City.

From July to the end of 1930, the natural flow of upland fresh water in the Delaware River was unusually low and there was an unusual increase in the salinity content of the Delaware River in the vicinity of Chester and Marcus Hook, Pennsylvania, where there are several large manufacturing establishments which use Delaware River water for steam making and process purposes. The City of Chester also derives its drinking water from the Delaware. Hence, this natural increase in salinity occurring at a time when New Jersey averments were publicly known, created deep concern in the minds of the officials of these industrial establishments.

Mr. W. D. Mason, Manager of the Sun Oil Company, one of these industrial concerns, made a study of the relation of flow of upland water and the high salinity of the Delaware River water during the summer and latter part of 1930. He assembled his data in the form of diagrams and a report dated December 9, 1930, and had meetings with the Pennsylvania Engineers. As the State then lacked funds to make a salinity survey, he proposed that the interested industrial concerns should finance an investigation of their own. This was done.

Attorney General William A. Schnader, then called upon the Pennsylvania Engineers participating in the Delaware River case for a study of then available data on salinity in the Delaware. Their report dated January 6, 1931, was largely based upon all records obtainable as to the then and prior salinity content of the water supply of Chester and these industrial establishments.

The available data being fragmentary and some only based upon memory or hearsay, a Bill for a State survey was introduced in the Assembly and duly enacted as Act 4-A, approved April 14, 1931. It authorized and directed the Sanitary Water Board to make an investigation and study of the lower Delaware River to determine the effect of the so-called New York diversion. Also a study for a reservoir for impounding and distributing to the industries in the neighborhood of Chester, of water to be taken from the Delaware at a point safely above the salinity line in the event that the New York diversion would increase the salinity of the river in the neighborhood of Chester to such an extent as to render the water at that point unfit for industrial use. The Act appropriated $50,000 for the biennium 1931-1933.

Prior to the above appropriation becoming effective, and during the early days of organizing the State survey, the industrial concerns created a technical committee under whose supervision a great many salinity observations were made and these data were later made available to the State.

The U. S. Army Engineers about 1928 began to make salinity observations in the Delaware River and Bay and to correlate such data with stream flow. When the State salinity survey was inaugurated, an arrangement was made with them for exchange of all base data, i. e., we furnished the District Engineer, U. S. Army, at Philadelphia, with all of our records and he furnished us theirs, especially as to salinity observations and tide guage records.

Therefore, the available salinity observations, additional to those made by the State, include the observations made by the U. S. Army Engineers up to date and by the Pennsylvania industrial establishments prior to the beginning of the State survey.

Many Federal and State agencies cooperated in the State salinity survey.

No study was made of the industrial water reservoir referred to in Act 4-A, because by the Spring of 1934, sufficient studies had been completed to show that releases from the proposed New York reservoirs, especially at times of maximum advance of salinity during periods of minimum stream flow, were of material and substantial benefit to Pennsylvania's public and private water supplies. This matter was verbally laid before Deputies Attorney General Segal and Arnold on April 19, 1934, who, under the circumstances, expressed the opinion, that the available money should be expended upon doing the best possible work on the main part of the study and not making the study of the reservoir because it would not be needed.

The continuance of the survey during the biennium 1933-1935 was provided for by Act 47-A, approved June 1, 1933, which supplements the original Act by widening the scope of the survey to include a study of the effect of impounding and diversion of Delaware waters upon municipal water supplies and also extending the scope beyond the proposed New York diversion to any other diversion of water from the Delaware River. This Act appropriated $25,000 for the work.

Another serious diversion of water from the Delaware River appeared possible in 1932 when an article by one of the members of the Board of Army Engineer studying the proposed New Jersey Canal was published in the "Military Engineer." This indicated consideration of obtaining make-up water for the proposed canal from the Delaware River in amount far in excess of the diversion by New York for water supply purposes, but no provisions for compensation water at times of low flow in the Delaware.

Data concerning Pennsylvania water supplies derived from the Delaware were promptly furnished to the Army Engineers and the seriousness of either salt water being introduced to the fresh water part of the Delaware from the canal, or material advance of salinity which would be caused by substantial diversions for the canal, was clearly brought to their attention. This phase of the New Jersey canal was then given intensive study by the Army Engineers. The outcome was that their later plans included dams across the Delaware and Raritan River with very elaborate locks at the Raritan end to safeguard against the salt water of the Raritan Bay (below the dam) entering the canal and providing for make-up water from the upper Raritan River, an intra-state fresh water stream of New Jersey with storage, if it be found necessary.

Under date of January 9, 1934, the Chief of Engineers U. S. Army transmited to the Secretary of War the report on the New Jersey Canal which included the safeguards above referred to and as an extra safeguard, the Chief of Engineers stated > "the use of the canal in times of extreme drought can, if necessary, be restricted temporarily to smaller types of vessels which cannot make in safety the sea passage and the water requirements so reduced as to eliminate any possible danger to these water supplies."

Thus it appears that if the New Jersey Canal be constructed and operated in accordance with this report of the Army Engineers, there should be no salinity menace caused thereby to the public and private water supplies in Pennsylvania derived from the tidal Delaware River.

Returning to the Delaware River Case—the Supreme Court of the United States in its Opinion dated May 4, 1931, allowed the New York diversion at a rate of 440 m.g.d., subject to certain conditions, one of the most important being, concerning a rule of release of water to augment low flows of the Upper Delaware.

In our salinity survey, modified flows of the Delaware River were, therefore, based upon the assumption that during the 27 years of stream flow records the natural flow of the Delaware River was modified by the proposed New York water supply as allowed by the Court and with the requirements of the Court as to releases. For the reason given above, the proposed New Jersey Canal was not reckoned with as a possible salinity menace.

This salinity survey was an engineering research problem of magnitude involving many and diverse factors. There was practically no precedent to guide the work, for while salinity studies have been made on a large scale in California and on a smaller scale and for a different purpose in Chesapeake Bay, the purpose of those surveys was so different from the problems in the survey of the Delaware that they were not applicable.

The wholehearted cooperation of the Corps of Engineers of the U. S. Army, the hydrographers of the U. S. Geological Survey and the State of Pennsylvania, and officials of the U. S. Weather Bureau, the U. S. Lighthouse Service and others was invaluable and appreciation of these services is hereby made of record. Sincere thanks are also given for the assistance of the Commissioners of Navigation of the River Delaware in making available their boat, and many other courtesies.

Grateful acknowledgment is also made for counsel and advice during the conduct of the work by George C. Chandler, Esq., of Philadelphia, Attorney for Pennsylvania in the Delaware River Case before the Supreme Court of the United States, and also, for engineering counsel and advice given by Dean Elmer A. Holbrook of the University of Pittsburgh, Engineer member of the Sanitary Water Board. These two gentlemen rendered these services without compensation. Mr. Robert Spurr Weston of Boston served in the early days of the survey as Consulting Engineer on specific problems.

It is also made of record that Mr. Frank E. Daniels, Chief Chemist of this Department, personally made the chemical analysis of over 12,000 samples of Delaware River water collected by our corps during the course of the survey. This work was done with skill and dispatch in addition to all his other duties, which was only possible by his working long hours overtime.

Mr. E. Jony, Engineer in Charge and his Corps of Engineers and non-technical assistants actively engaged in the survey showed skill, zeal and fidelity and because of these praise-worthy characteristics, all credit is due them for scientifically finding the physical laws governing the advance and retreat of salinity in the tidal estuary of the Delaware River.

Within the limits of time and money, practically all of these data have been studied and correlated to establish, step by step, the basic factors. The physical laws found for the relation between stream flow and location of salinity for both natural and modified flows of upland water, have been used to complete the study of 13 of the 27 years of stream flow record. There remains to be completed the same work for the other 14 years.

It is vitally important that salinity duration and other studies be made to show the percentage of time that varying concentrations of salinity invasion with natural and modified flows will occur at given points along the Delaware in front of Pennsylvania.

As this survey is a monumental engineering study, it is important, first, to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and secondly, to the engineering profession, that as complete a report as is possible with the available personnel and remaining funds be made before the end of the present biennium.

In conclusion—the dominant policy governing the conduct of this survey was

> "The development without prejudice or preconception of any kind of the facts, the laws and the processes of nature."

Chief Engineer.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA
SANITARY WATER BOARD
DELAWARE RIVER SALINITY SURVEY

REPORT
ENGINEER IN CHARGE of the
DELAWARE RIVER SALINITY SURVEY

Philadelphia, Pa.
December 10, 1934.

Introduction

The Salinity Survey of the Delaware River was made pursuant to the provisions of Act 4-A of the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, approved April 14, 1931, and Act 47-A approved June 1, 1933.

In brief, the purpose of this investigation and study was to determine whether or not the proposed New York Water Supply Project, insofar as the impounding, diversion and release of waters from the upper Delaware is concerned, all in accordance with the decree of the Supreme Court of the United States, (New Jersey vs. New York, Pennsylvania Intervenor, October Term, 1930, No. 16 Original), or any other diversions which may be contemplated, would do material and substantial damage to Pennsylvania interests, with specific reference to public and industrial water supplies derived from the tidal portion of the Delaware River.

It was feared that such diversions would increase the salinity content of the Delaware River in the neighborhood of certain communities and industrial centers, within the Commonwealth, to such an extent as to render it unfit for domestic and industrial uses.

The study of this problem involved a field of research in which little if any investigations have previously been made that would assist in the present investigation. Therefore, the studies have often required a multiplicity of trial analyses before the final procedure was determined.

In general, it may be said that every tidal river is a law unto itself, and the salinity conditions will differ in many particulars from those of any other estuary, except for accidental resemblances.

The laws governing the advance and retreat of salinity in a tidal estuary are extremely complex and do not lend themselves to a strictly mathematical solution, owing to the many varying factors that contribute to the phenomenon. However, the results of this investigation show that definite physical factors are at work and that, in spite of seasonal fluctuations and a complex interplay of several different factors, each varying in its own particular way, they all tend to reproduce definite conditions from year to year.

It is hoped that this investigation will materially contribute toward a clearer understanding of the complex laws involved in this problem, and that the results, when assembled in final form, will not only serve for the purpose of the present investigation, but also be of some value to the engineering profession in general.

The present report is intended merely to present the final conclusions to date and to describe, in the briefest manner, the principles involved, the general procedure and methods used, and the successive steps of the investigation in arriving at these conclusions.

Only a few representative drawings and charts selected from a large number of available drawings, are included in the Appendix of this report.

The recording of all base data collected in the course of this investigation, together with discussions, in more detail, of the various studies that have been made and, finally, the inclusion of all available drawings and charts must, of necessity, be deferred until the completion of the final report.

Acknowledgment of indebtedness, with thanks, is made to the following Federal and State agencies for their cooperation in matters pertaining to this survey:

The Pennsylvania Water and Power Resources Board, for furnishing all required streamflow records, in cooperation with the U. S. Geological Survey.

The U. S. Geological Survey for cooperating in matters pertaining to streamflow.

U. S. Army, through the courtesy of the Commanding Officer at Fort DuPont, Delaware City, for making arrangements for the daily collection of water samples at Fort Delaware (Pea Patch Island).

U. S. Department of Commerce, for establishing, through the Lighthouse Service, 4th District, Philadelphia, sampling stations at various Lighthouses in the Delaware Estuary.

U. S. Department of Agriculture, for establishing evaporation and meteorological stations in the Delaware River and Bay, through the U. S. Weather Bureau, Philadelphia.

The Board of Commissioners of Navigation of the River Delaware and its Navigable Tributaries, for making available the pilot boat "M. S. Quay" for occasional sampling trips on the Delaware River.

The zeal and efficiency that have been displayed by the personnel engaged in this investigation is also asknowledged.

SUMMARY OF REPORT TO DATE

The Delaware River

The Delaware River rises in the southeastern part of New York State, a glaciated region abounding in lakes and ponds. It follows a southeasterly course through a deep trough in this elevated table-land. On both sides are slopes covered with forests and exposed cliffs of shale and sandstone.

Emerging from this plateau region into a broad valley, a region of rolling hills, some under cultivation, some covered with timber but all deeply cut by ravines, it changes its course to southwestward.

It flows through the eastern portion of this valley following the Kittatinny Mountains, until it finally finds a passage through the range at the Delaware Water Gap.

At the Water Gap the river turns and flows in a southerly direction across the Appalachian plain to the "South Mountains" below Easton, from whence it flows through a region of tableland elevated 300 to 400 feet above the level of the river.

At Trenton, an 8-foot fall occurs and from that point it becomes a wide tidal river, flooding and ebbing between shores, which are in many places only low banks of sand and gravel, and in others broad marshes covered with reeds and grass. It maintains these characteristics all the way to its wide estuary, the Delaware Bay.

The length of the river from headwaters to the Capes is about 375 miles. The total watershed drained is about 13,600 square miles, of which 3070 square miles are above Port Jervis, 6800 square miles above Trenton, and 10,002 square miles above the junction of the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers, including the Schuylkill watershed.

A map of the entire watershed of the Delaware River and its tributaries, drawing M-10, will be found in the Appendix.

The waters of the tidal portion of the Delaware River and Bay are a combination of the salt water of the Atlantic Ocean which enters the bay through the Capes, and the fresh water of the Delaware River and its tributaries which discharge into the river and bay. The salinity of the water resulting from this combination is extremely variable, both as to location and for different periods of the year, and chiefly depends upon the amount of fresh water discharged by the streams.

The Delaware River from Trenton to approximately Philadelphia is fresh at all times. In contrast to this, and representing the other extreme, the lower regions of the estuary, extending from the Capes to approximately Artificial Island, a short distance below New Castle, is of high salinity throughout the year, ranging from nearly pure sea water at the Capes to a somewhat reduced, but still high degree of salinity near the upper limit of this section.

Between these two extremes, there is a stretch of river approximately 50 miles long, on both sides of the Pennsylvania-Delaware State line, within which large variations of salinity take place throughout the year, and it is this section of the river around which the present investigation was chiefly centered.

The invasion of salinity into this section of the river is a natural phenomenon which occurs annually, but the length of invasion and the degree of salinity reached at any given point along the river, varies from year to year and from time to time, depending on the variation and seasonable distribution of fresh water flow. This being so, the most accurate determination of streamflow in the Delaware River and its tributaries became of paramount importance, and this part of the investigation was carried out with the utmost care, and with the exclusive use of authentic information only.

Streamflow

All streamflow records for the period from January 1, 1930 to date were furnished by the Chief Engineer of the Pennsylvania Water and Power Resources Board, prepared in cooperation with the District Engineer of the Surface Water Resources Branch of the U. S. Geological Survey at Harrisburg, Pa.

Before commencing this work, a reconnaissance survey over the watershed of the Delaware River, beginning in Pennsylvania in the neighborhood of Morrisville and extending down through Delaware and thence back on the New Jersey bank, was made in June 1931 by the State Hydrographer of Pennsylvania and two engineers of the U. S. Geological Survey.

The purpose of this reconnaissance was to determine if it be practical and necessary to establish other gauging stations besides those already in operation, on tributaries of the Delaware River and Bay in the States of Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey, also to make observations of the drainage areas and to recommend a method for establishing the rate of flow of ungauged tributaries from the rate of flow of gauged streams.

As a result of this reconnaissance survey, eleven (11) new stream gauging stations, both of the automatic and staff gauge type, were installed on the more important tributaries of the Delaware River between Trenton and the Capes. These new gauging stations were operated and maintained during the entire length of the salinity survey.

For the period from February 24, 1913 to January 1, 1930, the run-off records of the Delaware River at Trenton were used as published in Bulletin 33, prepared by the Department of Conservation and Development of the State of New Jersey in cooperation with the U. S. Geological Survey, also Water Supply Paper 681, the data furnished by the District Engineer of the U. S. Geological Survey at Trenton, N. J.

For the period from January 1, 1907 to February 24, 1913, or previous to the installation of the stream gauging station at Trenton, the discharge records at Riegelsville, as published in Bulletin 33, were used from which the flow at Trenton was computed in the ratio of the respective drainage areas.

No discharge records of tributaries below Trenton were available for the entire period prior to January 1, 1930, and it was necessary to develop flow relation diagrams and analytic equations, by means of which the flow of the Delaware River, including all tributaries, could be computed if the flow at Trenton was known. A photostatic copy of one of these flow relation diagrams, drawing C-63, for computing the flow of the Delaware River, at and including the Schuylkill River, is included in the Appendix.

The streamflow in the Delaware River and its tributaries is characterized by marked cyclic variations. Most of the streamflow occurs in the winter and early spring months of each year, while during the late summer and early fall months a protracted period of very low flows takes place in nearly every year.

These cyclic variations in streamflow are shown, in graphical form, on a Hydrograph, drawing C-34, attached to the Appendix. This Hydrograph, arranged by calendar years, shows the monthly and yearly mean discharge of the Delaware River at Trenton, N. J. from 1914 to 1933 inclusive, or the entire period for which streamflow records are available at that gauging station.

The outstanding features of this Hydrograph are the following:

Mean discharge for 20 years	11,300 c.f.s.
Minimum yearly mean—Year 1930	7,800 c.f.s.
Maximum yearly mean—Year 1927	16,500 c.f.s.
Minimum monthly mean—Oct. 1930 and Sep. 1932	1,960 c.f.s.
Maximum monthly mean—April 1916	36,200 c.f.s.
Minimum day—Sep. 18 and 22, 1932	1,400 c.f.s.
Maximum day—August 25, 1933	136,000 c.f.s.

The distribution of flow throughout the year, as indicated on the Hydrograph, shows extremely wide variations, inasmuch as during the summer and fall months of each year, only a small percentage of the total seasonal streamflow occurs.

The following are averages for the 20-year period from 1914 to 1933 inclusive:

2 Dryest consecutive months	5.9% of mean yearly flow
3 Dryest consecutive months	10.0% of mean yearly flow
4 Dryest consecutive months	15.4% of mean yearly flow
5 Dryest consecutive months	21.5% of mean yearly flow
6 Dryest consecutive months	29.0% of mean yearly flow

The distribution of flow for the dryest periods during the same 20 years, counting consecutive months only, shows even greater variations, which were as follows:

2 Dryest months in 1932	3.5% of total yearly flow
3 Dryest months in 1922	6.3% of total yearly flow
4 Dryest months in 1922	9.7% of total yearly flow
5 Dryest months in 1922	13.2% of total yearly flow
6 Dryest months in 1930	18.8% of total yearly flow

Our studies have definitely established that the distribution of flow throughout the year is one of the main factors governing the advance and retreat of salinity, regardless of the total run-off for the year. If, for instance, the total discharge for any one year could be so distributed as to maintain a uniform flow throughout the year, no saline water would ever reach the Pennsylvania-Delaware State line. However, with only a small percentage of the yearly total flow spread over several months, thus causing a large flow deficiency, an appreciable advance of salinity into Pennsylvania during such low flow periods is inevitable.

Evaporation and Precipitation

On July 1, 1931, two evaporation and meteorological stations were established at Breakwater Harbor near the Capes, and at Reedy Island in the Delaware River, about 15 miles south of Wilmington, Del. They were installed for the purpose of determining the rate of evaporation and precipitation over the large surface area of the Delaware River and Bay.

These observation stations were installed and operated through the courtesy of the Philadelphia office of the U. S. Weather Bureau, and provided with standard equipment of the Weather Bureau. The contents of the evaporation tanks were replenished from time to time so as to maintain approximately a uniform salt concentration of the water, the same as in the adjacent bay and river.

These two evaporation stations were kept in continuous operation from July 1, 1931 until November 1, 1933.

Use was also made of the Climatological Data Sheets published by the various Weather Bureaus of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, for determining, from day to day, the mean precipitation over the superficial area of the Delaware River and Bay.

The results of our studies of evaporation and precipitation and their application to streamflow, may be summed up as follows:

(1) The effect of evaporation in the upper portions of the estuary is negligible, due to the comparatively small area involved.

(2) While the evaporation from the surface area of the Delaware Bay reaches larger proportions, it was definitely established that, over a given period, the total precipitation and evaporation are very nearly equal thus offsetting any effects that may have on streamflow and salinity movements.

The computed results of daily evaporation and precipitation, and their application to streamflow, are shown, in tabulated form, on 36 charts, attached to the "Monthly Progress Reports," but not included in the present report.

Tides and Tidal Characteristics

The following is a brief abstract from U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey Special Publication No. 111, quoted merely for the purpose of a clearer understanding of the effects of tides and tidal movements upon salinity movements:

"The tide is the name given to the alternate rising and falling of the level of the sea which at most places occurs twice daily. The striking feature of the tide is its intimate relation to the movements of the moon. High water and low water at any given place follow the moon's meridian passage by a nearly constant interval, and since the moon in its apparent movement around the earth crosses a given meridian, on the average, 50 minutes later each day, the tide at most places likewise comes later each day by 50 minutes, on the average. The tidal day, like the lunar day, therefore, has an average length of 24 hours and 50 minutes."

"In its rising and falling, the tide is accompanied by a horizontal forward and backward movement of the water called the tidal current. The two movements—the vertical rise and fall of the tide and the horizontal forward and backward movement of the tidal current—are intimately related, forming parts of the same phenomenon brought about by the tidal forces of sun and moon."

"It is necessary, however, to distinguish clearly between tide and tidal current, for the relation between them is not a simple one, nor is it everywhere the same. At one place a strong current may accompany a tide having a very moderate rise and fall, while at another place a like rise and fall may be accompanied by a very weak current. Furthermore, the time relations between current and tide vary widely from place to place. For the sake of clearness, therefore, tide should be used to designate the vertical movement of the water and tidal current the horizontal movement."

"With respect to the rise and fall of the water due to the tide, high water and low water have precise meanings. They refer not so much to the height of the water as to the phase of the tide. High water is the maximum height reached by each rising tide and low water the minimum height reached by each falling tide."

"Whatever the height of the water, when the rise of the tide ceases and the fall is to begin, the tide is at high water; and when the fall of the tide ceases and the rise is to begin, the tide is at low water."

"In its rising and falling, the tide does not move at a uniform rate. From low water the tide begins rising, very slowly at first, but at a constantly increasing rate for about three hours, when the rate of rise is a maximum. The rise then continues at a constantly decreasing rate for the following three hours, when high water is reached and the rise ceases. The falling tide behaves in a similar manner, the rate of fall being least immediately after high water, but increasing constantly for about three hours, when it is at a maximum, and then decreasing for a period of three hours until low water is reached."

"The range of the tide at any given point is not constant but varies from day to day; indeed, it is exceptional to find consecutive ranges equal. Obviously changing meteorological conditions will find reflection in variations of range, but the principal variations are due to astronomic causes, being brought about by variations in the position of the moon relative to the earth and sun."

"The variation in the strength of the current from day to day is approximately proportional to the corresponding change in the range of the tide."

"In the change of direction of flow from flood to ebb, and vice versa, the tidal current goes through a period of slack water or zero velocity. Obviously, this period of slack is but momentary, and graphically it is represented by the instant when the current curve cuts the zero line of velocities. For a brief period each side of slack water, however, the current is very weak, and in ordinary usage "slack water" denotes not only the instant of zero velocity but also the period of weak current."

"To give slack water in its ordinary usage a definite meaning, we may define it to be the period during which the velocity of the current is less than one-tenth of a knot. Velocities less than one-tenth of a knot may generally be disregarded for practical purposes, and such velocities are, moreover, difficult to measure either with float or with current meter."

"In general, the duration of slack water is a function of the strength of current—the stronger the current the less the duration of slack. This period of weak current may be considered to last from 3 to 24 minutes, depending on the strength of the current."

This ends the quotation from Special Publication No. 111 of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

During the present investigation, the U. S. Engineer Office, Philadelphia, was maintaining the following automatic tide recording stations at various points along the Delaware River and Bay, from the Capes to Trenton:

1. Lewes (Capes)
2. Brandywine Shoal Light
3. Miah Maull Shoal Light
4. Ship John Shoal Light
5. Artificial Island
6. Reedy Point
7. New Castle, Del.
8. Fort Mifflin
9. Philadelphia, Pa.
10. Torresdale, Pa.
11. Burlington, N. J.
12. Florence, N. J.
13. Bordentown, N. J.
14. Trenton, N. J.

From the continuous tide records obtained at these stations, "Summary Sheets" are prepared in the U. S. Engineer Office, giving the time and elevation of H.W. and L.W. of the tides as they occur at each station. From these Summary Sheets copies were made of such portions as were required in our work.

Samples were usually collected at all stages of the tide and at various points in the river. The actual tidal heighth at the time and place of collection of each sample was determined in strict accordance with the method used by the U. S. Engineers, who also gave us their fullest cooperation in this work.

The datum used by the U. S. Engineers in all tidal work along the Delaware River and Bay, was established in 1879 and represents "Mean Low Water" at Marcus Hook obtained from observations extending over a period of several years. Zero of the U. S. Engineer's Datum is 2.90 feet below "Mean Sea Level" at Sandy Hook.

The tides at New Castle are fairly typical for the entire estuary, the heights and ranges being very nearly the same at all other places along the river, and the shape of the tidal waves almost identical, as shown on our drawing C-27 entitled "Tide Characteristics—Delaware Estuary." This drawing, however, is not included in the present report.

In estuaries of fairly uniform width and depth, the rise and fall of the tide decreases in traveling upstream, due to the frictional resistance at the bottom and sides of the channel and the work done against the river current. In the Delaware, however, the width is uniformly contracting and the energy of the tidal impulse is concentrated into smaller and smaller volumes, thus overcoming the range-decreasing effect of friction, with the result that the tidal characteristics do not materially change in the upstream progress of the tidal wave. This is a unique characteristic of the Delaware Estuary.

Tidal action is one of the principal factors governing the advance and retreat of salinity, and is of equal importance to streamflow. If it were not for the action of the tide, there would probably be no salinity problem.

The effect of tidal action is clearly shown by the variations of salinity coinciding with the flood and ebb of the tide. As the tides rise and fall in flood and ebb, tidal flows of varying magnitude are created, the purlasting action of which cause a mixing and accelerated diffiusion of the more saline waters from the bay and lower parts of the river, with the fresh waters brought down by the Delaware River and its tributaries. This action of the tides exerts a positive and montinuous tendency to push saline waters to points farther upstream.

Opposing to this action, the flow of fresh water is at all times exerting a tendency to push the advancing saline waters farther downstream. It is the relative magnitude of these opposing forces which governs the advance or retreat of salinity. If the streamflow at any given point is not sufficient to counteract the force of tidal action, salinity will advance upstream, and vice versa.

The daily fluctuations of the tide, both as to range and height, as recorded by the automatic tide gauge at New Castle, Del., are shown in graphical form on drawing C-47, entitled "Effect of Streamflow and Tidal Action on Salinity Movements—Year 1932." A copy of this drawing will be found in the Appendix. Similar drawings for the remaining years of the Salinity Survey have also been prepared, but they are not included in the present report.

Salinity Determinations

The term "Salinity," as commonly used, means the total number of parts of chemical compounds of the same composition as found in sea salt, dissolved in one million parts of the sample, abbreviated "p.p.m.'. But salinity is also a definite function of the chloride content of the water analyzed, and in the present investigation, Cl, or chlorine in the form of chlorides, was used exclusively as a measure of ocean salinity.

At the beginning of the survey, chemical analyses were made of several groups of samples containing pure or nearly pure sea water. The object of these analyses was to establish the existing ratio between the chlorine content and total dissolved solids, or sea salt, in pure sea water as found in the Atlantic Ocean. This ratio was found to be about 1:1.811.

The method and technique used in the analysis for chlorine in the samples of water collected from the Delaware River and Bay, was in strict accordance with the "Standard Methods of Water Analysis, Sixth Edition, 1925," sponsored, approved and published jointly by the American Public Health Association and the American Water Works Association.

Chemical titration of samples of river water was used exclusively to measure salinity contents. However, in order to obtain a continuous record of salinity variations between samplings, also to determine the general trend of salinity variations and to serve as a guide in the field work, through an instant knowledge of when and where to commence samplings, observations were also made with an automatic electrical resistance and temperature recorder, which was permanently mounted on the survey boat.

It is of interest to note that this is the first instance where the electrical conductivity method of indirect salinity determinations was used in supplementing the usual method in a survey of this character, and the advantages of obtaining a continuous record of salinity variations, in addition to the usual method of taking occasional samples, were clearly demonstrated.

In general, the electrical method of indirect salinity determinations is based on the fact that the resistance to the flow of an electrical current, between metal electrodes immersed in water, varies with the concentration of salt in the water. However, the electrical resistance of the water also changes with its temperature, as well as with the concentration of salt in it, and in order to compensate for this variation, an electrical resistance temperature recorder was also used to determine the exact temperature of the water.

Both the resistance and temperature recorder, were so constructed as to furnish, automatically, continuous records extending over the entire length of the observations.

Both recorders were operated by alternating current, furnished by a gasoline-driven generator. The electrodes were placed in a special steel cage, which could be lowered or raised to any desired depth of the water, by means of a wire rope to which the insulated conducting cables were attached.

The resistance recorder was calibrated against actual titrations of water samples of varying degrees of salinity. Nomographic charts were also prepared by means of which the measured resistances and temperatures, as recorded by the apparatus, could be readily converted into salinity, expressed in terms of parts per million of chlorine. These calibration curves and conversion charts are not included in the present report.

The apparatus was permanently installed in the forward cabin of the survey boat, by means of a special spring suspension. It was also used on the pilot boat "M. S. Quay" of the Board of Navigation, and on the "Vidette" of the U. S. Engineer Office. Several 2-day trips to the Capes were made with the latter boat, and continuous records were obtained with the apparatus, both on the way down as well as returning, also while anchored in the bay during the night.

Collection of Samples at Fixed Points

Through the courtesy of the U. S. Lighthouse Service, samples of water were collected at the following lighthouses, from the Capes to Reedy Island (about 15 miles below Wilmington, Del.):

Harbor of Refuge Light
Miah Maull Shoal Light
Ship John Shoal Light
Old Reedy Island Light

Samplings at these lighthouses were commenced on August 24, 1931 and continued to date.

Samples were collected every Monday at high water slack and low water slack. They were then collected by the lighthouse tender "Iris" at regular intervals, and deposited at the Edgemoor base station, from where they were transferred to our store room at the Chester Waterworks, to be titrated by the Chief Chemist of the Pennsylvania Department of Health.

The titration results of the lighthouse samples served as a background for showing the varying salinity conditions in the lower reaches of the estuary. In general, the salinity in the Bay is less subject to sudden fluctuations than the regions farther upstream, and it was considered sufficient to make only weekly observations in this part of the estuary.

The results of these salinity observations were correlated with the fresh water flow into the Bay and are shown on eleven (11) drawings, each covering three calendar months. These drawings, however, are not included in the present report.

Through the courtesy of the Commanding Officer at Fort DuPont, Delaware City, arrangements were made for the daily collection of samples at Fort Delaware, Pea Patch Island (about 9 miles below Wilmington, Del.), by one of the guards of the post. Top and bottom samples were collected daily (except Sunday) from the end of the wharf, close to the navigation channel, at high water slack and low water slack.

The samples collected at this station, being located well within the zone of greatest salinity variations, were particularly valuable in determining the movements of Isochlors, or lines of equal salinity. They also furnished one fixed point for all salinity profiles, not requiring conversion, since the samples were taken at high water slack.

The results of salinity observations at Fort Delaware, commencing November 7, 1931 and continued to date, were correlated with the fresh water flow of the Delaware River, at and including the Christiana River, and are shown on ten (10) drawings, each covering three calendar months. These drawings are not included in the present report.

At times of extreme advances during protracted low flow periods, samples were collected at Fort Mifflin, just below the mouth of the Schuylkill River, through the courtesy of the U. S. Engineer Office, Philadelphia.

At such times of extreme salinity advances, samples at high water slack were also collected, by our own force, at Buoy 4-C opposite Chester, on all days when the survey boat was not engaged in other field work. The results of these observations are shown on three (3) individual drawings, but are not included in this report.

Tidal Cycle Diagrams

For the purpose of correlating the rise and fall of salinity, at any fixed point in the river, with the rise and fall of the tide, a large number of so-called "Tidal Cycle Diagrams" were obtained in the course of this survey. These observations were made at various points in the river, under varying tidal and fresh water flow conditions, and covering a wide range of salinity variations.

The boat was anchored close to the navigation channel for about 13 hours, covering one complete cycle of the tide from low water to low water, that is to say, one complete flood tide and its companion ebb tide. During this entire period, hourly samples were collected from the top, middle and bottom of the river and, in addition, observations were also made with the electrical conductivity apparatus.

In order to obtain continuous records of salinity changes at various depths of the river, the electrodes of the conductivity apparatus were first kept near the top for fifteen minutes, then lowered to the bottom for fifteen minutes, and finally raised to mid-depth for another fifteen minutes. The same procedure was then repeated to the very end of the cycle, and after connecting the corresponding sections of the diagram, three distinct curves were obtained which represented continuous top, middle and bottom salinities for the entire duration of the tidal cycle.

A blueprint copy of a typical diagram, R-29-C, obtained with the conductivity apparatus in the above described manner, will be found in the Appendix.

Current velocity observations were also made in connection with all tidal cycle diagrams, by taking hourly measurements with a current meter at the top, mid-depth and bottom of the river, with additional measurements at half-hour intervals near mid-tide, the period of greatest current velocity.

During a number of tidal cycles, transverse observations were also made, for the purpose of determining the variations in salinity and current velocities from shore to shore. Several buoys, held in place by suitable anchors, were placed at approximately equal intervals along the section, and their location determined by means of a land sextant. While the survey boat was anchored at the key station near the channel, where a record of the tidal cycle was obtained, frequent trips were made with an outboard motor boat to the various buoys, collecting water samples at each of them, at the same time making current velocity observations.

The use of the conductivity apparatus in connection with tidal cycle investigations proved to be of decided advantage, since the continuous records disclosed certain characteristics of the salinity cycle, which could not be detected by the usual method of occasional samplings. The records show, for instance, that the rise and fall of salinity at the time of greatest current velocity, or about halfway between high and low water, is not uniform but of a most erratic character. This is evidently due to the violent mixing action of the tidal current during these periods, and any sample taken at that time is likely to be misleading.

Guided by the electrical conductivity record, however, the general trend of salinity variations was readily determined, and any sample which showed excessive departures from this trend, was then discounted.

With the use of the titration results of the samples collected during these investigations, and guided by the electrical conductivity records, drawings were then prepared, showing the relation of tidal movement to salinity variations and to current velocities. A sample specimen of these diagrams, drawing C-15, is attached to the Appendix.

On this drawing, the stage of the tide, furnished by the U. S. Engineers, and current velocities obtained in the field, are shown in proper relation to the salinity observations. These diagrams show that, as the tide rises and falls during the cycle, the salinity also rises and falls in a similar manner. However, the maximum salinity does not occur at the highest point of the tide, but about one hour later, or at approximately 80% of the ebb tide. This point coincides with the so-called "high water slack," when the current ceases to flow upstream and, after a brief rest, is reversed into a downstream current. This relation of maximum salinity and stage of the tide is also evidenced in the "Tide-Salinity Relation Curve," shown in the upper right hand corner of drawing C-15. It will be noted that, at about 80% of the ebb tide, as given on the vertical scale in terms in per cent of tidal range, the salinity has reached its maximum, as given on the horizontal scale in terms of per cent of average chlorine at high water slack.

Similar tide-salinity relation curves were developed from each of the large number of tidal cycle diagrams obtained in the course of the survey, also from those obtained by the U. S. Engineers. They were developed for the purpose of converting all salinity observation which, of necessity, had to be made at all stages of the tide, into mean salinities at high water slack.

These conversion diagrams played an important part in our investigation, since all Isochlors, salinity profiles, etc., were made to represent the farthest advance of salinity at high water slack, and it was necessary, therefore, to convert all salinity observations that were made at other stages of the tide, into the same terms.

The selection of salinity at high water slack as a measure of salinity movements, was made after a careful study of the tidal cycle diagrams. In making this study, it became evident that, while the tidal current is flowing, the salinity conditions in the river are so erratic and unstable, principally due to the mixing action of the tides, also to the large variation of current velocities at various depths of the river, as to make it inadvisable to use the existing salinity at such stages as an index for the advance or retreat of salinity.

At high water slack, however, the tidal flow ceases for a brief period, the salinity has reached its maximum, with little or no fluctuations at the peak, and the selection of this point of equilibrium as the measure of salinity movements, appeared to be fully justified.

Altogether, 104 tidal cycle diagrams, both our own and those obtained by the U. S. Engineers, were studied, and tide-salinity relation curves developed from each of them.

While these studies have shown that each tidal cycle has its own characteristics, depending on a number of modifying factors, it was possible to form certain groups of cycles having somewhat similar characteristics, and then to develop average tide-salinity relation curves, which could be used for converting all salinity observations falling within the range of the respective groups.

The following ten (10) average conversion curves have been developed in this manner, for various salinity ranges at high water slack:

Curve	I	20	to	100	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	II	100	to	200	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	III	200	to	400	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	IV	400	to	1,000	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	V	1,000	to	2,000	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	VI	2,000	to	4,000	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	VII	4,000	to	6,000	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	VIII	6,000	to	10,000	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	IX	10,000	to	14,000	p.p.m. at H.W.S.
Curve	X	14,000	to	16,000	p.p.m. at H.W.S.

Two sample specimen of these conversion curves, No. III and VIII, will be found in the Appendix.

Longitudinal Salinity Profiles

A large number of longitudinal runs with the survey boat were made in the course of the survey, for the purpose of determining the salinity gradient along the river channel.

During each run, a continuous record was obtained with the conductivity apparatus, both on the trip down the river as well as returning. In addition, top and bottom samples were collected at frequent intervals, after stopping the boat at certain predetermined places, identified by one of the numerous channel buoys maintained by the Lighthouse Service of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

At each stopping place the exact time was noted when the samples were taken so as to determine the stage of the tide at the time of sampling, which was later obtained from the tide records of the U. S. Engineer Office.

Most of these longitudinal runs were made between Chester and Artificial Island (about 17 miles below Wilmington, Del.), covering the so-called marginal zone of salinity. Some of the runs, however, were extended well into the Delaware Bay, and at times of extreme salinity advances, they were carried well above Chester toward Philadelphia, and beyond.

The U. S. Engineers also made numerous longitudinal runs, some of them as far as the Capes, and the titration results of the samples collected during these runs were made use of in our studies.

Altogether, 290 longitudinal runs were made in the course of the survey, both our own and those by the U. S. Engineers.

Salinity observations during any longitudinal run are, of necessity, made at all stages of the tide, and a salinity profile based on these observations would be meaningless, unless reduced to some common basis such as high water slack. It was necessary, therefore, to convert all observations accordingly, which was done by means of the tide-salinity relation curves referred to above.

A sample drawing showing several salinity profiles, converted to high water slack in the above manner, drawing C-38, is attached to the Appendix. For the sake of clearness, only a limited number of profiles have been grouped together on any one drawing, so as to avoid their running together. Each profile is identified by the date on which the run was made and the sequence, or chronological order, is indicated by consecutive numbers in circles.

As stated, before, these profiles represent the farthest advance of salinity at high water slack, approximately in the center of the channel. They do not represent a condition actually existing at any given time, but rather the succession of maximum salinities, occurring at the various stations at various times, as the crest of the tidal wave advances upstream. In other words, these profiles are envelope curves of maximum salinities at high water slack.

For the purpose of enlarging the lower parts of the profiles, they have been plotted logarithmically. The Pennsylvania-Delaware State line is prominently shown, also the 200 p.p.m. line, since this salt concentration was adopted to serve as an index for the advance or retreat of the entire "arginal zone of salinity." The latter is defined as that portion of the Delaware River extending from upland water containing no sea salts, to a concentration of about 1000 p.p.m. of chlorine.

This definition was used by the Pennsylvania Engineers in the Delaware River litigation, the Board of Engineers of the Delaware River Conservation Association, and also in the early stages of this survey. However, it was soon realized that the stretch of river between these limits, at certain times, may be very long and at other times relatively short, and that a proper correlation of salinity movements, varying rates of streamflow, tidal action, and other factors, could not be made under these circumstances.

In view of the above, it was decided to determine, and to use as an index in the study of the movements of the marginal zone, a concentration of salinity which would be known to be about the beginning of harmful influence upon public water supplies, also upon the private water supplies of industrial establishments, in their use of water derived from the tidal portion of the Delaware River, for process, steam raising and condenser purposes.

Mr. Robert Spurr Weston, Consulting Engineer of Boston, Mass., was engaged to make a study of this problem and to report as to the concentration of salinity which would begin to be harmful to the above mentioned public and private water supplies, within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

The following is a quotation of the concluding paragraphs from Mr. Westons report dated March 30, 1932, entitled "Index of Tolerance of Chlorides in the Delaware River";

> "While some users may tolerate for a few months in a term of years brackish water with more than 1,000 p.p.m. of chlorine, others may be affected by chlorine contents below 100 p.p.m. Disproportionate weight, however, must be given to the requirements of the more seriously affected users. However, it seems unwise in any case to set the index of tolerance as low as 100 p.p.m."
> "Taking everything into consideration, we advise the use of 200 p.p.m. of chlorine as the index of salinity, or index of tolerance, of sea water in terms of chlorine, and recommend that this figure be used for determining the position of the zone between salt and fresh water in the Delaware estuary and for purposes of computation."

In accordance with this recommendation, 200 p.p.m. of chlorine was used in all our studies for determining the position of the marginal zone of salinity.

Effect of Streamflow and Tidal Action on Salinity Movements

With the use of the salinity profiles, tidal cycle diagrams, samplings at fixed points and other salinity observations, together with those made by the U. S. Engineers and the Engineering Board of the Delaware River Conservation Association, it was possible to prepare summary sheets showing, in graphical form, the relation of the various factors which govern the movements of salinity in the Delaware River and Bay.

One of these summary sheets, drawing C-47, entitled 'Effect of Streamflow and Tidal Action on Salinity Movements—Year 1932," will be found in the Appendix.

The daily inflow of upland waters into the Delaware River, corrected for evaporation and precipitation over the water surface of the river, is graphically shown in the upper half of the drawing. The heavy lines show the daily flow of the Delaware River and its tributaries, at and including the Schuylkill River. There is also shown, in lighter lines, the flow at Trenton, N. J.

For the purpose of readily visualizing the parallelism of fresh water flow and salinity movements, the hydrograph was inverted, that is to say, the daily flows were plotted so as to point towards the bottom of the sheet, instead of upwards as customary.

Immediately below the hydrograph are shown, in graphical form, the daily mean air temperatures over and adjacent the Delaware River and Bay, obtained by averaging the daily temperatures at Philadelphia, Pa., Marcus Hook, Pa., Delaware City, Del., Milford, Del., Bridgeton, N. J. and Trenton, N. J., as published in the Climatological Data Sheets of the various Weather Bureaus of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Tidal action is a basic factor governing salinity conditions and is of equal importance to streamflow. Therefore, the daily fluctuations of the tide, both as to range and height, as recorded by the automatic tide gauge at New Castle, Del., are next shown on this drawing.

On the lower half of the sheet, the salinity movements during the year of 1932, all shown in the form of "Isochlors" or lines of equal salinity, are presented. These Isochlors represent the farthest advance of saline waters of a given chlorine content at high water slack, approximately in the center of the river channel. The concentrations selected are those of 50, 100, 200, 500, 1000, 2000, 5000 and 8000 parts of chlorine in one million (1,000,000) parts of water. The 200 p.p.m. Isochlor is shown in a heavier line than the others, this concentration being the index of tolerance of chlorine in the Delaware River, as recommended by Mr. Robert Spurr Weston, Consulting Engineer.

At both ends of the chart, scales of midstream and channel stations are given, also the names of adjacent cities, towns and other identifying localities. The Pennsylvania-Delaware State line is prominently shown by a heavy line so as to better visualize the extent and degree of saline invasion into Pennsylvania.

These Isochlors represent the general trend, or major movements of salinity, and no attempt was made to show daily fluctuations. Even if it were possible to do so, it would serve no practical purpose to show all of the pulsating and extremely irregular salinity movements which take place four times each day with the flood and ebb of the tide. It is the general trend of the movements, either upstream or downstream, which is of importance and all Isochlors have been developed accordingly.

The salinity conditions in the Delaware River during any one year are characterized by marked cyclic variations, similar to those of streamflow. The maximum retreat of salinity and the farthest downstream advance of fresh water occurs during the flood season of winter and spring. As the streamflow gradually decreases with the approach of summer, saline waters gradually advance upstream until the maximum extent of advance and degree of salinity is reached in the late summer and fall months. After the maximum salinity for the season is reached, it gradually decreases at all points and retreats downstream until it again reaches a point of maximum retreat during the following winter and spring.

This cyclic variation also took place during the year of commencing October 7th and lasting over a period of several days. The sudden increase in the discharge of upland water is shown by the following run-off figures, all referred to the Delaware River at and including Schuylkill River:

October 4	2,200 c.f.s.
October 5	2,570 c.f.s.
October 6	6,850 c.f.s.
October 7	35,800 c.f.s.
October 8	67,000 c.f.s.
October 9	33,000 c.f.s.
October 10	19,700 c.f.s.
October 11	13,600 c.f.s.

During the four (4) days of greatest flow, from October 7th to 10th inclusive, a total of nearly fourteen (14) billion cubic feet of fresh water had entered the Delaware River above Chester, a volume sufficient to fill the entire river bed, at mid-tide, from Trenton to Chester, a distance of about 50 miles.

In view of the fact that the water level of the Delaware River does not materially change with streamflow, except perhaps in the farthest upstream reaches near Trenton, the volume of water which occupied the river bed from Trenton to Chester before the onrush of the flood waters, was of course displaced, and by the end of October 10th, occupied a stretch of the river somewhere between Chester and New Castle, Del.

While the process of successive water displacements from Trenton all the way to the Capes may be readily computed with the aid of the available river cubatures, it is not possible to arrive at the corresponding salt displacements by this simple method. The mixing effect of the tides, the range of tides which changes from day to day, specific gravity differentials, the direction and velocity of prevailing winds, and a number of other factors have different effects on the movements of salinity, some of them accelerating and some retarding.

It is significant, however, that the rapidly rising discharge of fresh water after the heavy rainstorms during the early part of October was almost at once followed by a sudden drop of chlorine all along the river. For instance, on October 5th, about 1000 p.p.m. of chlorine at high water slack were observed at Chester, whereas on October 9th, in the same location, only about 50 p.p.m. were found, and even this small amount disappeared entirely a few days later. Similar reductions were also found at other points along the river.

It becomes evident, therefore, that if comparatively large quantities of fresh water are added at different points in the river above the salt line, the effect is practically the same as if it had all been added at the very point of the salt line. In other words, fresh water displaces river water bulk for bulk, and the resultant salinity movements are almost instantaneous.

While the rapid retreat of salinity in the early part of October was unquestionably due to the rapid displacement of existing saline waters by fresh water, it is also evident that the exceedingly swift rate of retreat was partly due to other causes. At the beginning of the general retreats, salt had reached an extremely advanced position and the river was, therefore, in a most sensitive condition. In this condition, even a comparatively small addition of fresh water would have caused retreat and, by adding unusually large quantities, the recession was proportionally accelerated. It will be shown later that the rate of advance or retreat of salinity for various rates of fresh water flow is largely dependent on the location of the marginal zone in the river. In an extremely advanced position, even a comparatively small amount of increased flow will cause appreciable recession, while if the marginal zone is in a receded position, far down the river, even a large increase in streamflow will cause only a slight additional retreat.

This phenomenon may be compared with the action of a coil spring, fixed on one end and with forces of varying magnitude applied to the other end. The force of the spring may be regarded as representing the even present tendency of the tides to move saline waters upstream, and the varying forces on the other end representing streamflow. In the extreme compressed position of the spring, even a very large added force will be unable to cause additional contraction, whereas in the expanded position even a small force applied to the free end will cause appreciable contraction. Likewise, large streamflows when occurring at a time of extreme recession of salinity, will cause only a slight retreat, whereas even moderate fresh water flows, when occurring at an advanced position of the marginal zone of salinity, will cause an appreciable recession.

The rate of recession for a given rate of streamflow, therefore, is variable and diminishes progressively from a maximum in the most advanced position of the marginal zone, to zero when an equilibrium between the two opposing forces of streamflow and tides has been reached. The same holds true in the case of advancing salinity but in reversed order.

The year of 1932 may be said to be a normal flow year. The mean for that year at Trenton, N. J., was 11,100 c.f.s., as compared with 11,300 c.f.s., representing the mean discharge from 1914 to 1933 inclusive, a period of 20 years, as shown on Hydrograph C 34. The distribution of flow throughout the year, however, shows considerable variations which were as follows:

January to June inclusive	58½%	of total for year
July to September inclusive ..	7%	of total for year
October to December inclusive .	34½%	of total for year

This shows that the distribution of flow throughout the year is one of the main factors governing the advance and retreat of salinity, regardless of the total run-off for the year. If a uniform flow could have been maintained throughout 1932, amounting to 11,100 c.f.s., no saline waters would have reached the State line. However, with only 7% of the total spread over 3 months, thus causing a large flow deficiency during this period, an extreme advance of salinity was inevitable.

It will be shown later that a flow of about 5250 c.f.s., at and including the Schuylkill River, will hold the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor at the Pennsylvania-Delaware State line. It follows, therefore, that any protracted flow averaging less than 5250 c.f.s. will cause an advance of Isochlor 200 into Pennsylvania, while a protracted flow averaging more than 5250 c.f.s. will prevent an invasion of the same concentration into the State.

The length and degree of saline invasion, therefore, is directly dependent on the length of time during which the flow is averaging less than 5250 c.f.s. In other words, it is the deficiency below this flow, both in length and magnitude, which governs the invasion of salinity (200 p.p.m. and over) into Pennsylvania.

Again referring to drawing C-47, it will be noted that the length and degree of salinity invasion, at the State boundary line, during the year of 1932 was as follows:

95 days of	50 p.p.m.	and over
74 days of	100 p.p.m.	and over
65 days of	200 p.p.m.	and over
46 days of	500 p.p.m.	and over
25 days of	1000 p.p.m.	and over

Our computations show that during the low flow period of 1932, there have been 78 days when the flow of the Delaware River, at and including the Schuylkill River, averaged less than 5250 c.f.s., resulting in a flow deficiency of over 144,000 day-second-feet. It is quite evident, therefore, that this large deficiency was the immediate cause of the serious salinity invasion during that year, as shown by the Isochlors on drawing C-47.

Summary sheets, similar to drawing C-47, have also been prepared for the calendar years of 1931 and 1933, but they are not included in the present report.

Rate of Advance or Retreat of Salinity

One of the most important studies of our investigation consisted in correlating fresh water flow with the rate of advance or retreat of salinity in the tidal estuary of the Delaware River. The results of these studies are shown, in graphical form, and plotted logarithmically on the following two (2) drawings, attached to the Appendix:

C-75—Equilibrium Curve
C-76—Relation of Streamflow and Rate of Salinity Movements

The curve shown on drawing C-75 serves as a means for determining the total fresh water flow required to prevent the advance of the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor after its arrival at a given station at high water slack, approximately in the center of the river channel, and for mean tidal conditions.

The base data for this curve was obtained from the three (3) summary sheets referred to previously, showing salinity movements, in the form of Isochlors, during the years of 1931, 1932 and 1933. From these drawings the relation of streamflow and salinity movements was determined from day to day, thus giving two groups of a large number of points, identified by "advances" and "retreats," and a curve drawn along the line of separation between these two groups of points represents, therefore, a line of "Equilibrium" or "No Movements."

This Equilibrium Curve shows that the following fresh water flows are required to prevent the further advance of the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor, after its arrival at any of the following principal stations:

	Flow at and including Schuylkill	Equivalent flow at Trenton
Fort Mifflin	2950 c.f.s.	1970 c.f.s.
Chester Waterworks	4300 c.f.s.	2930 c.f.s.
Marcus Hook	5100 c.f.s.	3520 c.f.s.
Pennsylvania-Delaware State line	5250 c.f.s.	3630 c.f.s.
Edgemoor, Del.	7400 c.f.s.	5400 c.f.s.
New Castle, Del.	14,300 c.f.s.	10,300 c.f.s.

This summary shows that a flow of about 5250 c.f.s. at and including the Schuylkill, equivalent to 3630 c.f.s. at Trenton would be sufficient to hold the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor at the Pennsylvania-Delaware State line. In other words, of the streamflow in the Delaware River could be so regulated as to never fall below 3630 c.f.s. at Trenton, or 5250 c.f.s. at any including the Schuylkill River, there would be no "salinity invasion," a term used to express the advance of salinity (200 p.p.m. and over) into Pennsylvania.

It is apparent that for any particular degree of salinity at any given point in the river, there is a rate of fresh water flow which will equalize the action of the tides and prevent an advance of salinity. It follows, therefore, that if at any time the rate of flow is less than the amount required to prevent advance of a particular degree of salinity, the salinity will tend to advance to points farther upstream. If, on the other hand, the rate of flow is greater than that preventing advance, the salinity will tend to retreat to points downstream. It is obvious that, for any given degree of salinity, the rate of flow required to prevent the advance of salinity to any given point becomes smaller the farther upstream the point under consideration.

The above deductions, together with the use of the Equilibrium Curve as a basis, necessarily led to the development of a diagram correlating fresh water flow with the rate of salinity movements, as shown on drawing C-76. By means of this diagram, the advances or retreats of the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor, expressed in terms of "stations per day," may be readily determined, if the rate of fresh water flow above the marginal zone of salinity is known.

"Advances" and "retreats" refer to the change in position of the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor at high water slack, approximately in the center of the river channel, and for mean tidal conditions. The manner of using the diagram is fully described in the explanatory notes appearing on the drawing.

In determining advances and retreats from day to day, past salinity conditions during any given period may be reproduced, based on available streamflow records only. This diagram also serves as a means for reproducing any comparing salinity conditions in the Delaware River before and after the diversions and compensation releases as now proposed, or any other diversions which may be contemplated in the future.

Streamflow as Modified by New York Diversions and Releases

At the very beginning of the survey it was realized that, in order to show the effect of the proposed diversions and releases upon the movements of salinity in the Delaware River, it was essential to determine the "modified flow" caused by these diversions and releases.

These computations were time-consuming and complicated, since it was necessary to take into account a number of factors, each having a different effect on streamflow. The reservoir operations, time of transit, length of retention periods, storage capacities, determination of unit-run-offs, and the complicated interplay of diversions, releases and reservoir spills had all to be taken into consideration.

All computations were based on a diversion by the City of New York of four hundred and forty million gallons per day (440 m.g.d.), equivalent to six hundred and eighty cubic feet per second (680 c.f.s.) from the proposed impounding reservoirs.

Compensation releases were computed in accordance with the decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Delaware River Case, which provides that,

> "At any time the stage of the Delaware River falls below .50 c.s.m. at Port Jervis, New York, or Trenton, New Jersey, or both (.50 c.s.m. being equivalent to a flow of 1535 c.f.s. at Port Jervis and 3400 c.f.s. at Trenton), water shall be released from one or more of the impounding reservoirs of New York City in sufficient volume to restore the flow at Port Jervis and Trenton to .50 c.s.m., provided, however, that there is not required to be released at any time water in excess of 30% of the diversion area yield, and the diversion area yield having been ascertained to be 2.2 c.s.m., the maximum release required shall be 30% of that amount, or .66 cubic feet per second per square mile of the areas from which water is diverted."

To this may be added that, since the combined drainage areas of the two impounding reservoirs (Neversink and East Branch of Delaware) contain 440 square miles, the maximum release cannot exceed, at any time, two hundred and ninety cubic feet per second (290 c.f.s.).

The information regarding storage capacities of the proposed impounding reservoirs on the Neversink and East Branch of the Delaware, or the first stage of the development, was obtained from the Acting Chief Engineer of the Board of Water Supply, City of New York.

In making the computations of modified streamflow, the flow into the proposed New York reservoirs was taken as the same, in cubic feet per second per square mile, as the flow at Fishs Eddy on the East Branch of the Delaware River, where a gauging station is maintained by the U. S. Geological Survey.

In order to take care of the time required for the New York operations to reach Trenton, or the so-called "time of transit," a four (4) day offset in date was made. Thus, the flow at Fishs Eddy on the first of the month, also the corresponding flow from the reservoir drainage areas, was placed in the column for the fifth of the month at Trenton.

This method of making allowances for "time of transit" is the same as used in Intervenor's Exhibit No. 415, submitted in evidence in the Delaware River litigation.

It was assumed that at the beginning of the freshet period, during the early winter and spring months, the entire run-off tributary to the storage reservoirs will be retained in the reservoirs (except for the equivalent of 440 m.g.d. diverted to New York), until such times when the accumulated flows are equal to the capacity of the reservoirs.

After the storage reservoirs are completely filled, any flow into the reservoirs in excess of 440 m.g.d. was considered as "spillover," thus augmenting the flow in the Delaware River.

During the low flow periods in the late summer and fall months, when the run-off from the drainage areas tributary to the storage reservoirs is insufficient to supply the 440 m.g.d. for New York, and the compensation releases to augment the flow at Port Jervis or at Trenton, the stored waters in the reservoirs are used to make up the deficiency from day to day, bearing in mind, however, that the releases, as ordered by the U. S. Supreme Court, take precedence over the New York diversions.

All computations were made as if the two reservoirs were combined into one, having a capacity equal to their total.

Two types of work sheets were prepared for compiling all computations in a comprehensive manner. One copy of each of these work sheets is attached to the Appendix, and on one of them are shown a number of sample computations for the purpose of illustrating the various methods of computing modified streamflow. These sample computations cover four (4) cases of flow and storage conditions which are typical, but any special case which arose in the course of this work, was readily computed in a similar manner, by a combination of the several alternatives given in the instructions, which were prepared for the guidance of the engineers engaged in this work.

Altogether, the daily modified flows for 27 years (from 1907 to date) were computed in this manner, or for the entire period of available streamflow records. These computations were made under the assumption that the New York diversions and releases, as ordered by the U. S. Supreme Court, were in full force during the entire 27-year period. The results are recorded on the following work sheets, filed in this office:

Modified streamflow at Trenton	108 sheets
Modified streamflow at and including Schuylkill River	54 sheets

A copy of "Unit Measures" for converting the various units used in the streamflow and storage computations, into any desired terms, is included in the Appendix.

Effect of New York Diversions and Releases on Salinity Movements

With the aid of the diagrams for determining the rate of advance or retreat of salinity for any given rate of streamflow, a number of drawings have been prepared, showing the effect of the proposed New York diversions and releases on salinity movements in the Delaware River.

Four (4) of these drawings, representing typical flow and salinity conditions, will be found in the Appendix, identified as follows:

C-132—Effect of Diversions and Releases on Salinity Movements—Year 1932
C-130—Effect of Diversions and Releases on Salinity Movements—Year 1930
C-127—Effect of Diversions and Releases on Salinity Movements—Year 1927
C-121—Effect of Diversions and Releases on Salinity Movements—Year 1921

The daily flows of the Delaware River and its tributaries, at and including the Schuylkill River, both for natural and modified streamflow, are shown in the upper half of these drawings. For the purpose of readily visualizing the parallelism of fresh water flow and salinity movements, the hydrograph was inverted in the manner described before. The amount of daily diversions and releases, obtained from the computation sheets of modified streamflow, are clearly indicated on the hydrograph by various shadings.

Immediately below the hydorograph, the advances and retreats of salinity, both before and after diversions and releases, are shown by means of the 200 p.p.m. Isochlors, serving also as an index for the movements for the entire marginal zone of salinity. In reproducing these Isochlors, the advances and retreats, from day to day, were computed with the aid of the diagrams shown on drawing C-76, by first applying natural flow conditions and next as modified by diversions and releases. All computations were made on special work sheets, a sample specimen of which is attached to the Appendix.

The salinity invasion is represented by the area inclosed between the Isochlors and the Pennsylvania-Delaware State line. Since the abscissae are expressed in terms of days, and the ordinates in miles, their product may be properly termed as "day miles."

The general arrangement of the four drawings is similar, except that drawing C-132 covers a "Calendar Year," from January 1 to December 31, 1932, whereas each of the other three drawings cover 12-month periods commencing on April 1st of the given year and ending on March 31st of the following year. In explanation of this departure, it may be stated that, after completing the first two fo this series of drawings, it was found that, in some instances, the salinity invasion, or advance of the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor into Pennsylvania, was overlapping into the following year, thus requiring a repetition of parts of the same diagram on two separate drawings.

The starting of the 12-month periods on April 1st, also appears appropriate for the reason that at about that time the salinity in the Delaware River is usually found to have retreated to its farthest downstream location, thus marking the end of a salinity cycle, and the beginning of a new one. This 12-month period, therefore, may be properly called a "Salinity Year," because it covers one complete cycle of yearly salinity movements between extreme retreats, normally occurring in the early spring months of each year.

In selecting the four drawings accompanying the present report, it was endeavored to present two years in which the salinity advances were of extreme magnitude, one year in which there was no salinity invasion and, finally, one year of exceptional conditions (1921), where the advances and retreats, as based on modified streamflow, show a noticeable departure from the usual conditions found in all other years that have been investigated to date.

	1932	1930	1927	1921
Total Run-off	5 842 000	.....	.....	.....
Day-Second-Feet	.....	2.933.000	.....	.....
(See Note 1)	.....	.....	7 649.000	.....

Net Decrease in Flow, due to Diversions—D.S.F. ..... (See Note 3)	324.000	75.800	249,000	248,000
Percent of Total Run-off .... (See Note 4)	5.5%	2.6%	3.3 3.3%	5.0 5.0%

Improvement	65	129	none	—32
Percent Improvement, over Invasion for Natural Flow ...	12.3%	10.9%	none	—15.2%

Note 1—"Total Run-off" refers to natural flow of the Delaware River at and including the Schuylkill River, in terms of day-second-feet, for one complete "Salinity Year," commencing April 1st of the given year.

Note 2—"Flow Deficiency" is defined as the total flow which would be required to augment the natural flow of the Delaware River, at and including the Schuylkill, to a minimum of 5250 c.f.s., the rate of flow necessary to prevent the advance of the 200 p.p.m. Isochlor into Pennsylvania.

Note 3—"Net Decrease in Flow" is the amount of water impounded in the reservoirs during the entire year, less compensation releases, and water spilled over the dam after the reservoirs are filled.

Note 4—Decrease in flow caused by the N. Y. diversions, given in percent of total run-off for year of natural flow.

Note 5—"Increase in Flow" is the accumulated total of daily differences between compensation releases from the reservoirs and run-off into the reservoirs, but counting only days when the former exceeds the latter.

The above summary again shows the close relation between "flow deficiency" and "salinity invasion," as noted previously. It is quite evident that the large deficiencies during the low flow periods of 1930 and 1932 were the immediate cause of the serious salinity invasions during these years.

It is obvious, therefore, that any releases applied during such periods of low flow, will reduce the flow deficiency, and have a retarding effect on salinity advances, thus reducing the area representing salinity invasion, or the number of "day-miles." This was shown to be true in all of the 13 years investigated to date, with the exception of 1921, in which year the salinity invasion into Pennsylvania would have been increased, in spite of releases.

This apparent reversal in the beneficial effect of the compensation releases upon salinity movements, however, can be readily explained if the flow conditions during that year are analyzed. Our computations of modified streamflow show that during the late summer and early fall months of 1921, the flow at Trenton fell below 3400 c.f.s. for a considerable length of time and, accordingly, compensation releases were applied as ordered by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Delaware River Case.

Due to the fact, however, that releases are limited to a maximum of 290 c.f.s., or 30% of the reservoir diversion area yield, they were for a considerable length of time less than the run-off into the storage reservoirs, with the net result that during this period the flow at Trenton would have actually been decreased instead of increased.

This condition will always arise when the c.s.m. run-off from the reservoir drainage areas is relatively high, as compared with that of the total drainage area at Trenton. In other words, high precipitation periods, within a limited area in the upper reaches of the Delaware, if occurring at times when the run-off for the remainder of the watershed is relatively low, will cause more water to be retained in the reservoirs than released from them under the ruling of the U. S. Supreme Court, thus decreasing the flow at Trenton instead of augmenting it. The salinity in the Delaware will, therefore, advance to points farther upstream than under natural flow conditions, in spite of the releases.

It should be pointed out, however, that this condition was found in only one year, out of twenty-seven (27) investigated.

Returning to the four (4) drawings referred to above, it appeared to be desirable to show not only the total salinity invasion, in terms of day-miles, but also to determine the actual drop in chlorine at various places within the Commonwealth, due to the retarding effect of the releases. This was done by developing dual profiles at the time when the salinity advances have reached their maximum, both for natural and modified streamflow conditions.

Drawings C-132-P, C-130-P and C-121-P, enclosed in the Appendix, show such dual profiles for the years of 1932, 1930 and 1921. They are companion drawings of the salinity movement sheets for the same years. The actual drop in chlorine at any desired point along the river is represented by the ordinates between profiles, except for the year of 1921, shown on drawing C-121-P, where the ordinates represent increases in chlorine, for reasons stated before.

In the Appendix will also be found a drawing identified by C-100 entitled "Effect of Diversions and Releases on Salinity Movements, 1928 to 1933." This drawing was prepared to accompany a preliminary report on the Salinity Survey, dated September 20, 1934, and shows in a condensed form the salinity conditions in the Delaware River, without and with diversions and releases, from 1928 to 1933 inclusive. This drawing, although covering only six years, will serve to verify, temporarily, the conclusions reached at the end of this report. It is planned to prepare a similar drawing covering the entire 27-year period for which streamflow records are available, or from 1907 to date.

Uncompleted Studies

The following studies have not as yet been completed, although forming essential parts of this investigation:

1. Drawings showing the effect of diversions and releases on salinity movements for the remaining 14 years of recorded streamflow.
2. Drawing showing, in condensed form and on one continuous sheet, the salinity conditions for the entire 27-year period of recorded streamflow, both before and after diversions and releases.
3. Development of profiles at the peak of salinity advances for each of the remaining 24 years, and preparing drawings of same.
4. More extensive studies of the relation of flow deficiencies and salinity advances.

5. Flow duration curves, both for natural and modified streamflow, for use in Study No. 4.
6. Salinity duration curves, both for natural and modified streamflow, for use in Study No. 4.
7. Studies as to the probability of future occurrence of salinity invasions of a given magnitude.
8. Preparation of Final Report.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on the results of our investigations and studies to date, the following conclusions have been drawn:

(1) Protracted low flows of the Delaware River and its tributaries, will cause extreme advances of salinity, regardless of the total run-off during the year, or the preceding year.

(2) Impounding of Delaware waters in the proposed reservoirs, and diversion to the City of New York, as allowed by the U. S. Supreme Court, will cause advances of salinity beyond the points reached under natural flow conditions, but they will be confined to regions below the Pennsylvania-Delaware State line, because of the releases referred to below, and hence be of no harm to Pennsylvania's interests.

(3) The releases from the New York reservoirs, as required by the decree of the United States Supreme Court, will be of material benefit in retarding the advance of salinity during the low flow periods of each year. They will, therefore, reduce the "Salinity Invasion" into Pennsylvania and thus be of benefit to the public and private water supplies derived from the Delaware.

(4) Under abnormal flow conditions in the Delaware, when the run-off into the proposed New York reservoirs exceeds, over a protracted period, the maximum releases ordered by the U. S. Supreme Court, the benefits derived from the releases may become nil during such periods. This condition will arise only at times of protracted high precipitation, within a limited area of the Upper Delaware, if occurring at times when the run-off for the remainder of the watershed is relatively low, thus causing more water to be retained in the reservoirs than released from them. However, this would have occurred only during one year of the twenty-seven (27) investigated, and no disproportionate weight can be given to this single occurrence.

Delaware River Salinity Survey.

REPORT OF PROBATION PROGRAM COMMITTEE

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,
Governor's Office, Harrisburg, January 14, 1935.

To the Honorable, the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

I have the honor to present herewith for your consideration a report on the probation of offenders which was submitted by Hon. Philip Sterling, chairman, and the members of the Probation Program Committee.

Probation is a most hopeful means for the prevention and control of crime. In its study this committee has done a fine job. After much research and study it has drafted a proposed act, submitted herewith, which embodies the committee's major recommendations. They are as follows:

1. The maintenance of accepted standards in probation work.
2. Establishment of standard qualifications in the appointment of probation officers.
3. Definition of the duties and functions of probation officers.
4. Uniformity of probation records.

I recommend the proposed act and the recommendations of the committee to your favorable consideration.

GIFFORD PINCHOT,
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,

House of Representatives, Harrisburg, January 7, 1935.

Honorable Gifford Pinchot
Office of the Governor
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

My dear Governor:

I have the honor to submit the following report for the Probation Program Committee which you appointed in July, 1933.

In your letter to the group of Judges, psychiatrists, sociologists and criminologists whom you invited to serve on this Committee, you wrote: "I am more and more impressed with the part which the wise use of the power of probation might play in starting those who have gotten into trouble along wise ways. As yet, however, there has been little state-wide planning for the application of probation in Pennsylvania, and it seems to me such a step might well be taken now." You authorized the Committee to gather information and to work out and recommend a probation program for the Commonwealth.

On October 25, 1933, the Committee assembled in your office and later adjourned to the office of Mrs. Liveright, Secretary of Welfare, for discussion of their program.

The Committee made the following appointments: Honorable Philip Sterling, Chairman; Doctor W. T. Root, Vice Chairman; Mrs. Gertrude Marvin Williams, Executive Secretary; Honorable Paul N. Schaeffer, Program Committee Chairman.

At the next meeting, December 19, 1933, Judge Paul N. Schaeffer read the report of the Program Committee. The efforts and achievements of the Committee in the past year have followed the outline then submitted.

The first activity undertaken in connection with the organization of the Committee had been a survey of probation in 65 counties (excluding Philadelphia and Allegheny counties. This survey was in two parts: 1. A state-wide survey of probation practices and methods, based on questionnaires and reports from all counties on file in the Department, covering a period of ten years; 2. A more intensive study of four representative counties.

The survey was supervised by the Division of Research and Statistics of the Department of Welfare. Three graduate students in criminology did the field work, tabulations, etc.

This study showed the lack of uniformity of probation methods in the State. It also demonstrated that in many counties the procedure is so casual that probation may scarcely be considered to have had a fair trial. In juvenile probation, for instance, it was found that in over half of the counties probation officers never visit the child's home or school either for investigation before the case is heard nor for supervision after he is placed on probation. Such investigation and supervision are considered essential to any service that attempts to apply the real principles of probation. A summary of the survey is appended hereto.

Basing their program on the findings revealed by this survey, the Committee on Probation undertook two lines of activity, educational and legislative. In submitting the report of the program committee, Judge Schaeffer wrote, "there is a widespread interest in and concern about what is done with and for children and adults brought before the Court because of violation of law. Popular hysteria has tended to ignore the work of crime prevention which is inherent in good probation work. The most serious crimes committed by older adolescents and by adults are rooted almost entirely in earlier experiences. The quality of probation work expressed for all children and for a very large number of adults will determine to a very large degree the total amount of delinquency in any community. Good probation work therefore becomes a matter of good economy preventing an emphasis on results rather than causes and safeguarding the public against having to maintain an increasing number of children and adults in institutions and prisons at public expense."

In organizing its educational campaign, the Committee had the following objectives:

To familiarize the public with its usefulness.

To encourage the use of probation.
(a) for the control and prevention of crime.
(b) for reducing the cost of crime.

To create a realization of the necessity of maintaining high standards of service if probation is to be effective.

To promote uniformity of probation records and practices.

To encourage appointment of qualified probation officers.

The educational campaign was developed through committees, publications, conferences, institutes, and meetings.

CO-OPERATION WITH JUDICIAL CONFERENCE, JUDGE SCHAEFFER, CHAIRMAN.

Probation is a bilateral undertaking. The probationer agrees to comply with the conditions of his probation; the court prescribes the conditions of probation and must provide the supervision which is necessary to keep the court informed as to whether or not the probationer is carrying out his part of the bargain. It is imperative, therefore, that the judges, who must direct the probation system of their own courts, should be reasonably well informed concerning the importance of this form of dealing with offenders against the law.

The Judicial Conferences offer an excellent opportunity to impart this information. It is, therefore, earnestly recommended that a Judicial Conference be held within the next year and that a discussion of the value and methods of probation be given a prominent place upon the Conference's program.

CONFERENCES

There was a very active program of participation in conferences and meetings throughout the year, with talks on juvenile probation, juvenile court organization; probation for adults and socialization of criminal court procedure. Cooperation of the State Conference on Social Welfare and the Pennsylvania Probation and Parole Association was formally enlisted. Both of these organizations accepted the suggestion for co-operation most enthusiastically. The Pennsylvania Probation and Parole Association appointed a committee of three members, consisting of, Chesley A. Gall, Mrs. Mae Ecker, and Harold P. Dundon, to co-operate with the chairman of your sub-committee. Due to the fact that the chairman of the sub-committee is also chairman of the Division on Juvenile Delinquency of the State Conference of Social Welfare, it was possible to arrange programs throughout the year.

Addresses were given before civic and other organizations throughout the State, including the Federation of Women's Clubs, League of Women Voters, Rotary Clubs, Women's Clubs, etc. The Public Charities Association reserved a place on programs of its county welfare conferences for the discussion of probation, either in the form of dinner meetings or round tables.

The State Chamber of Commerce, through its Committee on Crime Prevention and Public Safety, appointed a subcommittee to make a study of probation, parole, etc., of which the writer of this report is chairman. The Pennsylvania Committee on Penal Affairs of the Public Charities Association made the support of the Governor's Committee on Probation part of its program and the Chairman, Dr. Louis N. Robinson; the Secretary, Leon Stern; and the Secretary of its Western Branch, Curtis A. Williams, made addresses throughout the State stimulating interest in the development of probation.

Miss Helen D. Pigeon, Probation Agent, and Miss M. M. Swiggard, Juvenile Court Consultant, both of the Department of Welfare, aided the Chairman of your sub-committee in round tables and institutes of the State Conference during the year, as did Albert G. Frazer, Secretary of the Prison Society, and Miss Helen Hubbell of the Children's Aid Society.

Miss Pigeon conducted a number of institutes throughout the year, and gave a course on the problems of delinquency and probation during the summer session at State College, in which the writer of this report also participated; he also discussed adult and juvenile probation before the Institute on Urban Problems at State College in an address on "Local Law Enforcement and the Treatment of Delinquents." Similar talks were given at the Pennsylvania School of Social Work and Temple University, etc.

Stream of Cases

1. In 1932 the juvenile courts in 60 Pennsylvania counties handled 3,281 cases.
2. Of these 3,281 cases boys outnumbered girls by more than three to one.
3. A smaller percentage of delinquent and incorrigible children, considered in proportion to their numbers in the population, is referred to the court in less populous than in more populous counties.
4. The percentage of boys coming to court is lower in the less populous counties; the percentage of girls is fairly constant, regardless of class of county.
5. The use of probation is more common in the larger counties than in the smaller, except in the eighth class counties.
6. The use of commitments is more favored by small than by large counties.
7. The use of unofficial probation for cases requiring no court action is in general confined to the larger counties. The tendency in the smaller counties is for the Judge to dismiss such cases.
8. A boy who comes to court has four chances out of ten of being put on probation. A girl who comes to court has only two and one half chances out of ten of being placed on probation. Commitment rather than probation is the policy in a much larger percentage of girls' cases than boys'.

GENERAL RECOMMENDATIONS

This study of probation had two main purposes—(1) to describe the practice of probation in Pennsylvania as it exists today, and (2) to suggest practical standards for the various counties.

The recommendations below do not reach ultimate objectives and are usually limited to minimum standards—the least that has been found effective in the experience of other states. We have tried to outline an immediate program leaving further developments to be worked out later. An effort has been made to provide for conditions as found in all types of Pennsylvania counties. The first group of recommendations applies to probation in general. Special recommendations follow for adult and juvenile probation respectively.

Probation Office

Personnel

Method of appointment of probation officers

By the Judge from list of eligibles (according to qualifications listed below) as suggested by a county committee and approved by the Department of Welfare.

The county committee should be appointed by the Judge and include representatives of:

County commissioners
County school system
Police
Church
Social agencies and
A representative citizen.

Qualifications

Preference should be given to graduates of recognized schools of social work.

Minimum Qualifications: Graduation from high school or equivalent with at least one year experience in social case work under supervision of a recognized social agency.

Special emphasis should be placed on character, intelligence, maturity of judgment and capacity for human understanding.

In the more remote rural counties, especially where several are included in one judicial district, the following is recommended:

When the case load of a county does not exceed 15 persons per year one probation officer may serve an entire judicial district, salary to be divided between the counties. The part time probation officer should not hold any other jobs connected with the local administration of justice. Part time probation work may be assigned to a staff member of a case working agency.

Number of probation officers

The number of officers should be governed by size of total case load. In no case should an officer supervise more than 60 juveniles or 75 adults on probation. Maximum case loads do not permit the best work.*

When the services of more than one probation officer are required, one should be designated as chief and should be directly responsible to the court for the operation of the department.

In appointing probation officers, ability to speak foreign languages predominating in the locality should be taken into consideration.

Duties

A woman officer should have charge of women, girls and boys under 12.

Where there is one male probation officer, a woman volunteer or part time officer should be appointed to care for women and girls †

* Case Loads: "It is agreed that from 50 to 75 cases are all that one probation officer can handle effectively." Lenroot and Lundberg, Federal Children's Bureau, publication No. 141. "Juvenile Courts at Work." "Not more than 50 cases should be under the supervision of one probation officer at any one time. Officers handling girls' cases should be assigned a smaller number." Committee to formulate Juvenile Court standards, Federal Children's Bureau, publication No. 121.

† Frequently arrangements can be made with a social agency for part time employment of a trained social worker for women and girls.

Salaries

Should scale up from a minimum for rural counties of $1,500 per year for full time service and should be sufficient to attract competent officers. A graduated system of salary increases should be arranged.

Clerical and Office Facilities

Stenographic service and office should be furnished.

In small counties part time stenographic service may be arranged with another local office.

If office space is not available, arrangements may be made with a social agency.

Privacy should be provided for interviewing probationers.

Collection of Money Payments

Ample provision should be made to provide clerical service in this or some other office for the collection of all money payments. The probation officer's time should be free for investigation and supervision.

Transportation

Use of an automobile or compnesation for use of private cars should be provided to probation officers covering wide areas.

Records and Forms

A card index of active cases for ready reference

Also an individual folder for each case containing:

Face sheet with identification and court data
Results of investigation
Chronological record of supervision in narrative form
Periodic appraisal of progress
Letters and other papers

Narrative and developmental history should be used in preference to stereotyped forms. This record should be usel in planning treatment and supervision of case.

A record system by districts should be kept so that officers may make as many visits as possible on any one trip.

A monthly check of all visits should be kept to insure regular visits in all cases.

A card index of closed cases should be kept separate from the active cases.

Reports should be sent to the Department of Welfare as required by law.

An annual statistical report is indispensable in analyzing community probation problems.

JUVENILE RECOMMENDATIONS

Judge

In counties having two or more Judges, one member of the bench should be designated to handle all juvenile cases and direct the juvenile department.* He should be responsible to the court for administration of the probation service and should make recommendations for appointments to and discharge from probation staff.

Procedure in Bringing Child to Court

The petition is the more desirable method of bringing a child to court and should completely displace the warrant.

Preliminary hearings before aldermen, magistrates and Justices of the Peace are forbidden by Act of June 2, 1933 (P. L. 311).

Police, magistrates and other officers should be instructed to refer complaints immediately to the probation officer. Teachers, social workers and others should follow the same procedure.

Adjustment of cases out of court by the probation officers is highly desirable and should be encouraged.

Such cases should be referred whenever possible to the appropriate social agency.

*-There is only one Judge for all cases in: 1 fifth, 14 sixth and all seventh and eighth class counties.

Methods of Holding Child for Court

Use of the jail or any part of it for detention of juveniles should be abolished in fact as it has been by law.*

The most economical and desirable form of care pending hearing is the child's own home unless preliminary investigation shows it to be unsuitable.

For such cases a private boarding home should be used.

Such homes should be carefully selected and supervised.

The detention home should not be used for punishment but only for the care of children awaiting court hearing.

This stay should be as short as possible.

Court Hearing

Juvenile hearing should be held in Judge's Chambers or any suitable room other than the Court Room.

Juvenile hearings should be held whenever there is a case to be heard rather than periodically. In cases where the Judge is not immediately available every effort should be made to expedite the hearing.

Only the principals in each case should be admitted for a given hearing. Unnecessary officials should not be admitted. It is always desirable for a Judge to have a conference with the child alone.

Newspaper publicity should never be permitted in connection with a juvenile case.

The Juvenile Docket shall not be open to indiscriminate public inspection. Act of June 2, 1933 (P. L. 311). This does not apply to persons having a legitimate interest in the case including social agencies.

Methods of Investigation

An investigation should precede the hearing of every case. This investigation should include at least the following items:

Social Service Exchange queries and contacts with registered agencies. When there is no Social Service Exchange direct contact should be established with social agencies concerned, either by form letter or by telephone.

Home, School } personal visits

The following examinations are recommended in all cases and especially in the cases noted:

Physical—in all cases
Venereal—where need is indicated
Psychological—in all cases of school retardation or difficulty
Psychiatric—in cases of maladjustment

No source of information should be omitted which might throw light on factors contributing to the child's delinquency. The investigation should be pointed toward the developmental and environmental aspects of the child's problem.

A complete copy of the investigation should be submitted to the Judge before the hearing.

Methods of Supervision

Social diagnosis and plan of treatment should be developed from the results of the investigation. Periodic appraisal of the progress of the case should be made.

The Probation Officer should make at least monthly personal visits and secure the cooperation of home and school.

Intensive supervision during the early stages of probation is essential.

Office reporting and letters are not a substitute for home visits, but may be used to supplement them.

All the social and recreational facilities of the community should be enlisted for the child's readjustment.

Supervision should continue until the readjustment of the child has been effected.

*The Attorney General has ruled on the Act of 1923 amended June 2 1933, that "dependent neglected, delinquent and incorrigible children under sixteen years may not be confined in a sheriff's residence within a county jail or the confines of jail liberty, or in a police station, or in any institution to which adult convicts are sentenced."

ADULT RECOMMENDATIONS

Methods of Investigation

In all cases legally eligible for probation, sufficient time should be allowed after a plea or verdict of guilty and before sentence is pronounced for probation officer to make an investigation. This investigation should include:

Social Service Exchange queries and contacts with all registered agencies. (When there is no Social Service Exchange, direct contact should be established with all social agencies either by form letter or by telephone).

The defendant's own story of offense and past life

Previous contacts with the law

Interview with arresting officer and prosecutor

Personal visit to parents, own home and school

Employer when defendant's position is not thereby endangered

Routine examinations:

Physical in all cases and venereal when indicated

Psychological, Psychiatric } where any suspicion of their need arises

No source of information such as schools, clubs, etc. should be omitted which might throw light on contributing factors

The investigation should be pointed toward the developmental and environmental aspects of the problem

A complete copy of the investigation should be submitted to the Judge before disposition

Methods of Supervision

Diagnosis and plan of treatment should be developed from the results of the investigation. Periodic appraisal of the progress of the case should be made

The probation officer should make at least monthly personal visits. He should secure the cooperation of the employer and family. Frequently interpretation of the probationer to his family is the most important part of the probation officer's job

Intensive supervision during the early stages of probation is essential, and supervision should be maintained during the entire period

Office reporting and letters are not a substitute for home visits, but may be used to supplement them. The probation officer should be available one or two nights a week to meet the necessities of employed probationers

Interchange of information and cooperation should be maintained between probation officer and all social agencies serving the family

All the social recreational facilities of the community should be enlisted for the probationer's readjustment.

STATE SUPERVISION OF PROBATION

There are well established precedents for a State Welfare Department to establish unified programs for relief, child welfare, or the prevention of delinquency. Such services have been accepted in Pennsylvania, as in the case of the Mothers' Assistance Fund.

In the probation field over 21 states, including Pennsylvania, have adopted some form of state coordination. Pennsylvania through its Department of Welfare is already aiding the various probation systems in the several counties. The Bureau of Community Work engages in the following juvenile court and juvenile probation services:

Direct supervision over all kinds of child placing in foster homes, including placing by courts
Direct supervision over all detention homes and houses
Advisory visiting in every juvenile court in the state
Consultation on individual cases and peculiar county juvenile problems
Advice in the selection of probation personnel—on request
Attempts to tie up probation with all other community work in an effort to integrate all the resources that bear on children's problems
Stimulation of community programs for delinquency prevention

The Bureau of Corrections aids the counties in their adult probation work by:

Preparation of uniform records and forms
Consultation with probation officers on cases presenting special difficulties
Tabulation of dispositions of cases of adults who pass through the courts of quarter sessions
Advisory service to assist court officials in procedure, policy and personnel problems
Educational programs in establishment of probation departments where none exists through contacts with laymen, judges, county officials, by use of addresses, conferences, etc.
Stimulation of community programs for crime prevention

A State Bureau of Probation would coordinate, deepen, and broaden present efforts on behalf of probation.

Such a State Bureau of Probation might offer:

Service to Judges and probation officers relating directly to Probation:

Procedure
Personnel standards
Records and forms
Statistical service
Central record system *

Educational Program through:

Development and integration of local facilities and resources through committees
Regional meetings
Publication of Manual, etc.
Publicity
Issuance of bulletins and pamphlets
Circulating library service
Cooperation with interested agencies
Active cooperation with the State Association of Probation and Parole Officials

Service for which Central Department might assume responsibility:

Surveys for development of probation as requested
Interchange of information between counties
Advisory service as to facilities in problem cases
Demonstrations of probation work

Besides the opportunity offered to counties to develop better probation service, a joint program such as is suggested would ultimately result in real ECONOMIES. The cost of future commitments to institutions would be saved by adequate personnel in probation and a constructive program for the prevention of delinquency at the source.

Probation service further saves counties costs of such hearings and trials by reducing the number of cases brought before the courts. Ultimately, some plan for partial State aid to counties for probation service should be considered.

SUMMARY OF REPORT ON PROBATION

Probation it is generally agreed would be a splendid thing if it were given a fair trial. It is a comparatively new device for dealing with both young and old offenders. Probation was officially introduced in Pennsylvania around 1900. In the last 15 years its growth has been rapid and since 1920 the number of probation officers in the United States has doubled, increasing from 2,000 to 4,000.

President Roosevelt Endorses Probation

Our highest public officials from the President down have given probation high endorsement. In his "Looking Forward," published in 1933, President Roosevelt wrote:

> "If the criminal's past history gives good reason to believe that he is not of the naturally criminal type, that he is capable of real reform and of becoming a useful citizen, there is no doubt that probation viewed from the selfish standpoint of protection to society alone, is the most efficient method that we have. And yet it is the least understood, the least developed, the least appreciated of all our efforts to rid society of the criminal. .. By its intelligent extension, crime can be decreased, the overcrowded conditions in our penal institutions greatly ameliorated, and the necessity for building more and more prisons, for needlessly and ineffectively spending huge prison budgets, reduced. ...
> "It is a state's affair and this whole matter of probation should be made the state's business and put under wise state control. .. I hope that in all states we shall be continually decreasing the number of our prison guards and wardens and increasing the number of our parole and probation officers."

In spite of the rapid popular acceptance of the idea of probation, experts agree that it is rare for a community to provide the conditions necessary to give the real theory of probation a fair trial.

Already probation means quite different things in different places. In some counties in this state the probation officer is the man who spends his time at a desk in the county building collecting fines and desertion and non-support orders. Strictly speaking this has nothing to do with probation. But it has been permitted to occupy so much of the officer's time in some places that he has little time for his real duties.

Difference Between Probation and Parole

Again, probation and parole are commonly confused. But there is an important difference. They are like the pictures in advertisements of Before and After Taking. Parole is the After Taking. It comes after sentence has been imposed and some part of the time served in prison or correctional school. It is given as a reward for good behavior while in the institution.

Probation on the other hand is the Before Taking. It comes before any sentence is imposed and amounts to a suspension of sentence. It is not, however, a mere matter of being kind-hearted and giving the accused another chance. Probation properly used is based on a constructive theory for the treatment of offenders. It involves a careful analysis of the causes and influences that may have contributed to the offense, and a course of preventive treatment individually planned for that particular offender. Instead of removing a person to an institution for punishment and correction, it undertakes to leave him in his home surroundings and there influence him so that he will grow away from the motive and interests that have led to delinquency and crime.

A Crime Preventive

Probation is important as a Preventive Measure.

A. Properly administered, it prevents:

1. Chance offenders from developing into criminals through the undesirable associations of prison and reform schools.
2. It prevents unnecessary costs to taxpayers of maintaining additional inmates of prisons and correction schools at a cost of $200 to $400 each per year.
3. It prevents loss to society at large through anti-social acts of potential criminals.

Several conditions give probation especial importance at this time. The spectacular increase in crimes of violence and in commitments to prisons suggest that our present systems of punishment are not successful as preventives of crime.

The large proportion of recidivists—men sentenced to penitentiaries who have served previous sentences in prisons and reformatories—further bears out this conclusion.

Numerous surveys of crime have been made in the last 20 years, and are now under way. They have not succeeded in establishing the causes of crime nor do they agree as to any one most desirable method of treatment for criminals. It is safe to say, however, that they would all agree upon the value of any effective method for the Prevention of Crime.

It is generally admitted that we have not begun to develop the full possibilities of probation as a Crime Preventive. This was one of the considerations which led Governor Pinchot to appoint a special committee on Probation. The committee consists of a group of Judges, criminologists, a psychiatrist and others who have especial familiarity with problems of crime and delinquency.

In order to provide a first hand picture of the situation before them, the Department of Welfare made a survey of conditions of probation throughout the state—excepting only Philadelphia and Allegheny counties. The latter with their metropolitan populations present special problems not common to the rest of the state, of which special studies have already been made. This pamphlet summarizes the findings of this survey.

Juvenile Probation

Probation is used both for children and for adult offenders. On the theory that delinquent children are usually the victims of improper home life or guardianship, and are not yet of an age to be held responsible, our courts do not regard the child as a criminal. We have set up a special juvenile court law for dealing with them. Juvenile probation also involves certain special practices. Dealing as it does with the young offender, juvenile probation is of major importance in any preventive program. The description given below applies to juvenile probation.

* Recommendations covering the above points will be found on the pages immediately preceding.

Adult probation works on the same general principles in so far as investigation and supervision are concerned. Probation is subject to certain restrictions in cases of adults.

INVESTIGATION

Probation service begins with an investigation. If the offender's past record and the circumstances warrant, the Court, instead of passing sentence, puts him under the supervision of a probation officer. On condition that he behaves well and reports regularly to the officer, at the end of a specified term the charge against him is dismissed. He is considered to have shown his ability to adjust to the demands of society.

Careful and discriminating investigation of every child's case before he is brought to court for hearing is fundamental to an adequate probation service. In importance it ranks second only to the understanding and use of probation by the court itself.

Because all that follows is dependent upon the adequacy of this beginning the process of investigation in a typical case is here described step by step.

THE CASE OF TOMMY PETROVSKY

One morning a railroad policeman arrived at the Blanktown Probation Office with a sullen looking boy, Tommy Petrovsky, whom he charged with breaking into a freight car.

1. Leaving the boy in an ante room in charge of his stenographer, Mr. Jones, the Probation Officer, took the policeman into his office. He listened to the story of the offence and the policeman left.

2. Mr. Jones called up the Social Service Exchange and learned from one of its agencies what was known about the boy. Tommy's parents were born in Poland. The father was a coal miner. Work in the mines was scarce, and for the past five years the Family Society had records of frequent appeals for help from the family. Twelve years old, born in Blanktown, Tommy came fourth in a family of seven children. The Society had no previous record in regard to him individually.

3. Calling the boy into his office, the Probation Officer questioned him and led him on to talk about himself, his family, his school and the gang of boys with whom he played.

4. He held the boy in his office until he was free to take him home.

5. That afternoon with Tommy he visited the boy's home. He talked with the parents, brothers, sisters, neighbors, piecing together the scattered bits of information that made up the boy's background. The family had been on and off of relief as far back as Tommy could remember. Everything was pared down to a minimum. The home life was primitive. There were no books to read, no tools to work with. There was nothing for a boy to do. In the morning, the family straggled through the kitchen at odd times. No table was set, no meal made ready. A coffee pot on the back of the stove served as breakfast. In the evening, the family gathered round the kitchen table. Sometimes there was enough to eat, oftener there was not. Tommy's mother was a good natured, well meaning woman but she was not competent to meet the demands life made upon her. Not strong, she was naturally indolent. The house was always dirty. The father drank whenever he had any money. When sober he was bad tempered and quarreled continually with his older sons.

6. The probation officer visited Tommy's school and talked to his teacher. Tommy was in the fifth grade, a boy of dull normal intelligence, having missed two promotions. He had never made trouble, neither had he won praise. He was content to straggle along at the end of his class. In short, there was nothing to make Tommy stand out anywhere. At home he was eclipsed by the swagger and cockiness of his two young men brothers, and by the three year old baby sister, the spoiled pet of the family. At school he just managed to keep afloat. There was no opportunity anywhere in life for Tommy to win the approval so necessary to all of us, and especially to the adolescent boy preparing to measure himself against the world. To the probation officer, accustomed to such homes, all this and more was evident as he listened that first day to the tearful lamentations of Tommy's mother, assuring him that Tommy had always been a good boy and never given her trouble.

7. In his office the next day, Mr. Jones had another talk with Tommy. At first the boy was wary. But, as the officer refrained from lecturing and convinced him of a sympathetic interest, he gradually dropped his guard. Here again the discerning probation officer could real between the lines. Deprived of all recognition, either at home or at school, Tommy had discovered one avenue of adventure and leadership open to him. If he could furnish money to treat his gang, they gave him for the time being appreciation and applause. The only way that Tommy could get money was to steal it. Tommy was never given any money at home, but there were ways of getting it. He could imitate other boys in his gang. He had served as look-out while they slipped into unguarded freight cars, carrying off anything loose. He knew the old junk man who would buy anything without asking questions. It looked easy and Tommy had escaped with an armful of loot more than once. This time, however, he had almost run into the arms of a police officer watching him from around the corner of the freight car.

8. Special examinations of the child:
In order to plan constructively for Tommy's future, it was important to discover possible physical handicaps. The examining doctor found that Tommy was eight pounds under weight. Also, his eyesight was defective which helped to account for his failures at school. Psychological tests showed that this 12 year old boy had a mental age of nine. This further explained his school difficulties. It also indicated that plans for his future must make allowance for his limitations. Since he presented no exaggerated behavior problems, no psychiatric examination was given him.

9. Having assembled all available information in the case, the probation officer sat down and wrote a report on Tommy for the Judge. He called attention to what he considered vital factors, skipping the routine, boiling it down, giving as briefly as possible the influences which bore on Tommy's record and which must be considered in planning for the boy's future.

The hearing was held on the third day after Tommy had been brought in by the policeman. It was held in the Judge's Chambers. Tommy's parents had been notified, and his father, looking grim and anxious was present. After the Judge had heard the various witnesses he sent everyone out of the room except the probation officer and had Tommy brought in. Overawed at first Tommy had little to say and the probation officer standing by supplemented his brief answers to the Judge's questions. In the end, responding to the quiet friendliness of both Judge and probation officer, Tommy thawed out and talked freely and naturally. The Judge decided to put Tommy on probation for a year and told him that he would be under the supervision of the probation officer for that period. He must report to the officer regularly and keep away from the gang which had taught him to steal.

Supervision

Now began the second major step of the probation process—Supervision. Against the background of his thorough investigation, the probation officer was equipped to make intelligent plans for the boy's immediate needs and for his future.

He sent Tommy to a clinic where he was fitted for glasses. With the handicap of poor eyesight remedied, and in spite of his low I. Q., it was not necessary for Tommy to enter a special class for backward children. The probation officer also secured the teacher's cooperation by telling her about the boy's difficulties.

Tommy joined a Boy Scout Club where he was initiated into a new world of interest and companionship. Every month or so the probation officer dropped in at Tommy's home to sense for himself how things were going. Soon the whole family came to regard him as an old friend, and he was giving advice first to one and then another. Tommy will never attain any great position in the world, but, through this process of studying and understanding his needs at a critical time, he was given new interests, diverted from menacing dangers. There are thousands of boys like Tommy in this and every state. If they can be understood and helped before they get into serious difficulties, they may be prevented from ruining their own lives and becoming a menace and expense to their community.

Unfortunately, this in an idealized picture of probation. The survey made by the Department of Welfare showed that we fall far short of doing what we might for either children or adults who come in conflict with the law.

Following through the process of probation in the steps just described, the survey showed certain general trends in probation practice throughout the state.

Procedure in Bringing Child to Court

We use two methds of bringing a child into court in this state, the petition and warrant.

Petition: any child under 16 needing the protection or control of the court may be brought in for hearing without arrest. Parents, relatives or any citizen may file the petition.

Warrant: may be issued by a magistrate, alderman or justice of the peace. It resembles the commitment for arrest in adult cases and because of this fact, is less consistent with the spirit of the juvenile court. The petition is the more desirable method. It places the emphasis upon the child and his problem rather than upon the offence. It avoids the spirit of criminal procedure and by its informality prevents the child from thinking of himself either as a hero or as a criminal. Petitions are also more economical, as they eliminate costs in the minor courts.

In 14 counties, only petitions are used
In 10 counties, only warrants are used
In 38 counties, both are used

Method of Bringing Children to Court

The interval between the time when a child is first brought into court and his hearing should be brief. He should be left in his own home, in care of his parents or guardians unless he is very unruly or the home conditions are grossly unsuitable. In such cases, three alternatives present themselves: to hold the child in the jail, in a detention home, or to place him in a foster home.

Objections to holding a child in jail, even over one night are obvious. It means possible association with depraved and vicious persons and is an altogether demoralizing experience for a normal child. It is in fact illegal to hold a child in jail in this state, yet the survey showed that in 37 counties children have been and are being held in the jails.

The Pennsylvania Law in this matter dates back to 1903 when a first Act was passed requiring counties to provide places of detention for child offenders under sixteen apart from the regular jails. Ten years later, this Act was broadened. Twenty years later the General Assembly codified all the existing acts. The law provides that "No child pending or after hearing before the juvenile court shall be confined in any county jail, workhouse, police station, lock-up or other institution in which adults are confined. * * *"

The detention home is a great improvement over the jail. It is a building under care of a matron, specially provided for the detention of children. In rural counties where there may not be more than one child held for hearing in the course of several years such a home is not practicable. It has found favor in larger communities however.

Criticism of the detention home—and there is an increasingly critical attitude toward it— is based on the following points: in planning for the future it is necessary to allow for future growth by building extra rooms. There is always a tendency to utilize this extra space in various ways: by holding the child for long periods before hearing; holding the child in the home after hearing as a punishment—an illegal use of the home; by using it for dependent children, and children that no one knows what to do with.

As an example of the abuse of the detention home, the survey cites the case of one home which had held one girl for 107 days and another for 202 days in the previous year. Questioned about this case, the juvenile probation officer and the keeper of the home showed great embarrassment in explaining that she was a dependent child for whom a home was being sought. Although dependent, she had been brought in on a charge of incorrigibility. It was objected that her two brothers were held only 21 days, although ostensibly for the same purpose. The answer was that the girl was under observation for pregnancy. For this reason she had been detained almost seven months.

Of the 65 counties surveyed, 13 have special detention homes as against 29 which use the jail and eight which use special quarters in the jail. Perhaps the worst form of detention was found in a seventh class county where the child was detained in an open iron cage in the court house basement.

The third type of detention, the foster home, is used in only four counties. Advantages of the foster home are: keeping the child in a normal home pending his hearing; isolation of special cases; opportunity to study the child in a more normal environment; less stigma than detention in a public institution, more economical. Objections are that it is difficult to find suitable homes and that it is easier for children to escape from them. It is encouraging to note that twenty-five per cent of the counties in the State as far as possible leave the child in his own home while under detention.

Court Hearing

The creation of a separate juvenile court for dealing with children in the early 1900's marks the official recognition by the state of a new attitude toward children brought into court. Previously, any child over seven had been given the same form of treatment as an adult. He was held morally responsible for his acts and punished accordingly. The philosophy of the juvenile court makes recognition of the effect of demoralizing influences on irresponsible children: broken homes, vicious parents and other more subtle influences.

The atmosphere of the hearing plays an important part in the effect produced. For the child who is to be placed on probation, the court hearing should mark the beginning of an important reconstructive process. It is important in determining the child's future relationship to the probation officer, and standing behind the officer, to the Judge.

Hence the formalities calculated to impart solemnity in the adult court should be consciously avoided in the juvenile. A majority of the children come from broken and inadequate homes. It is the court's opportunity to serve in some degree as a substitute for the wise and understanding parent of whom the child has been deprived.

The room for the hearings should be simple and informal; only the principals and necessary witnesses should be admitted. The curious, idlers, newspaper reporters, official attire, all should be debarred if the child is to appreciate the fact that the whole purpose is to help him in his difficulty.

The survey showed that 41 counties in this state hold private hearings of the juvenile court while 24 open them to the public. In 27 counties, the hearing is held in the court room. The remaining counties establish a more intimate atmosphere by using the Judge's Chambers or the Law Library. There is greater unanimity of policy in regard to press publicity. In 52 counties, the press is excluded from juvenile hearings.

Investigation

The progressive modern attitude toward both delinquency and crime is based on two fundamentals: 1. an interest in the individual rather than the offense and 2. an effort to discover a plan for the individual treatment of offenders which will restore them to normal behavior.

The practical value and necessity for a thorough investigation of each child's home life and background was illustrated in the case of Tommy Petrovsky. For an understanding, individual approach to the delinquent child, there must be an intimate knowledge of the influences surrounding him. The following summary of methods of investigation reveals the inadequacy of our present probation practice. The most significant and discouraging items shows that in 42 counties the child's home is not visited during the investigation. This table, by the very omissions which it shows suggests what possibilities may lie in a more adequate probation service—if we really believe in the merit of the probation idea.

Visits by probation officer

	Home	School
Routine part of investigation	15	10
Occasional	8	8
Not used at all	42	42

Supervision

The showing for methods of supervision is also far from satisfactory. The survey findings may be summarized as follows:

Visits by probation officer

	Home	School
Visits to	21	11
Occasional contacts	14	11
No visits	30	43

Records and Forms

No efficient business organization would think of running an office without a bookkeeping system. Similarly no probation office can function intelligently without records and forms. Their need increases with the growth of the volume of cases. In this matter we make the poorest showing of all. Only 4 counties undertake to prepare and file case histories. Ten counties have some sort of folder for each child, but no standard forms nor uniformity in the material collected. In 52 counties no effort is made to keep more than the bare court docket.

Facts About Juvenile Probation in Pennsylvania

In 1932 our juvenile courts handled 3,281 cases in 60 counties.

The boys outnumbered the girls by more than three to one.

The percentage of boys coming to court is lower in the less populous counties in proportion to their numbers in the population: the percentage of girls is fairly constant, regardless of class county.

The use of probation is more common in the larger counties than in the smaller, except in eighth class counties.

A boy who comes to court has four chances in ten of being put on probation; a girl only two and a half chances in ten. Commitment rather than probation is the policy in a much larger percentage of girls cases than of boys.

Urgent Needs of Probation in Pennsylvania

The effectiveness of probation must depend primarily on two factors:

1. Interest and cooperation of the courts,
2. Fitness of the men and women appointed as probation officers.

The attitude of the bench in this state is encouraging. A majority of the judges associated with juvenile courts have shown an interest in probation and have expressed their desire to cooperate in its development.

The chief difficulties as developed in the state survey arise in connection with the probation personnel. We have numerous earnest and devoted probation officers. Unfortunately, many of them are working under handicaps which prevent their giving the individual child the attention essential to successful probation work.

In many counties the probation staff is too small. Officers are assigned so many cases for investigation and supervision that they can give them only superficial attention.

In some counties officers are kept so busy with incidentals, such as collecting fines, that they have no time for their real work.

In general, officers lack the special training which would best fit them for this work. In many cases, the purpose and possibilities of probation have never been explained to them.

We have failed to establish standards of qualifications for the appointment of probation officers. Probation is a skilled job. It requires not only resourcefulness and understanding of human nature, but training in handling people who are in trouble.

SOME FACTS ABOUT PROBATION

The following statement has been prepared at the direction of the Governor's Committee on Probation. It is a statement of elementary facts concerning probation. It deals only with such questions as might arise on a preliminary survey. For more detailed guidance the Committee is preparing a Handbook and a summary of a probation study made by the Department of Welfare. It has also provided a Bibliography of References on Adult and Juvenile Probation in Pennsylvania.

It is hoped that this statement will be helpful to communities and individuals interested in instituting or improving local probation service. The Department will be glad to answer questions that may arise and to suggest references for further reading. Copies of the Bibliography will be furnished on request.

DIVISION OF RESEARCH AND STATISTICS

DEPARTMENT OF WELFARE

What is probation?

It is a method of dealing with offenders used as a substitute for prison or correctional school.

Probation and parole are commonly confused, but there is an important difference between them. It is like the difference between B. C. and A. D. on the calendar.

Parole is the A. D. It comes AFTER sentence has been imposed, and usually after some part of the time served in prison or correctional school. It is given as a reward for good behavior while in the institution.

Probation is the B. C. It comes BEFORE any sentence is imposed, and amounts to a suspension of sentence. It is not, however, a mere matter of lenience and giving the person another chance. Properly used it attacks delinquency through treatment of offenders in their own background.

Probation service begins with an investigation. If the offender's past record and the circumstances warrant, the Court, instead of sentencing him puts him under the supervision of a probation officer. On condition that he behaves well and reports regularly to the officer, at the end of a specified term, the charge against him is dismissed. He is considered to have shown his ability to adjust himself to the demands of society.

Background of Probation

Probation is the result of a change in attitude toward delinquency and crime. After exhausting their ingenuity for centuries to devise cruel and more effective forms of correction, men have begun to suspect that while punishment satisfies vengeance and perhaps justice, it does not cure criminality nor protect society.

Another element in the recent rapid acceptance of probation has been its economy as a community measure. Recent circumstances have combined to force us to reduce our heavy prison loads and their burden upon the man who pays the bills—the taxpayer.

A Crime Preventive

Probation is important as a Preventive Measure

Properly administered, it prevents:

1. Chance offenders from developing into criminals through the undesirable associations of prison and reform school.
2. Unnecessary costs to taxpayers of maintaining additional inmates of prisons and correction schools at a cost of $200 to $400 each per year.
3. Loss to society at large through anti-social acts of potential criminals.

Juvenile Probation

Probation is used both for children and for adult offenders. On the theory that delinquent children are usually the victims of improper home life or guardianship, the legislature has prescribed a procedure applicable only to offenders under sixteen. We have set up special juvenile court laws for dealing with them. Juvenile probation involves certain special practices. Dealing as it does with the young offender, juvenile probation is of major importance in any preventive program. The description given below applies to juvenile probation. Adult probation works on the same general principles in so far as investigation and supervision are concerned, although probation is subject to certain restrictions in case of adults.

How Juvenile Probation Works

There is a wide gap between ideal standards of probation and the common or garden variety found in practice. Much of the effectiveness of probation depends on the initial investigation. It should provide the court with a picture of the child himself and his environment and of major events in his life which may have led to the delinquency. The following routine includes only the steps accepted by authorities as essential to an effective minimum service.

A complaint is made against Tommy Jones for stealing. It may be made by the police, neighbors, parents or others.

1. While awaiting hearing, it is preferable that the child should be left in his own home, in charge of his parents or in some other private home. If this is impracticable he may be held in a detention home. The County Commissioners are required by law to provide a place entirely separate from the quarters used for adult prisoners. Number of children detained and length of detention should be kept at a minimum.
2. Before the boy is brought into court for hearing, the probation officer should investigate his case. Investigation should include:
   a. Checking case with Social [illegible] Exchange or other local agencies for possible previous record of child or his family.
   b. Examination of the boy
      (1) physical in all cases, special tests where venereal disease is indicated.
      (2) psychological in cases of school retardation.
      (3) psychiatric in cases where mental maladjustment is suspected.
      (4) careful record of the boy's story of offense, his home conditions and his associates.
3. The probation officer should make estimate of possible underlying causes for the delinquency and submit a written report to the Judge before the hearing.
4. The Hearing
   a. Should be held as soon after investigation as proper notice to parents or guardians can be given.
   b. Should be held in Judges Chambers or room where an informal and intimate atmosphere may be established.
   c. One or both parents or guardian should be required to be present.
   d. The press and public should be excluded.
   e. Names or pictures of children involved should never be given to the press.

When the child is put on probation, he is placed under supervision of the probation officer.

5. Supervision should include:
   a. Plan of treatment by the Judge or the probation officer developed from reports of investigation, periodic appraisal of progress should be made.
   b. The probation officer
      (1) should study assets and resources, facilities of the community for use on the case assignment.
      (2) should make at least monthly personal visits and secure cooperation of home and school.
   c. Office reports by mail letters are not a substitute for home visits, but may be used to supplement them.

Essentials to Development of Probation

1. Cooperative interest of Judges

A. The Judge is all powerful in determining the plan, the policy and the effectiveness of probation in his court. The Judge

1. appoints the probation officers
2. decides in each case whether it is suitable for probation
3. is in a position of authority and therefore directly responsible for efficiency of the probation staff

2. Establishment of high standards for probation staff

A. Special training and capacity in handling children should be required
B. Approved methods of investigation, supervision and record keeping should be developed.

Development of Probation

It is just over half a century since Massachusetts passed the first modern probation act in 1878. Pennsylvania introduced probation with the turn of the century in 1901.

It is noticeable that the states with a high percentage of urban population were the first to adopt probation. By 1900 six states had authorized salaried probation officers.

The growth of probation in recent years has been rapid. Since 1917 Wyoming has been the only state lacking a juvenile probation system. In 1918 there were 2,000 probation officers in the United States. By 1931 this numbered had doubled.

PART II

Standards For Probation

As established by:

National Probation Association, United States Children's Bureau and State Probation Bureaus

1. The case load of an officer should not be more than 50. The overloading of officers is, however, the rule rather than the exception throughout the country.
2. Men should look after men and older boys on probation, and women should be employed to supervise girls and women.
3. Probation officers specially qualified by personality or experience should deal with delinquent children.

Extract from STANDARDS FOR JUVENILE COURTS published by FEDERAL CHILDREN'S BUREAU—1923

Relation Between the Court and the Police Department

1. The jurisdiction of the court should begin as soon as petition is filed or as soon as a child is taken into custody or placed in charge of an officer of the court. Whenever a child is taken into custody the parents or the person with whom the child resides should be notified at once by the police officer or other person holding such custody. The responsibility for such notice should rest with the court.
2. A child taken into custody should immediately be placed in the care of an officer of the juvenile court, and only if necessary taken to a place of detention for juveniles.

Standards

1. The probation staff should be appointed by the judge from an eligible list secured by competitive examination, subject to approval by a supervising board or commission.
2. The minimum qualifications of probation officers should be as follows:
   a. Education: Preferably graduating from college or its equivalent, or from a school or social work.
   b. Experience: At least one year in case work under supervision.
   c. Good personality and character; tact, resoursefulness, and sympathy.
3. The compensation of probation officers should be such that the best types of trained service can be secured. The salaries should be comparable with those paid to workers in other fields of social service. Increases should be based on records of service and efficiency. * * *
6. Girls' cases should always be assigned to women officers; cases of boys under 12 years may be assigned to women officers, but all cases of boys 12 years of age and over should be assigned to men * * *
10. Reporting by a child to a probation officer at regular intervals should be required only if it seems clearly to be for the good of the probationer, and should never be made a substitute for more constructive methods of case work. When rightly safeguarded, reporting gives opportunity for acquaintance with the child, and free conservation regarding his interests and surroundings, and is a means of training in habits of regularity and punctuality.
11. Regular reporting should usually be limited to delinquent boys over 12 years of age, and they should report at a suitable place away from court and approved by the judge or chief probation officer. Mingling of boys reporting should be avoided through using different days in the week and fixing a certain time for each child to report.
12. Except in rare cases, home visits at least once every two weeks are essential to effective supervision, knowledge of the assets and liabilities of the family, and correction of unfavorable conditions.
13. In probation work due consideration should be given to language, racial psychology, and religion.
14. Reconstructive work with the family should be undertaken whenever necessary, either by the probation officer himself or in corporation with other social agencies. Whenever other agencies can meet particular needs their services should be enlisted. In cases in which two or more agencies are concerned with the same family frequent conferences are necessary for good team work.
15. Special detailed school reports for each child on probation are advisable. The educational authorities should be requested to cooperate through weekly reports, frequent conferences, and other means; but care should be taken to preserve harmony, faith, and good will between the teacher and pupil, the probationer and probation officer * * *

Records

1. Every juvenile court should have a record system which provides for—
   a. The filing of the necessary legal records.
   b. The filing of social records covering the investigation of the case, the study of the child, and the work done by the officers of the court and the probation staff. These social records should be deemed privileged and confidential records of the court, and should be at all times safeguarded from indiscriminate public inspection.
2. The filing system should be such as to permit ready identification of cases.
3. The records of the social investigation and the study of the child should include all the facts necessary to a constructive plan of treatment.
4. The records of supervision should show the constructive case work planned, attempted, and accomplished, and should give a chronological history of the supervisory work.
5. The court should compile annually statistical information which will show the problems dealt with and the results.

Codification of Penna Laws Submitted by Judge Schaeffer

The Law of Parole and Probation in Pennsylvania

The first provision of the statute law of Pennsylvania authorizing probation and providing for the appointment of probation officers was the Juvenile Court Act of May 21, 1901, P. L. 279. It was declared unconstitutional for the reason that it purported to set up a court not provided for in the constitution. It was substantially re-enacted by the Act of April 23, 1903, P. L. 274.

Before the passage of the first probation act, our Courts resorted to the device of the suspended sentence to avoid sending to prison every person convicted before them.

This first act which authorizes the Court of Quarter Sessions in cases other than juvenile cases to suspend the imposing of sentence and to place the defendant on probation is the Act of May 10, 1909, P. L. 495.

This act was repealed and superseded by the Act of June 19, 1911, P. L. 1055. The first section of the Act of 1911 is precisely the same as the first section of the act of 1909, supra, and authorizes the Court

(1) Except in cases of murder, administering poison, kidnapping, incest, sodomy, rape, assault with intent to rape, arson, or burglary, and
(2) in cases where the defendant had never before been imprisoned for crime (detention in an institution for juvenile delinquents not to be considered imprisonment), and
(3) where the court believes that the character of the defendant and the circumstances of the case such that he or she is not likely again to engage in an offensive course of conduct, and
(4) where the court believes that the public good does not demand or require that the defendant should suffer the penalty imposed by law, to suspend the imposing of sentence and place the defendant on probation on such terms and conditions as it may deem right and proper, etc.

Section 2, as in the Act of 1909, authorizes the Court where fine only is imposed, to place the defendant upon probation and to direct, as one of the terms thereof, that the fine be paid in certain installments at certain times.

Section 3, as in the Act of 1909, authorizes the Court to appoint "a discreet person to serve as probation officer" at a salary to be determined by the Court. It stipulates further that in no case shall a defendant be committed in the custody of a person of the opposite sex.

Section 4, as in the Act of 1909, provides for the arrest and resentence of a probationer who shall violate the terms of his or her probation.

Section 5 provides that the Court shall discharge the probationer and cause a record to be made thereof whenever in the judgment of the court he has satisfactorily met the conditions of his probation, provided that the length of probation shall not be more than the maximum term for which the defendant might have been imprisoned. This section omits the provision of the same section of the Act 1909 as to the term of probation.

Section 6 requires the Court in sentencing to a penitentiary to pronounce a sentence of imprisonment for an indefinite term, stating the minimum and maximum limits thereof, and providing that a person so sentenced shall not be entitled to the benefits of the Commutation Act of May 11, 1901.

(It is to be noted that there is no fixation of the minimum sentence by this provision, where as the same section of the Act of 1909 fixed minimum at one-fourth of the maximum term.)

Section 7 requires the clerks of the several Courts of Quarter Sessions, etc., to forward to the wardens of the state penitentiaries a list of all convicts sentenced to the penitentaries during the preceding month with certain data.

Section 8 requires the Board of Inspectors of each penitentiary to meet once each month and give opportunity to prisoners, whose minimum sentences will expire within three months, to appear before the board and apply for release on parole.

Section 9 authorizes the Board of Inspectors of the penitentiary in cases approved by them to recommend to the Governor that the convict be released on parole, etc.

Section 10 provides that any convict so released on parole, who shall, during the period of parole, be convicted of any crime punishable by imprisonment, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed for such crime committed during the said period, and after the expiration of the same, be compelled to serve in the penitentiary to which originally committed the remainder of his original term without any commutation.

Section 11 requires the Board of Inspectors, when they do not recommend the release on parole of a convict at the expiration of his minimum term, to report in writing to the Governor the reasons for not making such recommendation.

Section 12 requires the Board of inspectors to appoint one or more parole officers for the penitentiary to supervise those paroled from the penitentiary.

Section 13 authorizes the Board of Inspectors of the penitentiary in proper cases to recommend to the Governor the absolute pardon of the previously paroled convict.

Section 14 directs that the Governor may issue his mandate for the arrest and return of any convict released on parole who has violated the terms of his parole, and provides that upon being so returned, the convict shall be imprisoned for a period equal to the unexpired maximum term as originally sentenced, unless sooner released on parole or pardoned.

Section 15 provides that the Governor shall not execute any of the rights or powers herein granted to him until the Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of the Commonwealth, Attorney General, and the Secretary of Internal Affairs, or any three of them, after full hearing, upon due public notice and in open session, shall have recommended the said commutations of said sentences.

Section 16 provides that the act shall not apply to children.

Section 17 authorizes the Board of Inspectors of the penitentiaries to establish rules and regulations to carry the act into effect.

Section 1 was amended by the Act of May 7, 1925, P. L. 544, which adds thereto, the provision that in suspending the imposition of sentence and placing the defendant on probation, the terms and conditions of probation may include "the payment of money for the use of the county not exceeding, however, the fine fixed by law for conviction of such offense," and further providing that no such condition for the payment of money shall be considered as the imposition of a fine or a sentence nor prevent the court from thereafter sentencing the defendant under the act under which he was convicted, upon violation of his parole.

Section 2 stands unamended.

Section 3 has been amended by the Act of June 21, 1919, P. L. 569, which authorizes the court to appoint such assistants to the probation officer as the court may deem necessary.

Sections 4 and 5 are unamended.

Section 6 has been amended by the Act of June 29, 1923, P. L. 975, by providing that in a sentence to a penitentiary, the Court shall fix a maximum sentence which shall not exceed the maximum time prescribed as a penalty for the offense, and a minimum sentence which shall not exceed one-half of the maximum prescribed by the court.

Sections 7 and 8 are unamended.

Section 10 has been amended by the Act of June 22, 1931, P. L. 862, which provides that any convict on parole, or while delinquent on said parole, who shall commit any crime punishable by imprisonment for which he shall be convicted on any court, shall, in addition to the penalty imposed for the crime committed during said period, and after the expiration of the same, be compelled to serve in the penitentiary from which he had been paroled, or any other institution to which he may be legally transferred, the remainder of the term which he would have been compelled to serve but for the parole; and if the court imposes no new sentence for the second offense, he shall be compelled to serve in the penitentiary the remainder of his original term.

The other sections are unamended.

On the same day on which the original probation act was approved, the Act of June 19, 1911, P. L. 1059 was approved. This act authorized the judges of the courts, after due inquiry, to release on parole any convict confined in the county jail or workhouse of their district, and place him in charge of and under the supervision of a designated probation officer, with authority to recommit, on cause shown by the officers, that the convict has violated his parole, and to reparole if, in the judgment of the judge, there is a reasonable probability that the convict will be benefited by again being accorded liberty and also to again recommit for violation of such parole.

This parole act of 1911 was amended by the Act of May 5, 1921, P. L. 379, which extends the power of parole to all courts of record having jurisdiction, and authorizes them to parole any convict confined in county jail, house of correction, or workhouse, and provides that the power of parole shall extend for a period not to exceed the maximum sentence provided by law for the offense of which the convict was convicted, regardless of the sentence first imposed upon the prisoner. It was again amended by the Act of May 11, 1923, P. L. 204, which added the requirement that upon presentation of the petition for parole the court shall fix a day for hearing, a copy of the petition shall be served upon the district attorney and upon the prosecutor of the case at least ten days before the day fixed for the hearing, and that after hearing the court shall make such order as it shall deem just and proper.

The fact that these two acts of 1911 were approved upon the same day has led to the conclusion in the minds of many judges that they must be read together and construed as one. This has resulted in a great restriction of the use of parole from county prisons over what would have been the case had they been construed, as some courts have construed them, as separate pieces of legislation. The first decision we have found construing them as one is Commonwealth v. Burr, 5 D. and C. 172 (1924). In an opinion by Cummins, J., he states "The latter act (parole act), although not in form, is in substance a supplement to the former act (probation act). They at least form part of the same system, and each must, therefore, be construed with reference to this system of which it forms a part (Washington County v Berwick, 56 Pa. 466, 473; Stewart v. Keemle, 4 S. and R. 72), and more especially is this true in view of the fact that they were enacted on the same day: Marquette v. Berks County, 3 P. Superior Ct. 36."

This was followed by Judge Reno in Commonwealth v. Roberts, 6 D. and C. 342 (1924). Judge Reno states: 'our view has been that while the acts, in a sense, apply to two different subjects, the ultimate end of both is similar (that is, relieving a defendant of the penal consequences of crime, either by probation or parole), and, therefore, the two are to be construed together. This process of reasoning results in the conclusion that the Act of June 19, 1911, P. L. 1059, sometimes called the 'Parole Act,' does not authorize the granting of parole to prisoners convicted of arsen, that being one of the offenses enumerated as excepted in the Act of June 19, 1911, P. L. 1055, commonly called the 'Probation Act.'" Similarly Judge Williams in Commonwealth v. Simmons, 12 D. and C. 75, for the same reasons decided that the Court was without power to parole one convicted of murder.

Judge Barrett in Commonwealth v. Kelmar, 4 D. and C. 525 (1924) came to the conclusion that the Court, under the two acts, was without authority to parole a convict sentenced to separate and solitary confinement in a county jail, for the reason that such prisoner might have been sentenced to the penitentiary and the Court has no authority to parole prisoners from the penitentiary. His conclusion is that the Court can parole only where the penalty for the offense is simple imprisonment in the county jail.

Judge Gordon, Jr., in Commonwealth v. Arbach, 19 D. and C. 547, decided that the two acts are supplementary to each other and are to be considered together as a harmonious unit of legislation, and that, therefore, no parole can be granted under the latter act to offenders who are excepted from the benefits of the former act and that, therefore, the court is without authority to parole from the county jail any person confined therein who has been convicted of murder, administering poison, kidnapping, incest, sodomy, buggery, rape, assault and battery with intent to ravish, arson, robbery or burglary, and also any person who has ever before been imprisoned for any crime either in this state or elsewhere. Judge Gordon in Commonwealth v. Jumbo, 19 D. and C. 549, decides that the Court is without authority to parole a prisoner who has served a previous sentence.

On the other hand, Judge Koch, of Schuylkill County, in Commonwealth v. Fotte, 17 D. and C. 453, held that the power of the Court to parole under the Act of 1911, p. 1059, from the county prison was not limited to the classes which were made eligible to probation by the Act of 1911, p. 1055. He points out that the Act of 1911, p. 1059, applies to any convict confined in the county jail and says: "It, therefore, appears to us that the power of parole relates to any convict whose sentence is less than life imprisonment. And I think that when a person has an indeterminate sentence imposed upon him, a parole may be considered only upon the expiration of the minimum sentence, and even then the convict is not entitled to any benefits under the Commutation Act of 1901."

This opinion was apparently shared by Judge Edwards of Lackawanna County. In the case of Commonwealth v. Joseph Ferraro, 12 Lack. 291, he says: "The Parole Act of 1911 does not specify the circumstances and conditions under which it would be proper to release on parole a convict who is in the county jail. The matter is evidently left to the discretion of the judges, because the power to release is to be conferred "after due inquiry."

There has been no opinion by an appellate court. We do not know what the practice is in the courts from whom we have had no opinions. In Berks County the power has been used widely and without restriction. It is submitted that the view taken by the majority of the county courts is not sound and not in accordance with the legislative intent. The Parole Act uses the language "to release on parole any convict confined in the county jail," etc., and the act also empowers the Court to recommit to jail for violation of parole and "to re-parole in the same manner and in the same procedure as in the case of the original parole, if, in the judgment of said court, there is a reasonable probability that the convict will be benefitted by again according liberty to such convict, and also to again recommit for violation of such parole." So that in this latter provision we seem to have a clear expression of the legislative intent to authorize the courts to parole a prisoner the second time after he had been recommitted. If such recommitment was brought about by the commission of a new offense, the Legislature would not, logically, have expressly granted the power to re-parole if they had intended that a person who had served a previous sentence should not be eligible to parole.

It is to be noted that Judge Koch, although giving a broad interpretation to the Parole Act, states tha a prisoner serving an indeterminate sentence cannot be paroled before the expiration of his minimum sentence. On the other hand, the Superior Court in Commonwealth v. Renya, 91 P. Superior Ct. 90, where a prisoner was convicted of assault and battery, aggravated assault and battery with intent to kill, and was sentenced to the county jail, held that there was no restriction in the Parole Act of 1911 prohibiting the court from exercising the power to parole at any time during the term of a prisoner's sentence, thus differing from the parole provision open to prisoners from the penitentiary, and that the court after due inquiry may parole before the expiration of the minimum term.

It is believed that these lower court decisions reflect the judges' lack of confidence in the parole idea.

Of course, it is uncertain which view the appellate courts will finally take. The state of the law at the present time is uncertain and, therefore, affords an unsatisfactory foundation for the development of a uniform parole system. It seems that the Probation Commission should consider a recommendation to the legislature for the passage of a new and clarifying act. In view of the skepticism of many judges, it may be wise to exclude cases of murder, administering poison, kidnapping, incest, sodomy, buggery, rape, assault and battery with intent to ravish, arson, robbery and burglary from the general power to parole; but it is submitted that the mere fact of a former imprisonment should not exclude all of that class from the benefits of the act.

Note: Sections II and IV of the tentative outline presented at the April 27th meeting have been combined in this outline making Section III.
Section III of the old outline has been made Section II.
Sections V, VI, VII and VIII are now IV, V, VI and VII.
Changes have been underlined.

1. Definitions. For the purpose of this act the following terms have the following meanings: The term "placed on probation" means suspension of sentence. The term "probationer" means a person placed on probation. The term "probation officer" means one who either investigates for the court prior to sentence or supervises a probationer, or both. The term "court" includes all courts of criminal jurisdiction as well as juvenile courts, and the judges of all such courts. The term "violation of probation" means any one of the following acts or omissions within the period of probation: (a) the commission by the probationer of any additional crime or offense, (b) failure to comply with any of the conditions of his probation, or (c) absconding by remaining away from the jurisdiction of the court or keeping his whereabouts hidden. The term "conviction" means the establishment of guilt by verdict of guilty, plea of guilty or plea of nole contendere when accepted by the court. The term "restitution" shall include the return of the property taken, or appropriated, or the value thereof, and also the value of the property injured or destroyed and the amount of hospital and medical expenses in cases of personal injury. The term "child" means a minor under the age of sixteen years. The term "adult" mans any person over the age of a child as defined and limited by this act. The masculine pronoun shall be construed to denote females as well as males.

2. Power of the Court. A. As to Adults. The court authorized to impose sentence upon conviction may, except as provided otherwise in this section, suspend the imposing of the sentence and place the defendant on probation for a definite period on terms and conditions to be designated by the court which may include the payment, in installations or otherwise, (a) of money for the use of the county, not exceeding, however, the fine fixed by law for conviction of such offense, and or (b) of money as restitution as to the court may seem right and just. Said terms and conditions shall be reduced to writing and filed in the office of the clerk of the court as a part of the judgment of the court in such case. No such conditions for the payment of money shall be considered as the imposition of a fine or a sentence nor prevent the court from thereafter sentencing any defendant under the act under which he was convicted, upon violation of his parole. Sentence shall not be suspended nor the defendant placed on probation (a) if convicted of murder, administering poison, kidnapping, rape, assault and battery with intent to ravish, or robbery armed with an offensive weapon, or (b) if the conviction be for a fourth offense whether any or all of such convictions shall have been of either misdemeanors or felonies and whether in this commonwealth or elsewhere, but an adjudication of delinquency by a juvenile court shall not be considered a conviction. In case of a felony sentence shall not be suspended, however, and the defendant placed upon probation until an investigation and report shall have been made to the court of the circumstances of his offense, his criminal record, if any, and his social history, which report together with the report of his physical, mental or psychiatric examination, if any, shall be filed with the clerk of said court. And in case of a felony, before the defendant be placed on probation, the district attorney shall have been given an opportunity to be heard. While the defendant is on probation, the court may, from time to time, extend the period of probation to a date to be fixed in the order, but within the longest period for which the defendant might have been sentenced upon conviction.

B. As to Children. Nothing in this section shall be construed to modify or to repeal any of the provisions of The Juvenile Court Law, being the Act of June 2, 1933 (P. L. 1433), entitled "An Act defining the powers of the courts of quarter sessions, the Municipal Court of Philadelphia, and the County or Juvenile Court of Allegheny County, with respect to the care, guidance, control, trial, placement and commitment of delinquent, dependent and neglected children under sixteen years of age and of persons over sixteen years of age contributing to or encouraging the delinquency, neglect and dependency of children; and amending, revising and consolidating the law relating thereto," or to modify or to repeal any of the provisions of the Juvenile Court Law of Allegheny County, being the Act of the third day of June, 1933 (P. L. 1449), entitled "An act establishing a court of record in the county of Allegheny for control, care, guidance, treatment, trial, placement and commitment of delinquent, neglected and dependent children over sixteen years of age and of persons under sixteen years of age contributing to or encouraging delinquency, neglect or dependency of children; defining the jurisdiction and powers of the court, and regulating procedure therein; providing for the transfer thereto of certain powers, functions and duties from other courts, providing for the election of judges thereof, the appointment of probation officers, other necessary staff officials and assistants; providing for housing of same, and providing for detention facilities; making the contributing to or encouraging of the delinquency, neglect or dependency of children a misdemeanor; and providing penalties.

3. Appointment of Probation Officers; Clerks; Stenographers; Compensation. Each court of quarter sessions, the Municipal Court of Philadelphia, the county Court of Allegheny County and the Juvenile Court of Allegheny County shall appoint at least one and as many more discreet persons, of good character, as may be reasonably necessary for the proper performance of the probation work of such court, to serve as probation officers during the pleasure of the court. Where more than one is appointed, the court shall designate one such officers to be the chief probation officer. Such persons shall be chosen by the court from a list of persons who shall have been certified by the Department of Public Instruction as qualified to act as probation officers.

It shall be the duty of the Department of Welfare to prescribe, from time to time, by rules and regulations approved by the Welfare Commission, the qualifications to be possessed by persons desiring employment as probation officers. The qualifications shall be such as will best promote the efficient operation of a probation system, having regard to the applicant's ability to investigate the social and criminal history of the offender, to assist the probationer to become a self-supporting, useful and law-abiding citizen and to keep accurate records of each case. In all cases, however, persons appointed shall be citizens of the United States.

Every person desiring an appointment as a probation officer by any court of this Commonwealth shall file with the Department of Welfare an application, under oath or affirmation, which shall be in such form and shall set forth such information as the rules and regulations of said Department shall prescribe. Upon receiving such application the Department of Welfare shall transmit the same to the Department of Public Instruction which shall determine whether, under the rules and regulations of the Department of Welfare, the applicant is qualified for service as a probation officer. If so, the applicant shall be admitted to competitive examination, when examinations shall next be held for probation officers. Said examinations shall, as far as may be possible, relate to those matters which will fairly test the capacity and fitness of the persons examined to perform the duties of probation officers.

The Department of Public Instruction shall conduct such examinations at such places in the Commonwealth as to make it reasonably convenient and inexpensive for applicants to attend them. Examinations shall be held at least twice in each year. The Department of Public Instruction may divide the State into districts for the purpose of conducting such examinations. Every candidate admitted to such examinations shall be given a number, so that when his paper is marked and graded it will be impossible for the person passing upon the examination papers to ascertain his identity until his grade has been established. The examination papers of such candidates shall be marked by committees composed of representatives of the Department of Public Instruction and of persons, not employed by the Commonwealth in any other capacity, designated by the presidents of the colleges and universities receiving State aid from the Commonwealth. All such examination papers shall be graded on a basis of one hundred per centum and less. Such examination papers shall immediately thereafter be filed and the applicants listed. Any person who shall have been a member of the armed forces of the United States during a war or expedition for which the Government of the United States issued a campaign badge, whose separation from said service was honorable, whether by discharge or otherwise, shall receive, in addition to his rating on his examination paper, an additional rating of five per centum. All such outside examiners shall receive compensation at the rate of fifteen dollars per day for their services. The number of committees which may be necessary shall be determined by the Department of Public Instruction; and each committee shall consist of three persons. The selections made by the presidents of State-aided colleges and universities shall be submitted to the Department of Public Instruction in writing by each such president, and the Department of Public Instruction shall designate committee members from the lists so submitted in rotation.

All applicants who shall receive as the result of such examination a grade of seventy per centum or more shall be deemed to have passed such examination and shall thereupon be eligible for appointment by any court as a probation officer of such court.

Upon application, the Department of Public Instruction shall furnish the judge or judges of each court appointing probation officers with the names and addresses of all such persons who shall, from time to time, have successfully passed such examination.

Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to work the dismissal of any probation officer now in service, who shall, as heretofore, hold office at the pleasure of the court.

The probation officers shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by the judge or judges of the court appointing them, provided, however, that in counties of the first and second class the compensation of the chief probation officer shall not exceed $5000 a year and in counties of the third and fourth class, shall not exceed $4000 a year and in all other counties, shall not exceed $3500 a year, and provided, further, that the compensation of additional probation officers shall not exceed $2500 a year. In addition to such compensation, the probation officers shall receive such expenses as may be necessary and shall have been approved by a judge of the court. Said compensation and expenses shall be paid monthly, or semimonthly, as in the case of other county employees, out of the treasury of the county in the manner in which other county expenses are paid by law.

The several courts shall have power to appoint such clerks, stenographers and office assistants in connection with the work of the probation officers as the judge or judges may deem necessary. The compensation of such appointees shall be fixed by the judges of said court and shall be paid by the county.

4. Bonds; Accounts. Before entering upon the duties of his office, each probation officer who collects or has custody of money, shall execute a bond to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for the use of the county in a penal sum to be fixed by the court with sufficient sureties approved thereby, conditioned for the honest accounting for all money received by him as such probation officer. The accounts of all probation officers shall be subject to audit at any time by the controller of said county.

5. Probationer to be Assigned to Officer. Every defendant placed upon probation shall be assigned by the court or chief probation officer to the supervision of a designated probation officer. Except in cases of children under twelve years of age, no probationer shall be committed to the supervision of or into the custody of a probation officer of the opposite sex.

6. Investigation. Probation officers shall fully and promptly investigate and report to the court in writing on the circumstances of the offense, the criminal record and social history of a defendant, and in the case of a child in a court having jurisdiction over juveniles the circumstances responsible for the child's appearance in court and his social history. Whenever desirable and facilities exist therefor, the probation officers shall also obtain a physical, mental and psychiatric examination of such defendant or such child and report thereon in like manner to the court prior to sentence or adjudication. The court shall have such information before it prior to sentence or adjudication. When an offender is committed or sentenced to a correctional institution for adults for a period longer than three months, or when a child is committed or placed in an institution, either for delinquent or neglected children, a copy of the probation officer's investigation shall be sent by the court to the warden, superintendent or director of the institution.

7. Conditions of probation. The court shall determine the conditions of probation and may include among them the following, or any other; That the probationer (a) shall avoid injurious or vicious habits; (b) shall avoid places or persons of disreputable or harmful characters; (c) shall report to the probation officer as directed by the court or the probation officer; (d) shall permit the probation officer to visit him at his place of abode or elsewhere; (e) shall answer all reasonable inquiries on the part of the probation officer; (f) shall work faithfully at suitable employment; (g) shall remain within a specified area; (h) shall abstain from the use of intoxicating beverages; (i) shall pay a fine in one or several sums; (j) shall make reparation or restitution to the aggrieved parties in an amount not to exceed the actual damage or loss caused by his offense; (k) shall support his dependents or comply with any order of court for the support of his dependents, and, upon order of the court, furnish security therefor in an amount approved by the court, which upon default shall be applied to such support; and (l) shall, if a child of compulsory school age, attend school. The court may at any time revise, modify or enlarge the conditions or period of probation as to any probationer. A copy of the order of the court setting forth the period and conditions of probation shall be furnished by the court to the probation officer.

8. Period of Probation. In the case of a child the jurisdiction of the juvenile court shall not extend beyond his minority; in the case of any other defendant convicted of an offense less than a felony, not beyond three years; and in the case of a defendant convicted of a felony, for a term fixed by the court, not beyond the maximum time for which he might be sentenced, except that for desertion and non-support, the period of probation may continue during the existence of the order of support. If a probationer shall abscond, the time during which he remains away or hidden may be added to the period of probation. If a probationer be convicted and incarcerated during the probation period for the commission of an additional crime or offense, the period of probation shall be thereby suspended for the period of incarceration for such additional crime or offense.

9. Discharge. The court may at any time, after report by the probation officer, discharge a probationer from probation and further supervision.

10. Violation; Revocation; Modification; Continuation. Whenever within the period of probation any probationer shall violate any of the conditions of his probation, the court may issue a warrant or other process for his arrest and may commit him with or without bail. After an opportunity has been given to such probationer to be heard the court may revoke, continue, extend or modify his probation. If his probation be revoked, the court may impose any sentence which it might have originally imposed to begin at such time as the court shall direct.

11. Duties of Probation Officers. A. As to Adults. It shall be the duty of every probation officer to furnish to each of his probationers a statement of the conditions of probation, and to instruct him with regard thereto; to have the probationer sign a copy of the conditions of his probation, which copy shall be retained by the probation officer; to keep informed concerning his conduct, habits, associates, employment, recreation and whereabouts; to visit his home at least once a month; to aid and encourage him by friendly advice and admonition; and by such other measures as may seem most suitable to bring about improvement in his conduct, condition and general attitude toward society. Probation officers shall report in writing to the court monthly the number in their charge, the number who have faithfully complied with the conditions of their probation, the number who have been apprehended for violation of probation, the number who have absconded and such other information as the court may direct. Probation officers shall keep an accurate individual record of the social and criminal history and progress of each probationer and of his supervision by the officers; keep accurate and complete accounts of all money collected from probationers; give receipts therefor and make prompt returns thereof at least monthly; aid in securing employment; perform such other duties in connection with such probationer as the court may direct; and make such reports to the Department of Welfare as it may require.

B. As to Children. The probation officers of a juvenile court shall have charge of the probation work of the court; keep such records as may be required by the court; make such investigations as may be required by the court; be present in court when cases are being heard; furnish to the court such information and assistance as the judge may require; take such charge of any child, before and after hearing, as may be directed by the court; keep informed concerning the conduct and condition of each child under their supervision; report thereon from time to time to the court and make such reports to the Department of Welfare as it may require.

12. Powers of Probation Officers. Probation officers may require such reports by probationers as are reasonable or necessary. Probation officers shall have the powers of peace officers. Probation officers with the approval of the court may act as parole officers over persons released from penal or reformatory institutions.

13. Physical, Mental and Psychiatric Examinations. The courts are charged with the duty, in cooperation with the proper fiscal authorities, to provide when practical clinical facilities, and to adopt necessary rules for the use thereof, for such physical, mental and psychiatric examinations and reports as may be within the required scope of efficient probation investigation and supervision.

REPORT OF PENAL PROGRAM COMMITTEE

Governor's Office, Harrisburg, January 14, 1935.

To the Honorable, the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

I have the honor to present herewith the report and recommendations of a Committee on the penal program of Pennsylvania.

This Committee, composed of the outstanding Pennsylvania experts on prison management, has made a careful study of penitentiaries and prisons, and has presented to me an admirable report.

Many of its recommendations have already been put into effect. Other recommendations remain to be carried out.

In view of the disorders at the Eastern State Penitentiary during the past year, recommendations regarding Cherry Hill and Graterford are of particular importance.

I commend the report of this Committee to you for careful study.

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

May 28, 1934.

His Excellency, Gifford Pinchot
Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

Sir:

On Friday, March 2, 1934, you appointed a Committee on Penal Program for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, consisting of Louis N. Robinson, Herbert Smith, Edwin C. May, J. W. Claudy and S. P. Ashe. Your instructions to this Committee were as follows:

"This committee is authorized to recommend to the Governor the reorganization of the penal institutions of the Commonwealth, including the assignment and redistribution of inmates on the basis of classification, necessary physical plant changes, essential personnel changes, care and treatment of inmates, employment for inmates, and any other matters pertaining to the proper conduct of the penal institutions of the Commonwealth. It cannot have legal authority in these matters except as the Governor approves, as the law stands now."

Following your letter of appointment, another letter was received from you in which you stated that you would like to have a complete report including recommendations by June 1st. With the above letters in mind, your Committee has a number of meetings and has taken into account not only their own findings, but recommendations made by various other committees and agencies.

In making our detail findings and recommendations, we have confined ourselves almost exclusively to the Eastern State Penitentiary. This has been done because of the lack of funds or other reasons; they cannot put into practice any approved recommendation unless new moneys are provided through an authorized deficiency appropriation. We in general have avoided detail recommendations as they relate to the Western State Penitentiary except as to the matter of classification of prisoners and prisons because in any changes contemplated there, no deficiency appropriation will be required. There is sufficient money available to meet all the standards set up at the Eastern institution. We have also taken into consideration only the most necessary factors, feeling that in asking for a deficiency appropriation it must be apparently justifiable. Of course, after the recommendations have been approved, they can only be justified if they are properly used.

We give you below eight findings, followed by eight definite recommendations, which if approved will go far in eliminating many of the institutional and administrative difficulties of the penal system of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Findings—as of March 2, 1934

1. At the present time, each of the four institutions for adult felons, namely, Cherry Hill, Graterford, Riverside and Rockview, house prisoners of all types without reference to scientific classification. This very materially handicaps every institution because in any program that is presented it is always necessary to handle the population from the standpoint of the individual who cannot or will not fit the program.

2. We find both at Cherry Hill and Graterford that the majority of the inmates are totally idle. This creates a deadening situation and a prison population without interest. It increases the discipline problems and deprives the institutions of the most effective means of rehabilitation because of the lack of training in industry, a factor in which most of the inmates of institutions are woefully short.

3. We find only a limited educational program and no organized recreational program. Because of the existing idleness, the importance of these two factors cannot be too greatly emphasized. They provide an interest and furnish training in lieu of work and in themselves are prime factors in a rehabilitation program.

4. We find that through the lack of case study or case study organization the prisoners have been dealt with almost entirely en masse. There is no adequate fund of information available on the men for handling them individually in an intelligent manner either within the institution or for later consideration for release. Such information as is derived from individual case studies will be absolutely essential in the advent of a classification of prisons.

5. Because of the expectation of the former boards of trustees of the Eastern State Penitentiary to abandon Cherry Hill and move to Graterford within the near future, the Cherry Hill institution has been allowed to deteriorate through lack of appropriations for repairs and upkeep for the last five years. The most outstanding result of this policy was the impossible dining room and kitchen equipment, which in our opinion is one of the fundamental requisites of any institution.

6. We find that at Cherry Hill new buildings have been added from time to time until practically the entire yard is covered, leaving a woefully inadequate space for physical exercise and outdoor recreation. Unless increased yard space can be provided, an outdoor recreational program will be critically curtailed.

7. We find at Cherry Hill and Graterford an inadequate personnel to properly carry on the services of several of the departments of the institutions, either with their present or future programs.

8. We find the budget of the Eastern State Penitentiary inadequate to put in practice the recommendations that will hereinafter appear.

Recommendations

1. We recommend that the four institutions now housing adult felons, namely, Cherry Hill, Graterford, Riverside and Rockview, be classified as follows:

Rockview to be classed as a discharge prison where will be housed the most hopeful cases selected from Graterford, Cherry Hill and Riverside. By most hopeful cases, we mean generally first offenders of normal mentality and comparatively good social history and those who in the judgment of the several prison staffs will probably be released at the expiration of their minimum sentence. This, you will see, necessarily makes of Rockview entirely a transfer prison. A classification such as those selected from some six thousand inmates should make of Rockview a high grade minimum security institution that should be much more successful in its operation in the future than in the past.

Graterford and Riverside to be classed as medium security prisons. While this term is really erroneous, we mean that these two institutions shall house those adult felons who through types of crime, recidivism, length of term, or other factors are deemed as wet not proper subjects for a minimum security prison such as Rockview. However, these are the training institutions from which most inmates will be transferred eventually to Rockview, depending on response to prison treatment. Riverside and Cherry Hill should be classed as receiving prisons and in these institutions classification staffs should be concentrated as all original transfers will be made from these two institutions to the other prisons.

Cherry Hill to be classed as a maximum security prison. By this we mean that the least hopeful of the adult felons shall be housed there. This should at no time be considered entirely from a prison behavior standpoint but should take in the factors of chronic recidivism and probable incapability of social adjustment and that group who for any reason will likely be required to serve their maximum sentence. This prison should at no time be construed as an institution of lost souls. A compete educational, recreational and industrial program should be carried on there just as it is in all other prisons. We deem it advisable to reduce the Cherry Hill population to as small a number as possible. With the present prison population of the Commonwealth, when Graterford is filled, Cherry Hill could be reduced to a population not exceeding eight hundred.

NOTE: In orginal transfers, errors will no doubt be made. Through the ease of transfer and retransfer under the Act of 1923 as amended in 1929, and in some cases under the Act of 1921, and through restudy and reclassification, these errors can be readily and quickly adjusted.

2. We recommend that as many inmates as practical be given employment on maintenance occupations and that a remuneration of ten cents a day be paid. The law provides that inmates receive from ten to twenty cents a day. In recommending ten cents per day, we do so feeling that many more inmates may be employed at a cost that is not exorbitant and that the maximum number of men can be given some occupational responsibility and interest.

3. We recommend that an educational program be set up both at Cherry Hill and at Graterford providing eight grades of a standard school curriculum and as much of the high school program as is found advisable after study. We recommend further that the maintenance occupations, in so far as possible, be organized for vocational training. We recommend that through the cooperation of the Welfare Department, the production shops, in cooperation with the institution, be organized for vocational training. We recommend that courses in music, stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping and other subjects be organized and carried on as extensively as possible. We recommend that a recreational program be organized and set up within the educational department. Organized recreation in all its fields should attract for general participation in at least one field practically the entire prison body.

4. We recommend that an organization be set up for the purpose of assembling all possible information concerning each prisoner relating to his mentality, physical condition, criminal history, social history, etc., and preparing an integrated case history for the use of the prison staff in the classification and treatment of prisoners.

5. We recommend that kitchen and dining room equipment should be purchased at once for the Cherry Hill institution for the reason that the present facilities are absolutely beyond repair and impossible. We further recommend that all minor repairs be made to Cherry Hill as rapidly as possible.

6. We recommend that at least one and possibly two of the most antiquated cell blocks at Cherry Hill be razed, which will give adequate yard space for physical exercise and recreation. Before this is undertaken, to decide just what buildings should be razed, the services of a State engineer should be secured to make a study and recommendations.

7. We recommend that the following personnel be employed at the Cherry Hill and Graterford institutions to enable the various department to carry out the program outlined in the above recommendations:

Two vocational teachers
Two assistants in academic education
Two recreational directors
*Five qualified men to do psychological testing and make complete investigations and to prepare case studies of inmates at the time of admission. These men will constitute the case study unit, which will include the present psychology department at Cherry Hill and Graterford.

One Warden's assistant who will be qualified to head up and integrate the activities of all the departments having anything to do with the rehabilitation of inmates.

*One psychiartrist on a part time basis who will act as consultant in the classification of different cases and the treatment of mental anomalies.

Ten additional guards to properly man Graterford with a population of two thousand.

8. We recommend that a deficiency appropriation be approved sufficient to cover the purchase of dining room and kitchen equipment, pay roll for additional inmates to be assigned to maintenance occupations at ten cents per day, pay roll for the added staff in education, recreation and case study unit, ten additional guards at Graterford to care for a population of two thousand, and any moneys found necessary incident to the razing of the cell block or blocks at Cherry Hill.

Accomplishments Since Appointments

Since appointment, your Committee has made some of the recommendations that appear above which have had your approval. Anticipating your approval on others, certain groundwork has been set up for putting our recommendations into operation.

1. New kitchen and dining room equipment has been purchased and is now being installed at Cherry Hill. This work should be finished in the very near future.
2. Educational and recreational personnel has been employed and has made progress in those two fields. Much outdoor recreation has been added to the prison program both at Cherry Hill and at Graterford. Educational classes are being organized. If the proper personnel has been selected and the prison schedule rearranged to make the above activities major ones, great progress should soon be apparent.
3. Four hundred inmates have been placed on maintenance occupations at Cherry Hill and Graterford.
4. Psychological examinations have been made of all the prisoners of the Commonwealth including Huntingdon. In addition, as a part of the case study, through personal interview as much of the criminal and social history has been secured as the inmates have been willing to impart. No field work has been done in the East for the purposes of verification and additional information, which will be done when a complete case work unit functions. In the original psychological examinations, which will be a part of the case study, some errors no doubt have occurred because of the necessity of using some inadequately trained personnel made necessary on account of the size of the original job. These errors are probably widely scattered and can readily be corrected. In the Western District and at Huntingdon, the entire population has been tentatively classified on paper on a basis of complete case histories prepared by the respective case work departments. A similar classification on the basis of information available will be completed at the Eastern Penitentiary within the next few weeks.
5. As the first step in prison classification, one hundred eighty inmates have been approved for transfer from Graterford to Rockview, sixty of whom have already been transferred. When this transfer is complete, under the present population there will be approximately six hundred vacant cells at Graterford which should be filled at once from Cherry Hill. This will reduce the population of Cherry Hill to approximately seven hundred. The present stumbling block to these latter transfers is the belief of Warden Smith that it is not practical to fill Graterford to capacity at this time.

An Approved Recommendation not yet Functioning

1. To the present time no individual has been secured as the assistant warden for the Eastern District because of lack of agreement between the Board of Trustees of the Eastern State Penitentiary and the Department of Welfare on any of the individuals presented who are applying for that position. This is very important because this employe will be the keystone of the entire educational, recreational and social service program.

All other recommendations have been approved by you and are at least beginning to function.

Conclusion

In our above study and recommendations we have aimed to use the existing facilities to the best advantage, keeping in mind at all times the present condition of the several budgets. We recognize the need of a specialized institution for feeble-minded delinquents to insure the effectiveness of classification, but have confined ourselves to those recommendations that are immediately possible andeconomically sound. We have purposely refrained from serious consideration of Huntingdon because of its limited usefulness under its present age requirements for admission. Until and if changes are made, transfers to Huntingdon should be conducted as special cases that fit their existing laws. This can be done by mutual agreement.

When the recommendations presented have your approval or disapproval, this Committee will consider itself discharged.

REPORT OF COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE CONDITIONS IN NEEDLE TRADES INDUSTRY OF LEHIGH AND NORTHAMPTON COUNTIES

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania,
Governor's Office, Harrisburg, January 14, 1935.

To the Honorable, the Members of the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

I have the honor to submit herewith for your consideration the report of the Commission I appointed to investigate conditions in the Needle Trades Industry in Lehigh and Northampton Counties.

Although this report was completed some time ago, never-the-less the conditions which it discloses grew up under laws which are still in effect.

While the codes of these industries have doubtless wiped out much of the child labor in sweatshops, that is no reason why Pennsylvania should fail to enact legislation to strengthen our laws covering the employment of women and children in industry.

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

I. Introduction

In April of this year the Governor of Pennsylvania appointed a Commission to investigate the Needle Trades Industry in Lehigh and Northampton Counties. This procedure was occasioned because of seething unrest in the territory and the striking charges that needle trades factories were a "sweatshop" industry.

The following people were appointed to compromise the personnel of the Commission:

Rev. Willis D. Mathias, Allentown, Pa., Chairman
Minister, Emmanuel Reformed Church
Mr. Clarence J. Moser, Allentown, Pa.
Secretary, Central Trades and Labor Council
Mr. H. Morley Holton, Catasauqua, Pa.
Plant Manager, Phoenix Manufacturing Co.
Dr. Harry L. Baker, Catasauqua, Pa.
Physician
Mr. A. F. Tiderbock, Northampton, Pa.
President, Northampton & Bath R. R. Co.
Dr. Charles A. Haff, Northampton, Pa.
The Haff Hospital
Miss Charlotte E. Carr, Harrisburg, Pa.
Department of Labor and Industry

Three one-day hearings were held for the receiving of testimony, as follows:

Northampton—April 28th
Allentown—May 4th
Bangor—May 16th

In each case a half-day was devoted to hearing the workers' side and another half-day to receiving the testimony of the employers. Civic interests were also given opportunity to submit material. In Allentown, a third meeting, an evening session, was conducted in order to receive statements from women and girl workers concerning alleged immoral practices. Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot and Mrs. George B. Wood, the latter a member of the State Industrial Board, assisted with the evening session in Allentown. Mrs. Wood was also present for the other Allentown hearings. Mr. John Stiles of Bangor served as an advisory member on the day of the Bangor hearings.

We wish to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to all those persons who assisted us during the inquiry, and especially to representatives of the Department of Labor and Industry who gave such fine cooperation to the Commission during the period covering the investigation.

Now on this 17th day of July, 1933, we beg leave to submit our report of findings and recommendations as contained herein. It is our hope that we have been fair and just in our procedure and that the problem has been approached with open-mindedness.

II. Findings

A large amount of testimony was given before the Commission and we herewith submit the findings which were included in the material reported to us.

A. Wages.

1. That the evidence submitted indicated that the wage rates for many, many workers were so extremely low that it was not possible for them to maintain a decent standard of living, and in some cases not even a subsistence.

2. That there was failure on the part of employers to make payment of wages at least every 15 days as is specified by law. In fact, certain companies, namely, Legion Shirt Co., Allentown; Catty Shirt Co., Catasauqua, and other, went out of business leaving wage claims due workers amounting to thousands of dollars, without any legal process available for making collections of same.

B. Working Conditions.

1. That in factories of the needle trades industry, girl workers under 16 years of age used pressing irons weighing 5 and 6 pounds during every working hour of a work day. Such employment is injurious to workers of a tender age.

2. That in many instances where women and girls were employed there was not a nurse or matron to whom they could report concerning conditions of employment and any periods of illness.

3. That testimony was given showing negligence on the part of employers to keep gas connections in good repair in the pressing departments of needle trades industry factories. Such conditions involve health and fire hazards.

4. That there were cases of violation of the Sanitary Code governing sanitary conditions in industry.

5. That there was negligence on the part of factory management in not providing the necessary first-aid materials, rest rooms and cots as required by legal statute.

6. That testimony introduced showed there were instances when women worked more than 10 hours a day and 54 hours per week. Employes stated that they were afraid to report such violations because they feared the loss of their jobs.

C. Child Workers.

1. That working papers were returned to school authorities when child strikers under the age of 16 objected to their conditions of employment. This policy was followed in an effort to force the children to return to work.

2. That testimony submitted gave evidence that when children workers returned to school because of lack of employment they played truant and found it difficult to adapt themselves to the routine of study which had become foreign to them.

3. That evidence brought to the Commission showed that children in industry under 16 years of age, (a) worked more than the regulation number of hours per day, (b) were required to work more than specified number of hours per week, and (c) continued at work after the hour as posted on the labor schedule. The posting of such a list as referred to in (c) is required by the Department of Labor and Industry. It was indicated by children workers that they were warned by "bosses" not to give information to inspectors and to tell falsehoods when questioned by investigators of the Department of Labor and Industry, so that violations by the employer would not be discovered.

D. Morals.

1. That an amount of evidence was submitted which showed that there were cases where those in authority, either as foremen or higher officials, used their official position to take undue liberties with girl and women workers while at work, and even to make advances which had immoral intent. Such conditions were reported as being mostly in evidence where there were men foremen, and foreladies were not employed.

E. Miscellaneous.

1. That in certain instances where a local Chamber of Commerce or other civic bodies had been instrumental in bringing some needle trades factories into the community, they were rather negligent in ascertaining the standing of the company before it was given a free-hand to operate in the community.

2. That many other items of a sundry nature were brought to the attention of this Commission that are not being mentioned in this report, but, which nevertheless indicate the general trend in the needle trades industry and the need for remedial measures.

III. Recommendations

In view of the findings as reported above, this Commission takes opportunity to submit the following recommendations to the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

A. Wages.

1. The enactment of a Minimum Wage Law which will provide a decent wage for the lowest paid worker.

2. The passage of a law giving authority to the Department of Labor and Industry to aid workers in the collection of unpaid wage claims, and other such legislation which will guarantee wages to workers.

3. The enactment of a law making provision for a system of Unemployment Insurance for the Needle Trades Industry to be supervised by the State.

B. Working Conditions.

1. The amending of the present 54 hour law for women workers so as to reduce the same to a point of prohibiting more than 40 hours per week.

2. The enactment of legislation which will require that where ten or more women workers are employed, and there is no forelady or matron, one of the women workers shall be designated as a matron to care for the needs of said workers. In larger establishments, such a matron to be in full-time service in that capacity.

3. The passage of legislation which will prevent male workers under 18, and female workers under 20 from working as pressers in the needle trades industry.

C. Child Workers.

1. The amendment of the present State Child Labor Law to prevent the employment of children in industry under 16 years of age.

2. The ratification of the Federal Child Labor Amendment by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

D. General.

1. We recommend that since there are constant efforts in the industry to evade adherence to existing labor laws, that the Bureau of Inspection of the Department of Labor and Industry be more vigorous in their inspections, and that they engage trained and efficient inspectors in order to compel compliance to the law.

2. Since there is great need for arbitration and mediation today in the realm of industry, we recommend the re-establishment of the Bureau of Industrial Relations in the Department of Labor and Industry at the earliest possible date.

IV. Conclusion

The members of this Commission wish to state that the recommendations included in this report are based on the findings which were summarized from the testimony which was submitted by representatives of the employers and employes in the Needle Trades Industry located in the area which we were commissioned to study.

We sincerely trust that ways and means shall be inaugurated to put these recommendations into effect in order that an existing deplorable condition may be alleviated and corrected.

The Commission.

APPENDIX TO FINAL MESSAGE OF GOVERNOR PINCHOT

Reports of Departments, Boards and Commissions

STATE EMERGENCY RELIEF BOARD

Eric H. Biddle, Executive Director

To the Governor:

Herewith is a brief report of the State Emergency Relief Board since its creation.

The State Emergency Relief Board of Pennsylvania came into existence by the Acts of August 19, 1932.

Including the first Talbot Act appropriation of $10,000,000 expended before this Board was created, there will have been made available to December 31 of this year $241,000,000 in State and Federal funds.

Early Relief Steps

Long before the State Emergency Relief Board was established, Pennsylvania had been active in preparing to meet the problem of caring for the unemployed.

The economic catastrophe which in October, 1929, burst over the country had been preceded by a stream of unemployment that had been steadily increasing.

In the months following the stock market crash it became apparent that industry had suffered a severe dislocation and the nation was faced with an economic problem worse than any heretofore experienced.

Up until October 10, 1930, response to the unemployment situation had been local rather than State-wide. On that date, Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for Governor, appointed a Pennsylvania Committee on Unemployment.

In appointing the Committee, Mr. Pinchot wrote in the letter of invitation to its members:

"I suggest that the following memoranda among others deserve your attention:

"1. Seasonal fluctuation in demand for work * * *

"2. Employment agencies * * *

"3. Unemployment due to changes in markets and manufacturing methods * * *

"4. A planned program of public work * * *

"5. Stabilization of incomes during periods of unemployment * * *"

This committee's report was transmitted to the Legislature in February, 1931. Recommendations regarding relief were dealt with casually by the report.

On July 6, 1931, Governor Pinchot appointed a committee of seven members which came to be called the Governor's Planning Committee on Unemployment Relief.

The report of this committee recommended a more thorough study of the situation and went a long way toward proving the case for the need of State aid for unemployment relief.

The difficulty in this, however, lay in Article 3, Section 18, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania which provided that:

"No appropriations except for pensions or gratuities for military service, shall be made for charitable, educational or benevolent purposes, to any person or community, nor to any denominational or sectarian institution, corporation or association."

Governor Demands Federal Aid

Here seemed an insuperable obstacle. Governor Pinchot, in an address delivered August 13, 1931, before the Mayor's Unemployment Committee in Detroit, Michigan, said:

"Pennsylvania is prevented by a clause in its constitution from incurring debt beyond a million dollars. It would require a Constitutional Amendment to let us borrow, and that takes several years.

"Then why not call a special session of Legislature and appropriate? Again the Constitution. Under it we cannot appropriate for such a purpose. I am profoundly sorry that I must admit it, but so far as money goes, Pennsylvania as a Commonwealth is almost helpless to assist.

"Many other States are in the same predicament. Many doubtless, as we do, have in their Constitutions clauses which in effect forbid the appropriation of State money for the purpose of relieving private distress.

"The fact is that the only power strong enough and able to act in time, to meet the new problem of the coming winter is the Government of the United States. This is a National emergency. It is a National calamity as well. The Nation must help to meet it."

The Governor's Planning Committee, of which Horace Forbes Baker, a Pittsburgh attorney and welfare leader, was chairman, recommended that the Governor call a special session of the Legislature, that $20,000,000 be considered by the Legislature as an appropriation for unemployment relief, and that the Governor cause to be created a corporation for unemployment relief to which appropriations by the Legislature could be made.

The Attorney General, however, held that such procedure would be unconstitutional.

First Relief Session

On October 31, 1931, Governor Pinchot issued a call for a Special Session of the Legislature to convene on November 9.

In his message to the Legislature on November 10, he pointed out that under the Constitution that body could not make appropriations providing directly to unemployed persons and their families, food, clothing or shelter and that, moreover, they could not be made to any county, city, borough, or other political subdivision of the Commonwealth nor to a State agency, nor could they be made to welfare agencies incorporated or unincorporated, that in short, money of the State could not be used for direct relief and it was the duty of the Commonwealth to protect its people in some other way.

The Governor then outlined a plan for a Prosperity Bond Issue * * * State bonds to be issued at once although the issue could not be legally ratified until the adoption of a Consitutional Amendment by the people in the Fall of 1933.

The plan involved:

"* * * the creation of a State Commission on Unemployment Relief to consist of five persons serving without salary, who will solicit contributions or subscriptions, supervise their expenditure, cooperate, with local relief organizations and assist the departments of the State Government in relieving distress. The money subscribed will be used where needed without constitutional or other restrictions, except that none of it will be given as a dole in any form.

"It is proposed that ayy money subscribed to the Commission shall be repaid by the State, with interest at four per cent, out of the proceeds of Prosperity Bonds provided for in a joint resolution proposing a Constitutional Amendment which is before you. This resolution, if passed at the present session, will be presented to the next regular session and, if there approved, will be submitted to the people in the Autumn of 1933."

"I have been assured," the Governor wrote, "time and again that the people of Pennsylvania * * * and especially those who are well off * * * would refuse to come forward and subscribe funds that are so urgently needed for the relief work of the Commonwealth. I decline to believe it. On the other hand when I pointed out the imperative need for Federal assistance, it was asserted from many sources, public and private, that Pennsylvania would take care of her own. Very well * * * here is the oportunity to make these assurances god."

On November 24 a public hearing on the question of State-wide unemployment relief was held before members of the General Assembly. The need for State unemployment relief was proved at this hearing. The question next arose as to how much relief could constitutionally be made available.

Attention was focused on necessity for action in the matter by the action of two adjoining states * * * New York in September, 1931, leading the way with an appropriation of $20,000,000 to be administered by a temporary Emergency Relief Administration, and New Jersey a month later with legislation enacting an Emergency Relief Administration headed by a State Director of emergency relief.

First Talbot Act

The Pennsylvania Legislature rejected the Governor's plan for a Prosperity Bond issue and enacted instead the first Talbot Act which was presented to the Governor for signature December 16, 1931.

The Act provided, among other things:

"That in the exercise of the police power for the protection of the public health, safety, morals and welfare threatened by existing conditions of unemployment, and in the assumption by the Commonwealth of its duty to the care of the poor the sum of Ten million dollars is hereby specifically appropriated to the Department of Welfare for payment to political subdivisions charged by law with the care of the poor * * *"

The Governor, acting on the advice of the Attorney General, held that the Act was unconstitutional, refused to sign it and issued a statement in which he said in part:

"The appropriation made by this bill is clearly for charitable or benevolent purposes. It is made for State aid to political subdivisions. A political subdivision is a community. Clearly the appropriation made by this bill is unconstitutional.

"My only course is to follow the recommendation of the Attorney General and let the Talbot Bill become a law without my signature.

"When this bill becomes a law, this administration will favor a prompt decision, because no money can be paid out under it unless and until the Supreme Court affirms its constitutionality. Until it does, the opinion of the Attorney General must stand. But the final decision will rest, not with him, not with me, but with the Supreme Court."

The first Talbot Act became a law without the Governor's signature on December 28, 1931. Because of the question of its constitutionality a friendly suit was instituted to determine this question.

Talbot Act Upheld

On April 7, 1932, the Supreme Court, by a vote of four to three, held the Act constitutional. The opinion of the Court written by Justice John W. Kephart said in part:

"There is no direct prohibition against the use of state money to pay for the care and maintenance of indigent, infim, and mentally defective persons, without ability or means to sustain themselves, and other charges of like nature. They become direct charges on the body politic for its own preservation and protection. As such, in the light of an expense, they stand exactly in the same position as the preservation of law and order * * * The expenditure of money for such purposes by the State is in performance of a governmental function or duty and is not controlled by the constitutional provision, if the purpose is to supply food and shelter to the poor, including those who are destitute because of enforced employment, provided only that the money be not administered through forbidden channels * * * To hold that the State cannot or must not aid its poor would strip the State of a means of self-preservation and might conceive untold hardships and difficulties for the future."

The first Talbot Act went into effect in April, 1932. The significance of this Act is that it resolved in the affirmative the much debated question of the State's constitutional right to appropriate funds for the relief of the unemployed. It determined that there should be State participation in the provision of unemployment relief in Pennsylvania.

Poor Boards Handle Funds

The method of distribution provided for under the Act was that unemployment relief funds should be administered by Poor Boards without State supervision. Pennsylvania's Poor Relief System established in 1682 has an ancestry that goes back to the days of Queen Elizabeth.

Emil Frankel's "Survey of Poor Relief in Pennsylvania" pointed out that with some honorable local exceptions the system was archaic in spirit and organization and grossly wasteful and inefficient in operation.

The $10,000,000 of the first Talbot Act funds were allocated among the Poor Boards and to all intents and purposes were so much additional poor relief money to be administered by poor law officials. It is believed that in some poor districts there still exist unspent balances of the first Talbot funds.

No sooner had the first Talbot Act been put into operation that it was realized that the money appropriated therefrom would be insufficient to meet unemployment needs in the State for any considerable period.

Second Relief Session

On May 26, the Governor held an unemployment conference in Harrisburg to discuss the situation. On June 2, he issued a call for a second Special Session which convened on June 27.

He pointed out to the Legislature that the estimated number of unemployed in Pennsylvania had now risen to 1,150,000 and that estimates indicated that at least $60,000,000 would be required for unemployment relief throughout the Commonwealth within the year.

It was just at this time that Congress passed the first Federal Relief Act permitting Federal loans to States through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for purposes of unemployment relief.

The stage now was set for the organization of the State Emergency Relief Board. Eric H. Biddle, Executive Director of the Board, in his Annual Report, "Unemployment Relief in Pennsylvania, September, 1932, to October 31, 1933, describes the formation of the Board and its organization for business in the following words:

"After a session of nearly two months, the General Assembly passed three Acts which became the cornerstone of Pennsylvania's structure of emergency relief as it has been built up since September 1, 1932.

"These three Acts were as follows:

"Act 51, often called the Woodward Act, provided for the establishment of a State Emergency Relief Board, consisting of five state officials, the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Auditor General, State Treasurer, and Speaker of the House of Representatives. The Board was charged with the duty of planning and adopting a comprehensive program for the expenditure by the Governor of Federal funds received from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for unemployment relief.

"It was provided, in general, that the program should include:

> "(a) an equitable allocation of funds among the counties on the basis of the relief needs and resources of each county;
> "(b) the nature, character and location of public works to be constructed or improved by the use of Federal funds;
> "(c) the method and manner of distributing direct relief and the public and private agencies through which such relief shall be distributed in various counties, and the manner in which private agencies shall be organized in communities where the same is deemed necessary; and
> "(d) the co-ordination of the relief work carried on by the Governor from Federal Moneys and that provided for by any appropriation from the State's General Fund for unemployment relief, so that the best results may be obtained, duplication be avoided, and the available funds from all sources be extended over the longest period of time.

"This Act carried also an appropriation of $55,400 for administration, $35,400 for this to be spent by the Governor, $15,000 by the Auditor General and $5,000 by the State Treasurer for special expenses involved for those Departments.

Second Talbot Act

"Act 52, usually called the second Talbot Act, was approved on the same date as Act 51. This Act provided: "That in the exercise of the police power for the protection of the public health, safety, morals, and welfare threatened by existing conditions of unemployment, and in the assumption by the Commonwealth of its duty to care for the poor, the sum of twelve million dollars is hereby specifically appropriated to the State Emergency Relief Board to provide direct relief and work relief. * * * This amount was to be paid over during the seven month period, September 1, 1932, to March 31, 1933, as follows:

"September	$1,500,000
"October	1,500,000
"November	1,500,000
"December	2,000,000

"1933
"January	$2,000,000
"February	2,000,000
"March	1,500,000
	"$12,000,000

"It was further provided that the State Board should make allocations from this State fund among the various counties 'on a ratio that the estimated number of unemployed persons in the county bears to the estimated total number of unemployed persons in the entire Commonwealth, as shown by the latest available tables complied and issued by the Department of Labor and Industry.' Funds allocated to a county were to be available for either work relief or direct relief. However, the State Board was also authorized to allocate any part of a county's allocation for work relief on the State highways, to be carried out under the supervision of the State Department of Highways.

Sales Tax to Raise Funds

"A third piece of legislation, Act No. 53, the Emergency Relief Sales Tax Act, provided revenue for the purposes of the Second Talbot Act appropriation by levying an emergency sales tax of 1% on gross income from sales during the period September 1, 1932-February 28, 1933.

"The first steps in the organization of the State Emergency Relief Board, taken during the twelve days following the enactment of these three Acts of August 19, have been thus described:

" 'Because of the urgency of the situation, the State Emergency Relief Board organized and took action almost immediately after the aproval of the Act. During August, 1932, the State Board appointed in each county of the State a County Emergency Relief Board, consisting usually of seven citizens, serving without salary.

" 'On August 31, a meeting of the members of the County Emergency Relief Boards was held in Harrisburg, with the Governor presiding, and the task confronting the Boards was discussed.'

"The next day, September 1, 1932, Pennsylvania's statewide program of unemployment relief officially went into operation."

Only twelve days intervened between the date of the approval of the acts of August 19 and September 1, when the appropriation went into effect. There was, therefore, little or no time for detailed planning and organization. The Board was forced to begin with a skeleton staff and expand from week to week, in fact, almost from day to day, to cope with the stupendous task which grew in size and responsibility as the days spread out ahead.

Relief Tasks Grow

Just how that task has grown will be realized when it is considered that beginning with September, 1932, when food was the only type of direct relief granted, there followed in the same month allocations to the Department of Health for the distribution of milk. In the following month, fuel relief was authorized and in December these relief grants increased enormously and, in addition to fuel relief, purchases of shoes for distribution among the unemployed on relief was authorized.

In January, 1933, the fuel grants were increased. In March of that year, the Thrift Garden Program was inaugurated. In May a report of the study of transients and homeless in Pennsylvania was made. In June began the purchases of rubber footwear. In August, a Bureau of Transients was established. In September the State Board assumed the distribution of milk. In August a standard food relief schedule was adopted and in November the purchase of clothing was begun. In the same month began the distribution of Federal Surplus Commodities and in December, a medical relief program was established, and there was added to the responsibility of the State Emergency Relief Board the distribution of Federal Surplus Fuel.

This year, beginning with April, began the allocation of emergency rent funds. Shoe repair and shoe repair shops were authorized, summer camps for undernourished children approved, a new rent relief program inaugurated, distribution of Federal Surpluses on cotton and cattle taken care of, and a very definite expansion in the Rural Rehabilitation Bureau authorized.

Ten Millions Per Month

Relief expenditures in Pennsylvania during recent months have approximated ten million dollars per month. This large sum of money is expended in the form of several million orders monthly for food, milk, shoes, clothing, fuel, shelter, medical attention, and cash relief checks. Every single relief transaction involves the writing of an order or check, verification, mailing to relief recipient, recording, and payment.

In addition, careful investigation of each family's relief needs in each category must be made periodically by trained visitors. In spite of the tremendous volume of administrative detail involved in carrying on the relief program, total administrative costs represented only 6.2 per cent of total expenditures from September, 1933, to August, 1934.

The average weekly grant per family of five for direct relief increased from $2.87 in October, 1932, to $5.70 in August, 1934.

To carry out the tremendous burden imposed upon the administrative department of the relief board by its ever increasing responsibility, the staff of workers has been gradually expanded. Relief administration is today by far the largest single problem of the State Government.

A training program was inaugurated late in 1934 for the instruction of junior members of the staff.

The State Emergency Relief Program has had, to succeed and to progress, to plan for the future on a month to month basis.

Except when Legislative appropriations were made, or when a bond issue or borrowing carried relief work in Pennsylvania over a period of a few months, the entire program has been managed, developed, and worked on what at best was nothing but a hand to mouth basis.

There seldom has been a time when the Relief Board knew how much money it was going to receive for the following month's work, or when it was going to get it. There was no opportunity for long range planning until the summer of 1934.

CWA Program Starts

Preceding this, in November, 1933, Mr. Biddle was appointed the Federal Civil Works Administrator for Pennsylvania for the duration of that program.

Mr. Biddle, except for a few key men in his organization, refrained from utilizing the staff of the relief board to carry out the program of the Civil Works Administration, in order that that entirely new, unseasoned and overworked organization might be spared the demoralizing effects of imposing upon it the full weight of a vast new emergency program. In addition to the great demands imposed upon him by the relief program, he built up almost over night an organization in the sixty-seven counties to carry on the work of the Civil Works Administration.

This was purely a recovery program and while in some measures it materially aided persons on relief, at the same time it occasioned no great permanent reduction of the relief rolls in Pennsylvania since at most, any time, only one-half of the state's unemployed are on the relief rolls.

Before the demobilization order on Civil Works Administration came in Feburary, more than a million persons registered for employment on the Civil Works Administration program. In the peak week, there were some 319,000 persons who received employment. All told, more than forty-one and a quarter millions of dollars were expended in salaries and wages from November 23, 1933, to March 31, 1934, when the Civil Works Administration program was abandoned to be suceeded by a relief work program, which is now coorinated with the State Emergency Relief Board.

With all of its shortcomings, most of them due to the speed with which it was organized and carried out, the Civil Works Administration program was a step in the right direction.

After April 1, 1934, the following principles were observed:

1. The State Relief Work Division planned the substantial completion of all of the remaining CWA projects in operation in twenty-three rural counties, as of May 31.
2. No new projects were approved after March and very few after December last.
3. Projects in the districts where the unemployment factor was low were delimited as rapidly as possible.
4. In the remaining instances, projects were brought to a point where economic loss will not result if they were discontinued.
5. The period ending August 31, was used as a period for reorganization and careful planning for a work program which would extend to the Spring of 1935.

New Work Program

On August 9, announcement was made that the new work program, to provide jobs for persons on or eligible for relief, was ready to be placed into operation by September 15, if Federal funds then would be available.

The program profited extensively by earlier experiences of the Civil Works Administration and its successor, the Work Division, in that all clashing of gears that characterized its earlier efforts and impeded their progress was reduced to a minimum.

Under the Civil Works Administration emphasis was placed almost entirely on speed in the organization. Under the new program there was time for planning and it was made known at that time that if Federal funds were available and the several political subdivisions in the State developed projects and provided materials and equipment that the State Emergency Relief Board stood ready to place in operation a plan that would provide employment for people on relief and a positive return to communities.

The new program, which provided for the employment of white collar persons in addition to skilled, semi-skilled and common labor, was built around persons eligible for relief. As specified by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, persons eligible for employment on a Work Division project under the program were those eligible for relief at the time of referral and placement on the job.

All jobs under the program were in accordance with a ruling by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration assigned in conformity with the budgetary deficiency of the person employed and the work given in units or hours necessary at the rate of wage paid to the worker to make up the deficiency.

This deficiency is determined by the Local Relief Division of the State Emergency Relief Board after the income of the family from any source, if any, had been subtracted from its standard minimum basic needs. The minimum need budget is arranged to meet requirements of families of varying sizes.

At the time the program was announced it was made clear that relief through work must of necessity be limited by the amount of Federal Emergency Relief Administration funds available and the cooperation received from municipalities and other political subdivisions.

Federal Aid Delayed

While the new work relief program had been set up so as to be placed in operation by September 15, there intervened in the latter part of August one of the many unfortunate delays that through no fault of the State Emergency Relief Board or its executive administrative personnel, so often held up the program of Pennsylvania. This delay, as usual, was occasioned by the lack of money for relief purposes with the customary discussion on ways and means to obtain it.

The Governor of Pennsylvania was loathe to call a special session of the Legislature because of the expense involved and because there seemed no way that the Legislature could supply funds for relief purposes, there being a constitutional provision against borrowing the money. That would require a constitutional amendment.

Against this, Federal Emergency Relief Administration officials in Washington took the position that the State must do its full share and that until Pennsylvania indicated to the satisfaction of the Federal Emergency Relief Administrator that it intended to provide money for unemployment relief, Washington would do nothing.

Following a number of conferences with Federal Relief officials the Governor of Pennsylvania proposed that the leading candidates on Republican and Democratic party tickets then facing a gubernatorial election, together with the party chiefs of each group, should meet with him, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and Mr. Biddle, at a conference at New York to consider a proposal to pledge Legislature of 1935, whether Republican or Democratic, to provide the necessary funds.

Democratic leaders and candidates refused to attend this meeting and later Governor Pinchot issued a call for a special session of the Legislature which convened on September 12, and appropriated $14,400,000 by transferrals from various funds. In addition $5,600,000 already provided by Act 66 of the 1933 Special Session was available.

In the administrative bills providing for the temporary use of money from other funds for unemployment relief, the Governor made it clear that he would sign no bill unless each act provided for the return of the money so borrowed. To this the Legislature agreed.

The new work relief program got under way about the first of October and by the ninth of November the sixty-seven counties in the Commonwealth sponsored and had had approved 1,824 work projects, 840 professional projects and 65 educational projects, or a total of 2,729 projects calling for the employment of 108,946 men and the approval of expenditures for salaries and wages of $25,083,042.02, exclusive of materials which wherever needed were furnished by the political subdivision in which the project was developed. By the 15th of December more than 107,000 persons were employed on Work Relief Projects.

Th program, however, was nothing more than a relief program and as such, when compared with the Civil Works Administration, was manifestly a step backward in meeting a problem for which the only solution is work.

Problems Ahead

A new Legislature will convene at the State Capitol in January, 1935. It will be faced with the task of providing for the normal expenses of operating the business of the Commonwealth. It will be faced with the necessity of providing money to repay about $14,000,000 borrowed during the last special session for unemployment relief. It will be faced with the necessity—if Washington still insists that the states do their full share in providing for unemployment relief—of obtaining in one way or another the money for this purpose.

Poor Boards, counties, boroughs, cities of Pennsylvania are, many of them, not only at the limit of their taxation but are without authority to borrow and are indeed heavily in debt. Many have exhausted their borrowing capacity under the State Constitution.

The people of many communities in Pennsylvania have almost completely expended their powers of relief. The expenditure margins which have permitted help from neighbor to neighbor are gone. Credit is at a low ebb.

The situation in Pennsylvania can be duplicated in many other states throughout the Union. What then to do?

Relief, in itself, is solving nothing. It is but a palliative, not a cure. It feeds and clothes a man but does not go to the root of what made him an applicant to the local relief board.

Operation Detail

The local administration of unemployment relief was handled prior to September 1, 1933, by a local executive Director and Advisory Board in each of the sixty-seven counties. Since September 1, 1933, forty-one counties have been merged into thirteen administrative areas, thus reducing the number of local administrative units to thirty-nine at the present time.

Relief Eligibiliy

Relief is provided families whose needs arise out of the inability of the employable members to find employment sufficient to maintain themselves and their dependents.

The State Board expressed the following principles of eligibility for relief in a resolution passed on September 1, 1932:

> 1. All Relief shall be distributed on the sole basis of actual need to persons who have been residents of Pennsylvania as required by law, for one year, regardless of race, color, religion, citizenship, or politics.

Relief has not been limited to those cases where no member of the family is employed. A fairly substantial number of families receiving relief have some family income arising from part-time employment, full-time employment at low wages, or irregular employment at odd jobs. If income, as determined by investigation, is not sufficient to maintain the family on a minimum subsistence basis, relief grants are given as a supplement to the family income.

Trend in Relief Case Load

The peak in the relief case load of the State Emergency Relief Board was reached in May, 1933 (Table 1). During that month an average of 449,743 cases received unemployment relief from State and Federal funds. From May, 1933, to January, 1934, there was a steady reduction in the number of cases on relief except for a slight rise in November, 1933. The low point in the number of relief cases in the period from May, 1933, to August, 1934, was reached in January, 1934, when an average of 288,136 cases received relief. This low point in the relief case load in January, a month when the relief load is usually at a high level is explained by the fact that employment on CWA projects reached its peak during that month.

From January to May there was a gradual increase in the caseload due to the slackening and final termination of the CWA Program and its replacement by the Work Division Program on April 1, 1934. By May, 1934, the number of cases on relief had risen to 349,000. Declines in the average case load occurred from May to July. The August caseload of 334,000 was only slightly less than that of July but was approximately 116,000 cases less than the peak of 449,743 cases in May, 1933.

The above figures indicate conclusively that the CWA Program had a marked effect upon the relief caseload. Approximately one-third of the persons employed by the CWA were taken directly from relief rolls. Many additional families, whose number is unknown, would have been forced to apply for relief last winter if CWA employment had not opportunely been secured. It seems certain, therefore, that the potential relief burden last winter was at least as heavy as during the winter of 1932-33.

* Number at end of month.

In addition to the short-lived CWA program, other relief activities of the Federal Government have tended to reduce the caseload of the County Emergency Relief Boards. The Homeless and Transients Program started late in October, 1933, and a rapidly increasing number of cases, reaching a peak of 16,500 in August, received homeless or transient relief. Although some of these homeless or transient cases had not been granted relief previously by the local boards, a fairly large proportion had.

In the enrollment of youths in the Civilian Conservation Corps, members of families on relief or of needy families about to go on relief were selected. All the persons enrolled were required to send at least $25.00 of the $30.00 monthly pay to their families. This money when received by relief families is counted as a part of their income and their relief grants are adjusted accordingly. In many cases, the Civilian Conservation Corps payment was sufficient to remove the family from relief and to prevent other families from applying for relief. In March, 1934, the last month for which figures are available, 16,094 Pennsylvania youths were in Civilian Conservation Corps Camps.

A large factor in the reduction of the caseload in the State has been the institution of a unified system of administration in the counties. Frequent investigation of relief needs by a paid staff of trained visitors has caused administration costs to rise, but the additional administrative expense incurred has resulted in conserving relief funds for those in greatest need by eliminating those cases ineligible for relief.

Average Relief Grants Per Family

The most significant feature in the relief program under the State Board has been the constant progress toward more nearly adequate provision for the needs of the unemployed (Table 2).

(a) First month of State Emergency Relief Board administration, average caseload not comparable with later months.

The trend in the average monthly relief grant per case has been upward throughout the two years S.E.R.B. has administered unemployment relief in Pennsylvania. In October, 1932, the first complete month of operation, the average grant was $12.70 per case. The largest average relief grant, $28.45, was reached in June, 1934. Since June, the average grant has decreased slightly due to the curtailment in the work program.

The Rent Relief Program was operative in only one county before August 31, and in that county only on an experimental basis. With the extension of this program, it is to be expected that the average grants will increase still further.

Relief provided for families partially dependent upon relief, as well as that provided for families entirely dependent, was included in calculating average grants shown in Table 2. While many families are entirely dependent upon relief, others have some income from employment in private industry; others receive assistance from relatives or friends; and still others have resources to provide for a portion of their needs. Average relief grants represent a composite picture of the relief granted to all these groups. The average relief grant to those families entirely dependent upon relief is larger. Separate records are not maintained, however, for those entirely and those partially dependent upon relief, and it is not possible to show average grants for these two groups of relief cases separately.

Expenditures for Unemployment Relief

More nearly adequate provision for the needs of the unemployed has resulted in rapidly increasing relief expenditures during the past two years. Expenditures for unemployment relief, throughout the United States, mounted to their highest level during the twelve months ending August 31, 1934. Pennsylvania has been no exception. Total obligations incurred from State and Federal funds amounted to approximately $108,700,000 during the year, or an average of more than $9,000,000 per month.

The Direct Relief Program

Summary

During September, 1932, food was the only type of direct relief granted by the State Emergency Relief Board. The development of the Direct Relief Program since that date has consisted primarily of a continuous expansion both in the types of direct relief provided and in the quantities of each type of relief granted. The following chronological tabulation traces this expansion through the past two years.

September, 1932	—Food only type of Direct Relief granted.
	—First allocation to Department of Health for distribution of milk.
October	—First Fuel Relief authorized.
December	—Fuel Relief grants increased.
	—First shoes purchased.
January, 1933	—Further increases in Fuel grants.
March	—Thrift Garden program inaugurated.
September	—State Board assumes distribution of milk.
October	—Standard Food Relief Schedules adopted.
November	—First clothing purchased.
	—First Federal Surplus Food Commodities distributed.
December	—Medical Relief Program established.
August, 1934	—Rent Relief Program inaugurated.
November	—Direct Relief in cash established as experiment in Philadelphia County.
December	—Budgetary Relief authorized.
	—Clothing and shoe orders on retail vendors to replace central purchase and distribution in kind authorized.
	—Cash Relief authorized for Allegheny County, effective January, 1935.

Food Relief

State legislation appropriating funds for relief provided that direct relief would be granted in kind only. This necessitated a system of food orders or some form of commissary.

The Food Order System, whereby an order for a stated amount is issued to the relief recipient who may use it to purchase foodstuffs in the amount shown on the face of the order, is still in use throughout Pennsylvania with the exception of Philadelphia County where all relief is now granted in cash.

During the early months of the State Board's administration, there were marked variations in the food relief standards in different counties. Food schedules in some counties restricted weekly food grants to twenty-five cents per person. At the other extreme the food schedules of at least two counties permitted weekly grants of $1.80 for one person and $1.25 for each additional family member. Under these conditions it became necessary for the State Board to formulate a State-wide Standard Food Relief Schedule.

Dieticians and physicians assisted in preparing adequate minimum food budgets for adults and children. The retail value of the items listed in these budgets was determined and was used to prepare a Standard Food Relief Schedule. This Schedule was adopted October, 1933, and was put in operation as rapidly as relief cases could be reinvestigated and food needs determined. The Standard Food Relief Schedule is now in use throughout the State.

Surplus Food Products

During the past year, various agricultural commodities have been purchased by the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation for distribution to the unemployed in various states. The State Emergency Relief Board established a procedure for handling the distribution of the commodities alloted to Pennsylvania and distribution began in November, 1933. These products are distributed to relief families in addition to the usual food grant.

The quantities of each commodity received by Pennsylvania to September 1, 1934, are shown in the following tabulation:

SURPLUS FOOD COMMODITIES RECEIVED BY PENNSYLVANIA TO SEPTEMBER 1, 1934

Eggs	939,300 Dozens
Potatoes	2,244 Barrels
Pea Beans	400,340 Pounds

Pork (Salt)	1,624,511 Pounds
Pork (Smoked)	3,317,892 Pounds
Beef (Canned)	2,317,892 Pounds
Beef	42,058 Pounds

Thrift Gardens

No food, except milk, is as important in the daily diet as fresh vegetables. Pennsylvania's 1934 Thrift Garden Program enabled 179,801 unemployed families to plant gardens and supply themselves with vegetables having an estimated retail value of $4,555,000.00.

Many of these gardens yielded more than could be consumed as fresh vegetables, and every effort was made to assist in and encourage the canning and preserving of surplus garden crops for use during the winter months. Root crops were stored, cabbage was stored or made into sauer kraut, corn was dried, and tomatoes and beans were canned.

The following tabulation shows the estimated harvest of thrift garden crops in 1934:

Lettuce	1,570,634 Bushels	Peppers	199,463 Bushels
Tomatoes	765,388 Bushels	Squash	138,068 Bushels
Corn	642,836 Bushels	Turnips	59,093 Bushels

Cucumbers	399,071 Bushels	Radishes	2,788,158 Bunches of 8

Fuel Relief

Needs for fuel became quite acute during the winter of 1932-33. Insufficient funds made it impossible to provide adequate fuel relief and local committees and boards endeavored to operate community mines. The dangers involved, and the injuries resulting from having inexperienced persons mining coal without proper safeguards, led to the early abandonment of many of these projects.

Some local funds were available for fuel relief in addition to the grants totalling four million dollars made to the counties by the State Board from September, 1932, through August, 1933.

Obligations incurred for fuel relief from September, 1933, through August, 1934, amounted to approximately $3,000,000.00. In addition to this amount, more than 250,000 tons of coal were supplied to Pennsylvania by the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation. The plan for distribution of Surplus fuel as developed in Pennsylvania provided that fuel orders be written by Local Boards in the usual manner. Retail coal dealers accepting these orders made deliveries from their stocks and the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation replaced the dealer's stocks with shipments from the mines. The State Board paid to these dealers an agreed amount per ton of coal delivered to cover handling and delivery charges. This program was in operation from December 16, 1933, to February 22, 1934.

The fuel relief program during the past year provided all types of fuel relief including coal, coke, gas, wood and kerosene, and the total value of the fuel relief granted from September, 1933, through August, 1934, including the estimated value of coal provided by the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation amounted to $4,500,000.00.

Shoes and Clothing Relief

During the winter of 1931-32 local welfare organizations and the American Red Cross established centers for the rehabilitation of second-hand shoes and clothing. Because of the extreme need for shoes and clothing among the unemployed, the State Board continued this type of activity under the supervision of Local Boards by providing $100,000.00 for the rehabilitation of clothing and shoes distributed by private sources.

A large amount of surplus cotton purchased by the Federal Government was made into clothing, cloth and bedding during 1932, by the American Red Cross and related organizations. These materials were distributed to needy unemployed during the winter of 1932-33. The quantities of clothing so produced were sufficient to meet only the most urgent needs. Because of limited funds, the State Board was unable to make any grants for clothing other than shoes.

Shoes were purchased centrally by the State Board and distributed to the counties on the basis of the number of families on relief. This method was not satisfactory and the next distribution was made on the basis of actual need. From December 15, 1932, through August, 1933, the number of shoes distributed to the counties totalled 602,358 pairs.

The purchase and distribution of shoes has continued to be an important part of the direct relief program. During the fiscal year ending August 31, 1934, approximately 1,660,000 pairs of shoes were shipped to the counties for distribution. As a matter of both economy and safeguarding the public health, rubber footwear to fit every model of shoe being distributed by the State Board was purchased as soon as funds were available. Approximately 510,000 pairs of rubber footwear were issued during the fiscal year ending August 31, 1934.

In November, 1933, purchases of clothing were made and distribution in the counties started during January, 1934.

The scope and cost of the Shoe and Clothing Program is shown in the following tabulation:

Medical Care

Provision of medical care for the needy unemployed was a problem from the first onset of the depression. At first, no organized effort to provide needed medical care existed. The needs of the unemployed were met by their own private physicians and by the usual private and public agencies administering to the health needs of those unable to pay. As the extent of unemployment increased, a tremendous burden was placed on the medical profession and on these agencies.

The Medical Program of the State Board was inaugurated in December, 1933. It provided for medical, dental, and nursing services to relief families. The program provides for the treatment of ill persons in relief families for the giving of emergency dental care, for nursing care, and for necessary medicines. Correction of physical defects is not included in the program. Children with physical defects are being assisted on a cooperative and voluntary basis, through the local Child Health Committees.

The Medical Program has become an integral part of the general relief program. Orders issued for all types of medical care number approximately 50,000 a month at the present time. Altogether, 361,745 medical orders were approved for payment December 1933, through August, 1934. Expenditures for the Medical Relief Program totalled $1,304,941.79, during the period from December, 1933, through August, 1934. The value and cost of the Medical Relief Program is summarized in Table 4.

Work Relief Prior to the C.W.A. Program

From the inception of the State Emergency Relief Board in September, 1932, until the beginning of the Civil Works Administration Program in November, 1933 the work provided for the unemployed was limited in scope. The State Emergency Relief Board supplied funds to various State Departments for use in giving employment to persons in need but these activities were relatively small.

In October, 1932, a grant was made to the Department of Internal Affairs for employing persons on construction work at the Indiantown Gap Military Reservation in Lebanon County. A total of $27,021.64 was expended on this work over a period of approximately eighteen months. In November, 1932, a grant was made to the Department of Highways for use in giving work on highways construction and maintenance to unemployed persons in need. This program, under the direction of the State Department of Highways, continued until the summer of 1934 and a total of $7,676,547.96 was expended.

Other work programs financed by the State Emergency Relief Board from State and Federal funds prior to the Civil Works Administration Program include: (1) the employment of common labor at Pymatuming Dam in Crawford County by the Department of Forests and Waters with total expenditures of $169,999.71 over a period of nine months, (2) expenditures of $127,030.31 over a period of fifteen months by the Department of Agriculture to hire workers for the purpose of cooperating with and assisting the Federal Government in establishing Gypsy Moth Control and Japanese Beetle quarantine in the State and (3) expenditures of $370,421.51 for clerical help furnished State Employment and National Reemployment Offices from August, 1933, to date, except for the Civil Works Administration period when this program supplied the funds.

All of these programs with the exception of the Highway Department's work were of an extremely limited nature.

The Work Division Program

With the termination of the Civil Works Administration Program at the end of March, 1934, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration instituted a new Work Relief Program. In order to carry out this program, a Work Division of the State Board was organized. Since many of the Civil Works Administration projects were left unfinished and heavy economic loss was threatened, projects were approved to complete the work as fast as appraisal could determine their value. No projects were approved for new work, and the Work Division devoted itself from April 1, to August 31, to finishing the projects begun under the Civil Works Administration Program.

The Work Division Program initiated in April, 1934, was the first State-wide plan of work relief undertaken by the State Emergency Relief Board. The previous attempts to give work relief were made by granting funds to State Departments. In April, 1934, the State Emergency Relief Board organized its own Work Division staff and the entire program was under the immediate control of this Division. The Work Division Program was undertaken to give employment to persons on relief or eligible for relief and the amount each person could earn was to be limited to the needs of the family.

The Civil Works Administration Program was an employment plan, whereas the Work Division Program is a work relief plan. The Civil Works Administration jobs were to be given to both relief and non-relief persons. The Work Division Program has a more limited purpose in that only relief persons are to be employed except for a limited number of supervisory and skilled workers not obtainable from among those persons eligible for relief.

The Work Division employed almost 50,000 persons during the first week of its operation. During the last week in April, only the fourth week of the program, nearly 105,000 persons were employed on work projects. This marked the peak of employment under the Work Division and the number of employes declined gradually thereafter. Not only were available funds inadequate to permit an expansion of the program, but they also necessitated a curtailment of activities. The Work Division employed an average of approximately 70,000 in May, 65,000 in June, and 55,000 in July. The number of persons employed declined sharply during August as all work projects were completed or terminated in anticipation of the initiation of a revised program. During the last week of August, less than 5,000 persons were employed.

A total of more than 4,000 individual projects were operated under the Work Division Program. Over three-fourths of these projects involved the new construction and repair of public properties, including roads, streets, sewers, and public buildings. Numerous projects were approved for grading and landscaping of recreational and other public institutional grounds. Various research studies and surveys relating to social and economic problems, labor, health, government, and kindred topics, were carried on as Work Division projects. Some of the more interesting and valuable projects are:

Sealing and draining abandoned bituminous coal mines to reduce the danger of stream pollution.
Construction and improvement of municipal airports and emergency landing fields.
A State-wide survey of employment and unemployment to reveal the extent and incidence of unemployment.
Educational projects including adult training, vocational guidance, and other types of training.
Projects providing for nursing services.
Traffic surveys with a view toward prevention of accidents and studying parking conditions, traffic violations, and the condition and effectiveness of traffic equipment.
Studies of characteristics of families receiving relief.
Housing surveys to reveal housing conditions and to supply information which will be useful in determining need for housing facilities.
Health studies involving the industrial smoke nuisance, types and causes of deaths, nutrition status of school children, need for glasses among school children, etc.
Free musical concerts.
Home instructions on budget problems, diet needs and home economics.
Projects affecting erosion and flood control.

The above list of projects exemplifies the type of work which can be and has been done by work projects. There are almost limitless types of undertakings of economic and social value which could be carried on under a planned work program.

The Revised Work Relief Program

The State Emergency Relief Administration ordered the termination of the Work Division Program in August, 1934, in order to effect a revision of the Program. The revised program was delayed in getting under way until October 1, 1934, in order to complete plans under which the projects were to be operated. By the middle of December, 1934, there were approximately 100,000 persons employed on projects throughout the State.

The Revised Work Relief Program differs in many essentials from the Work Division Program which ended in August. Under the revised program everybody who is given employment, with but a few exceptions, is allotted only enough units of work to cover the budgetary deficiency requirements of the family represented. The number of these units assigned to each person employed depends upon the difference between the family income and the family needs as determined by the standard budget. The hourly rate of pay is equal to the rate existing in the local community for similar work. A different number of work units of 18 hours each must be assigned to cover the budgetary deficiency. Budgetary Deficiency payments are made to the worker's family in four equal weekly payments. No deductions are made for lost time on account of illness, inclement weather, or other stoppages of work.

Emergency Educational Program

On September 15, 1933, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration authorized the use by the State Emergency Relief Board of Federal Funds for the employment of needy unemployed persons who are qualified to teach.

The general purpose of this educational program is to provide constructive employment for unemployed persons on relief who are competent to teach, and at the same time to provide socially constructive educational or recreational activities.

Since the inauguration of the program in November, 1933, many activities have been developed. In the field of adult education, classes in English and Citizenship have been developed with many groups. Many immigrants have received their first and second naturalization papers as a result of these classes. Home classes enroll many foreign-born persons. These classes afford mothers the opportunity to learn the American life which their husbands and children learn at work and at school.

In the field of vocational education, adults are learning new skills in agriculture, home economics, trades, and commerce. Such training makes them more efficient at their present work or prepares them for work to which they are better adapted by nature, opportunity, or circumstances. Other subjects in this field include poultry raising, gardening, sewing, cooking, electric welding, hosiery making, etc.

Classes in the field of General Adult Education make up a large percentage of total enrollments. It has given the adult, without high school or college training, an opportunity to carry on his education along academic and creative lines. It has also been an invaluable means of preserving health and morale through such activities as physical education, dancing, baseball, and swimming.

Activities in the field of Nursery Schools and Parent Education have served many young children and parents. Many pre school children of needy parents have formed better health and behavior habits in emergency nursery schools. In the schools, the children have received wholesome lunches * * * milk, fruit juice, and cod liver oil. Many parents have been studying health and behavior problems of children under the direction of trained teachers.

Obligations incurred for the 1933-34 Emergency Educational Program amounted to $792,335.11. May, 1934, is typical of the monthly activities of this program. In the field of general Adult Education, Workers' Education, Vocational Training of Unemployed Persons, and teaching of Adult Illiterates, 6,721 classes or groups were attended by 70,812 persons who were instructed by 948 unemployed teachers. Moreover, 55 trainees were handled through the various activities in the field of Vocational Rehabilition. Employment was provided for 31 persons as clerical and case workers. Nursery Schools cared for 662 children and parent training groups provided instruction for 2,082 persons. In these two latter activities employment was given to 231 teachers.

Part-Time Jobs for College Students

A program to provide employment to needy men and women in colleges throughout the United States during the second semester of the 1933-34 scholastic year was announced by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration on February 2, 1934. The purpose of this program was to provide assistance to students of good character and ability whose financial status was such that continued attendance in college was impossible.

Funds for this program were made available specifically for this purpose by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. It was provided that any institution of collegiate or university character, which was non-profit in nature, could participate in the program. Each participating college was allotted jobs in a number of equal to 10 per cent of its full-time enrollment of October, 1933. Funds were allocated on the basis of $15.00 per month per student employed, although it was provided that the maximum earnings for any student employed could not exceed $20.00 per month.

The type of work permitted, to be financed with funds made available for this program, covered the range of jobs customarily done in the college by students working their way through college, including clerical, library, research, and work on buildings and grounds and in dormitories and dining halls. All jobs provided had to be in addition to those ordinarily undertaken by the college.

Relief of Unemployed Veterans

In May, 1933, provision was made for the granting of $300,000,000 to the State Veterans' Commission for the food, clothing, fuel, and shelter needs of unemployed veterans without other means of support. In January, 1934, a grant of an equal amount for the same purpose was provided. Administration of this program has been through offices of the State Veterans' Commission, located throughout the State with headquarters in Philadelphia. Administration expenses have been borne by the State Department of Military Affairs.

Homeless and Transient Program

The problem of transiency, as such, is not new. In fact, it has always existed to a degree. We have seen it years ago as large groups migrated from one country to another in search of religious or political freedom. The problem, also, has always been more acute during and following periods of social or economic upheaval. Transient Bureaus and treatment centers began to make their appearance in Pennsylvania in the late summer and fall of 1933.

The growth of the work, the necessity for considering the local homeless problem, especially in such large centers as Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, and the increasing costs due to the increase in the number of treatment centers and intake points, presently brought the whole program into sharper focus. The need for a thorough integration of the program with the general organization and work of the State and County Relief Boards became apparent and, with the exception of developing certain procedures, such integration is now complete.

The State is assuming its fair share of the costs for State and local homeless out of general relief funds, while the Federal Emergency Relief Administration provides the administrative costs of the whole program plus the relief costs of inter-state transients. With the advent of the new rent relief program, it is planned to care for local homeless in the future as a part of the general relief load, although for administrative reasons, local homeless will still apply to the Transient Departments of the County Relief Administrations.

Thirty counties or areas now have intake points for homeless and transients as a part of the County or Area Relief Administrations. In addition to these intake departments, there are fifteen urban treatment centers. All but three of these are the typical "city shelters", the remainder being camps or farms. There are also six camps operated on a state-wide basis where, as on the farms, a more adequate rehabilitation program is possible. Four of these camps are abandoned Civil Conservation Corp camps, the fifth is on a Federal Military Reservation and the sixth is on a Federal Forest Reservation.

Rural Adjustment Program

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration has formulated an elaborate program for Rural Rehabilitation and in order that this program be adapted to Pennsylvania conditions, there has been organized a Rural Adjustment Department in the State Emergency Relief Board.

The function of the Rural Rehabilitation Section is to develop self-help programs of an industrial or agricultural nature. The first project to operate under this program was the training in weaving of textiles. Two experienced weavers are teaching families in Clearfield and Westmoreland Counties the construction of looms and the weaving of blankets and other textiles.

The Thrift Garden program which was developed on a statewide basis during the season of 1933 has proven to be a practicable method of helping large numbers of unemployed to help themselves. The Thrift Garden Section is now a part of the Rural Adjustment Department and it is probable that for many families the garden program will prove a stepping stone to more extensive agricultural activities.

Debt conciliation has been actively developed in Pennsylvania by a central committee and by county volunteer committees. Many farmers are faced with the loss of their property through foreclosure. The Debt Conciliation Program, with the cooperation of the Land Banks, has prevented such losses in numerous instances, but the volume of settlements must be increased if larger numbers of farmers are to be kept from relief rolls. The function of the Debt Conciliation Section is to assist local committees to expedite settlements and to extend this service to a greater number of distressed farmers.

Self-Help Cooperatives

Allocation of funds have been made to several cooperative self-help associations. Those that have been assisted are the Philadelphia Barter Association, Clearfield Cooperative Association, the Media Barter Exchange, and the Westmoreland Homestead Association.

The State Board maintains contacts with the self-help cooperatives through the Rural Adjustment Department. Grants have been extended according to the regulations set forth by the Division of Self-Help Cooperatives of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. Cooperatives eligible for Federal grants or loans under these regulations must be composed of persons, a substantial portion of whom have been on relief, are eligible for relief, or prospectively eligible if it were not for their membership in the Cooperative.

The Media Barter Exchange was organized at Media, Delaware County, by the needy unemployed to supply their wants through the exchange of goods produced by its members. By October, 1934, approximately 400 families were registered with this exchange.

On June 6, 1934, the State Board allocated $2,000.00 from Federal funds to the Delaware County Emergency Relief Board "to provide funds to aid the Media Barter Exchange  in the barter of goods and services." This fund has been used for working capital.

The Clearfield Cooperative Association at Irvona, Clearfield County, is located in a stranded community. Aid to this cooperative as well as to the Westmoreland Homestead Association at Mount Pleasant is being extended in cooperation with the Division of Subsistence Homesteads of the United States Department of Interior. Chief activities of these cooperatives have centered around canning and weaving projects. Instructors have been employed to teach weaving and wood working. Plans are being prepared for the building of homes. A complete subsistence homestead project is contemplated.

At Mount Pleasant in Westmoreland County, aid has been extended to the Westmoreland Homestead Association. This Association is definitely a homestead project. The building of homes is already under way. Weaving is being taught to the members, and the American Friends Service Council has employed a man to teach woodworking.

Self-help cooperatives represent attempts by the unemployed to aid themselves through the mutual exchange of goods and services. And to the extent that they are successful in supplying the necessities of life, they may be considered as a means through which the unemployed may secure satisfaction of their needs while at the same time performing useful work in payment.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

John J. Owens, Secretary

To the Governor:

Herewith is a report of the work of the Department of State during your Administration

The more important achievements of the Department of State during the four year period ending January 15, 1935, were—

(a) Administration of the new Corporation Code
(b) Strict enforcement of the voting machine act
(c) Change in method of advertising proposed constitutional amendments

The necessity for revision of Pennsylvania's corporation laws had been apparent for many years. The Act of April 29, 1874, P. L. 73, was the last general corporation law passed by the Legislature. Not until the passage of the Corporation Code of May 5, 1933, did Pennsylvania have upon its statute books corporation laws comparable to those of the other great industrial and commercial States of the Union.

Voting Machines

The enforcement of the Voting Machine Act by the Secretary of the Commonwealth constituted an outstanding achievement of the present Administration.

The original Voting Machine Act was passed in 1929. Previous to January, 1931, the number of machines delivered in the State was 1,288. The number delivered since January, 1931, is 4,187, making a total of 5,475.

Before November 6, 1934, the districts that had adopted voting machines had a population of 5,926,109, or more than 61 per cent of Pennsylvania's total population. Referenda in Cambria, Northumberland and Washington Counties on November 6, 1934, resulted in the elimination of machines therein and reduced the total population of districts using voting machines to 5,488,612, approximately 57 per cent.

The Secretary of the Commonwealth awarded four contracts for the purchase of 817 voting machines. Philadelphia County brought action to restrain the Secretary from awarding a contract for 800 machines, but his authority was upheld by both the Dauphin County Court and the Supreme Court.

The Secretary also received bids for supplying Cambria and Washington Counties with voting machines. Awards were not made because of litigation still pending in Dauphin County Court.

Constitutional Amendments

A pronounced change in advertising proposed Constitutional Amendments, inaugurated by the Department during the biennium 1931-1933, will in future years result in the saving of many thousands of dollars to the taxpayers of Pennsylvania.

Prior to the 1931-33 biennium the advertisement of proposed Constitutional Amendments was inserted in newspapers in the several counties of the Commonwealth one time weekly for thirteen consecutive weeks during the three months immediately preceding General Elections. With economy in view and to eliminate what appeared a wasteful and unnecessary expenditure of money, the Department raised a question as to the number of insertions of the advertisement necessary to meet the requirements of the Constitution of Pennsylvania. This question had never been decided other than by a verbal opinion of a previous Attorney General. The Supreme Court ruled that three insertions once a month during the three months immediately preceding General Elections, instead of thirteen insertions as was the practice for prior years was a full compliance with the Constitutional provisions relating to the publication of proposed Constitutional Amendments.

A strict adherence to this ruling resulted in a saving of $90,622.00, during the biennium 1931-1933. This figure was arrived at by comparing the actual cost of three insertions with the cost of thirteen insertions, based upon rates submitted by the various newspapers.

By limiting the number of newspapers in which the advertisement of proposed amendments should be inserted (1931-33 biennium) to a maximum of two papers in each county, with the exception of Allegheny and Philadelphia Counties in which one legal journal was added to the list, and by the ruling of the Supreme Court as to number of insertions the Secretary of the Commonwealth was able to return to the General Fund $127,074 out of the appropriation of $160,000.

Corporations

During the years immediately preceding the depression an important source of revenue was the bonus upon increase of capital stock of Pennsylvania corporations. During the present depression Pennsylvania corporations are decreasing rather than increasing capital stock. The operation of decreasing capitalization involves the same amount of work in the Department as an increase, although no bonus is due to the Commonwealth upon such proceedings.

The Department at the beginning of the present Administration, instituted a more rigid enforcement of the requirements of the Fictitious Name Act. The Department had knowledge that hundreds of firms doing business in Pennsylvania, either under a fictitious name or as foreign corporations, had either refused or neglected to register in this office. The results of this campaign are reflected in the registration of 25,169 companies for the period beginning January 1, 1931 and ending December 1, 1934, for which registrations the Commonwealth collected in fees the sum of $151,014.00.

In the prosecution of this campaign to force the registration of fictitious name companies, the Department each month transmits to every Prothonotary in the State a list of names registered in this office from a specific county and the Prothonotary in turn sends a similar list to the Department of State. This interchange of lists gives the Department an opportunity to ascertain whether companies registering with the Prothonotary have failed to register here or vice versa.

It was also brought to the attention of the Department that many domestic corporations had increased their capital stock without filing in this office the proper form indicating such actual increase upon which bonus was due and payable. With this knowledge at hand, the Department, after conference with the proper officers in the Department of Revenue, immediately set machinery in motion with a view to collecting this delinquent bonus. Through the coordinating efforts of the Department of Revenue and this Department the sum of $32,383.00 in delinquent bonus and interest has been collected by the Department of State since October, 1932.

As a result of the operation of the Corporation Code, more than 6,000 foreign corporations re-registered and obtained a Certificate of Authority to do business in Pennsylvania bringing in a revenue of approximately $120,000.00.

At the effective date of the Corporation Code (May 5, 1933), approximately 30,000 statements were sent out from this Office to foreign corporations of record. Due to the depression a large number of companies were unable to pay the taxes owing to the Revenue Department and attempts are being made to have these taxes paid in periodical installments so that the company may be authorized to do business in Pennsylvania. The law requires that before the Certificate of Authority shall issue, all charges due the Commonwealth must be fully paid.

Union Registration

The dual Labor Unions have presented some difficult problems to the Department. These independent organizations, not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, have made many attempts to register in this office either their present corporate name or a proposed corporate name. This necessitated many private investigations and hearings. The Department has strenuously and consistently opposed any registration whatsoever of a union not organized and operated in accordance with the National Code. A number of such applications are now pending in this Department and a large number have been refused.

For many years a large number of trade marks and trade names for alcoholic beverages, liquors, etc., have been recorded in this office. The owners of these marks ceased business when prohibition became effective. When the prohibition amendment was repealed, a large number of new concerns adopted old trade marks and attempted to register the same as their property. This brought protests from the heirs of the old registered companies in this office and necessitated many hearings.

The following statistics will indicate the comparative volume of work flowing through the Corporation Bureau:

	1927-1931	1931-1935
Domestic Corporations formed	9,443	8,990
Foreign Corporations registered	5,349	9,406
Fictitious Name Companies registered	22,194	25,169

Elections and Legislative

The depression also appears to have been responsible for the great increase in the number of candidates for office, as well as for the number of Extraordinary Sessions of the General Assembly called during the present Administration.

The number of primary petitions filed in 1928 and 1930 was 3,272. For the primaries of 1932 and 1934 the total was 6,478. Other documents were correspondingly increased.

The two regular and four extraordinary sessions of the general Assembly made almost continuous work for the Legislative Bureau.

An effort was made during the present Administration to have candidates and the treasurers of political committes file the expense accounts exactly as required by law. This has not been done previous to this Administration and resulted in a marked increase in the papers handled. The total number of accounts received after the primaries and elections of 1928 and 1930 was 335. For the primary and election of 1932 and the primary of 1934, the number was 945. The last figure will be largely increased when the 1934 election expense accounts are all in.

The municipal election of 1933 was unusual and called for considerably more work than usual on the part of the Election Bureau. This was due to the referendum of twelve proposed amendments to the State Constitutions, the election of delegates to pass on the proposed repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the work involved in preparation for the resulting convention, and the referendum provided by the Sunday Sports Act.

Firearms

The Uniform Firearms Act of 1931, P. L. 497, No. 158, made it the duty of the Secretary of the Commonwealth to prescribe the forms required by the Act and to file records of licenses to carry firearms, applications for the purchase of, and records of sales of firearms.

This involved the making up of the forms which was done with the cooperation of the State Police and other police authorities. Samples of approved forms were printed and sent to the sheriffs of the counties and the police departments of cities, with instructions and copies of the law.

This law became operative September 1, 1931.

Between September 1, 1931, and December 1, 1934, 101,064 records of licenses to carry firearms were received from the sheriffs and city police departments. Dealers have also sent in 8,722 applications to purchase and 8,456 records of sales of firearms. These have been turned over to the State Police Bureau of Criminal Identification and Information for filing.

State Employes Retirement Board

No important change has occurred in the work of the State Employes Retirement Board. The fund has been maintained at the strength shown to be needed by the actuarial valuations. The reserves have increased as was necessary, resulting in a larger total of cash and investments on hand at the end of the four years than at the beginning.

During the years 1927 to 1930 there were 4,203 withdrawals of contributions by employes leaving the service and 232 members of the system retired. From 1931 to November, 1934, 5,154 members left the service and withdrew their contributions while 533 elected to retire.

There were 13,925 members on November 1, 1934.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

William A. Schnader, Attorney General

To the Governor,

As requested by you, I shall cover in this report the work of the Department of Justice, and the boards attached to it during the entire period of your administration, down to date. However, the figures which will be given, showing the collection made by this department and its expenditures, will cover the period beginning January 1, 1931, and ending November 1, 1934.

At the outset I call attention to the fact that during your administration the work of this department was expanded in a number of respects.

The following functions have been performed at the expense of this department for the first time:

Legal work incident to the collection of inheritance tax by registers of wills;

Legal work incident to the collection of mercantile and other license fees by county treasurers;

Title work involved in the purchase by the Commonwealth of game land, forest land, and lands for all other purposes;

Legal work necessary to assist the Securities Commission, the Bureau of Municipal Affairs, and the Workmen's Compensation Board and Referees.

I shall discuss these functions in detail under appropriate headings.

We have also had the responsibility of handling the legal work incident to the liquidation of closed banks; but practically the entire expense of this service has been paid out of the funds of the closed banks, as provided by law. This work will also be discussed more fully later in this report.

Only one function previously performed at the expense of this department has been transferred during this administration. That is the legal service incident to the administration of the liquor laws. During prohibition the Alcohol Permit Board administered the Alcohol Act, and after the manufacture and sale of beer was legalized it administered our State Beer Law. Lawyers necessary to assist the board received their compensation from the appropriation to this Department. After January, 1934, when the Liquor Control Board superseded the Alcohol Permit Board, and the State Stores Fund came into existence the lawyers who assisted the Liquor Control Board were transferred from the payroll of this department to the payroll of the Liquor Control Board; but they continue to work under the direct supervision of the Attorney General.

Prior to, and continuously during this Administration, the legal service necessary to assist the State Workmen's Insurance Board has been paid for out of the State Workmen's Insurance Fund, and not out of the appropriation to this department. Also, fees of attorneys employed for local legal work necessary to aid the Department of Highways, the Board of Game Commissioners, and the Board of Fish Commissioners have been paid for out of the Motor License Fund, the Game Fund and Fish Fund, respectively; and a number of lawyers have been employed, with the approval of the Attorney General, by the Department of Highways, to prepare contracts and attend to other routine legal work within the department. They are paid out of the Motor License Fund.

With the exceptions noted, the entire expense of all legal service performed for the Commonwealth, its officers, departments, boards, and commissions has been paid for out of the appropriations to this department subsequent to June 1, 1931.

Prior to this administration legal work of the Commonwealth which could not be handled in the Harrisburg office was assigned to a large number of attorneys throughout the State, almost all of whom were paid on a fee basis. Frequently a number of attorneys in the same counties participated in handling a very small volume of State law work with the result that no one attorney was in a position to become familiar with the various aspects of the State's legal work.

From the beginning of this administration the local legal work in each county has been placed in the hands of a single attorney, except in Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties, where the volume is so great as to render this impossible. In six counties other than Philadelphia and Allegheny the lawyers handling our local business have been placed in a salary basis. In Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties a number of special deputy attorneys general and attorneys have handled the State's legal work, receiving regular salaries therefor.

I have no hesitancy in saying that our legal work outside of our Harrisburg office has been more efficiently handled during this administration than at any previous time.

Opinions

During this administration to date this department has rendered to the various other departments and to officers, boards, and commissions of the State government 169 formal opinions and 473 informal opinions, a total for the four-year period of 642 opinions.

This compares with a total of 518 opinions rendered by the Department of Justice during the entire administration of your predecessor, this total consisting of 172 formal opinions and 346 informal opinions.

Thus, in this branch of our work, there has been an increase in volume during this administration of approximately 25%.

Two innovations were adopted in the handling of opinion work during this administration, as follows:

1. All formal and informal opinions have been given numbers so that reference may be made by number to any opinion rendered. This renders opinions more conveniently citable in future opinions or letters.

2. We adopted and have adhered to the practice that no opinion, formal or informal, and no letter construing a statute may be issued by any member of the staff until it has been read and criticized by all other members of the main office staff and approved by the Attorney General. Thus the opinion of this department during this administration have represented the combined judgment of all the lawyers of the department who work in the Harrisburg office.

In addition to the formal and informal opinions to which we have referred, we have written many letters to departments, boards, and commissions, of the State government, advising them regarding matters which did not warrant the issuance of either formal or informal opinions; and, as always, there have been innumerable conferences with officers of the State government regarding legal matters in which the State is interested.

Opinion Indices

In 1917 the Commonwealth published an "Analytical Index of the Official Opinions of the Attorney General's Department with Chronological Table of Acts of Assembly Construed."

That work was never brought down to date until December 1933, when we published a "Digest of Formal Opinions with Chronological Table of Acts of Assembly Construed, December 1, 1916 to November 1, 1933." This volume is highly valuable not only in the work of this department, but also to other State officers and to lawyers having business with the State departments.

And this year we prepared for limited publication and distribution an "Index-Digest, Informal Opinions, 1923-1933." This was put out in a loose-leaf binder so that it may be supplemented from time to time and thus kept up to date. No similar index-digest had ever been prepared.

Preparation and Editing of Briefs

Special attention has been devoted, during this administration, to the preparation and editing of briefs, particularly those filed in appellate courts.

In addition to the handling of a large volume of other work, Deputy Attorney General Arnold has ably and carefully assumed this responsibility.

Litigation

During this administration the volume of litigation handled by this department in the courts of the Commonwealth and of the United States has been at least double the volume handled during the preceding four-year period.

During this administration 1201 suits in which the State has been involved have been instituted in the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County, as follows:

1932—449
1933—350
1934—188
Total	1201

The figures for the preceding 4-year period were:

1927— 91
1928—167
1929— 52
1930—260
Total	570

During this administration 437 corporation tax appeals were finally concluded. This is the largest number of such cases ever concluded during any 4-year period. This accomplishment is due to the indefatigable industry of Deputy Attorney General Moyer, who handled the bulk of our corporation tax work.

During this administration we have handled 159 cases in the appellate courts. Of these 149 have been argued.

During the preceding 4-year period, the total number of appellate cases was 84.

Following is a detailed record of our work in the cases decided by the appellate courts during this administration:

	No. Cases	Affirmed	Reversed	Won	Lost
U. S. Supreme Court	10	3	0	9	1
State Supreme Court	88	70	18	68	20
Superior Court	29	22	7	20	9
Circuit Court of Appeals	6	4	2	2	4
	133	99	27	99	34

In all of the cases decided against us by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals petitions for certiorari to the United States Supreme Court were filed. Two have been allowed and two are pending. These cases involve the right of Federal Courts to appoint receivers to liquidate State building and loan associations and the assets of closed State banks.

The outstanding cases determined by the appellate courts during this administration are as follows:

Dorrance Estate, 309 Pa. 151 (1932), involving inheritance tax of $17,000,000. In this case the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania clarified the law relating to the determination of the question whether a decedent lived in one state or another. Two applications for certiorari to the United States Supreme Court were made by the estate, but both were refused.

This was was tried for the Commonwealth in the Orphans' Court by William A. Gray, Esq., of Philadelphia. Mr. Gray handled the case in masterly fashion. Deputy Attorney General Goldberg assisted in the trial and also did invaluable work in assisting the Attorney General in the preparation of the briefs filed in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania and the Supreme Court of the United States.

Alabama v. Arizona, Pennsylvania and seventeen other states, 291 U. S. 286 (1934). This was an effort of the State of Alabama to prevent Pennsylvania from enforcing its law forbidding the introduction into this State for sale on the open market of prison-made goods from other states. The Supreme Court of the United States was asked to entertain a bill in equity for this purpose. The Attorneys General of Montana and Pennsylvania were selected by the 19 defendant states to oppose the filing of the bill. After oral argument the court refused permission to file the bill.

City Bank Farmers Trust Company v. Schnader et al., 291 U. S. 24 (1934), 79 L. ed. Adv. Op. 68. This case involved a dispute between Pennsylvania and New York as to the taxable situs for inheritance tax purposes of a large collection of paintings which had been on exhibition at the Philadelphia Art Museum for upwards of two years immediately preceding the death of the owner, who was a resident of New York. The United States Supreme Court held that the property was taxable by Pennsylvania.

Commonwealth v. Girard Life Insurance Co., 305 Pa. 558 (1932), and 77 L. ed. 501 (U. S. Supreme Court), sustained the constitutionality of the Act of May 6, 1925, P. L. 526, imposing a tax upon gross premiums received by stock life insurance companies.

Commonwealth v. Schuylkill Trust Company, 315 Pa. 429 (1934), sustaining the validity of the Act of June 13, 1907, P. L. 640, as last amended by the Act of April 25, 1929, P. L. 673. This case involves more than a million dollars annually in revenue to the Commonwealth. An appeal to the United States Supreme Court is pending.

Commonwealth v. Nelson-Pedley Construction Co. et al., 303 Pa. 174 (1931). In this case the Supreme Court sustained the Commonwealth's form of building contract requiring a contractor to repair at his own expense any damage occurring by fire during construction. If the Commonwealth had lost this case and three others against subcontractors, it would have been obliged at its own expense to repair upwards of $1,000,000 of fire damage to the Education Building.

Commonwealth ex rel. Schnader v. Liveright et al., 308 Pa. 35 (1932). In this case the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania by a vote of 4 to 3 sustained the validity of the Talbot Act, which appropriated money from the State Treasury to political subdivisions of the Commonwealth for unemployment relief. This department had previously rendered an opinion that the act was unconstitutional.

The majority opinion of the Supreme Court also held that an appropriation is invalid as a constitutional debt if it causes the total appropriations made by the Legislature to exceed the total estimated revenue for the period in which the appropriation is to be paid. This principle is highly important in that it compels the Legislature at each session to balance the State budget.

Commonwealth v. Philadelphia Electric Company, 312 Pa. 528 (1933), in which the Supreme Court held taxable under the Gross Receipts Tax Law the receipts of an electric light company from the sale of current to other companies in the State for resale, and the receipts from the sale of lamps, wire, sockets, and other accessories. This case involved a half-million dollars of revenue annually.

Commonwealth v. Lukens, 312 Pa. 220 (1933), sustaining the validity of the Act of April 25, 1929, P. L. 662, which amended the Gross Receipts Tax Law.

Commonwealth v. Paul W. Bounds Company, 316 Pa. 29 (1934), in which the Supreme Court held that the sawing, planing, and otherwise preparing stone for building is not manufacturing.

Clabby's Estate, 308 Pa. 287 (1932). This case established the principle that an inheritance tax appraisement is prima facie correct and that the burden of proof is upon the party objecting to it. It also finally and definitely established the procedure to be followed in inheritance tax appeals to the orphans' court.

Haggerty's Estate, 311 Pa. 503 (1933), interpreting the Act of May 16, 1929, P. L. 1795.

Lowry's Estate, 314 Pa. 518 (1934). In this case the Supreme Court held that the Act of May 16, 1929, P. L. 1795, does not impose a tax on joint bank accounts created after its passage. This situation should be corrected by the Legislature to avoid a substantial loss of revenue.

Commonwealth v. Stegmaier Brewing Co., 309 Pa. 52 (1932), holding that the making of cereal beverages was not brewing of malt liquors.

Commonwealth v. Louis Burk, Inc., 38 Dauphin 1 (1933), holding that the slaughtering of cattle and pigs for sale as fresh meat is not manufacturing within the amendment to the Capital Stock Tax Act exempting from tax corporations engaged in the "processing and curing of meats, their products and by-products."

Commonwealth v. Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation, 39 Dauphin 102 (1934), interpreting the Loans Tax Law.

Pitcairn v. Stuart, 302 Pa. 499 (1931). In this case the Supreme Court ruled that the judicial branch of the government cannot substitute its judgment for that of the executive department in determining matters relaing to the construction and improvement of State highways.

Commonwealth v. Pardee Bros., 310 Pa. 353 (1933). This case established the right of the Department of Highways to relocate a State highway making the new highway wider than the old without filing plans for the new highway in the county.

Bell Telephone Company v. Lewis and Pinchot, 313 Pa. 374 (1934). In this case the Supreme Court held that neither the Governor nor heads of administrative departments can be made involuntary defendants in declaratory judgment proceedings involving interpretations of statutes.

Commonwealth v. Charles, Superior Court, No. 179, April Term, 1934, not yet reported. The court held that the Highway Patrol have authority to arrest violators of the Vehicle Code on sight.

Commonwealth v. Moeschlin et al., 314 Pa. 34 (1934). This case established the law on the form of bond accompanying liquor licenses and permits, and the procedure for their collection.

We are appending to this report a complete list of the appellate court cases which have been decided showing which cases have been won and which have been lost, who argued them and the general subject involved.

Legislative Work

During this administration this department has had a greater volume of legislative work than at any previous time in its history.

Not only did we prepare the administration bills for the two regular sessions of the Legislature and examine all bills submitted to the Governor for approval by the Legislature, but we also had this work to do for three special sessions.

Later in this report we shall discuss in detail certain codifications of law which we prepared for submission to the Legislature. That work was done in addition to the legislative work with which this part of our report deals.

For each of the special sessions we prepared at your request a complete program of legislation covering the items listed in the calls for such sessions.

The outstanding measures which were enacted at special sessions were unemployment relief acts of various kinds, a complete liquor control program, a milk control law, and the old age assistance law.

During your administration we prepared upwards of 200 measures which were introduced into the Legislature at your instance.

And during your administration we examined and advised you on a total of 1852 bills which the Legislature passed. Of this number you approved 1304, and vetoed 448.

Collections

During the period January 1, 1931 to November 1, 1934 this department collected for the Commonwealth $29,251,035.70.

This aggregate amount includes $14,394,698.88 inheritance tax collected from the estate of Dr. John T. Dorrance and $6,696,110.53 collected from surety companies on bonds given to secure State deposits in Pennsylvania banks which closed.

The total of $29,251,035.70 collected during the period of three years and ten months ending November 1, 1934, compares with total collections for the four calendar years 1927 to 1930 inclusive of $6,934,903.60, which included a single item of $4,954,241.74.

Accordingly, the collections during this administration have aggregated more than four times the collections made by this department during the preceding four-year period. And excluding the amount collected from the Dorrance Estate and from sureties for closed banks, the total of our ordinary collections during this period has been somewhat over four times the total of the ordinary collections during the preceding four-year period.

All of the collections to which we have referred have been made directly through the regular employes of this department, assisted by local counsel to the extent to which such assistance was necessary.

Were we to allocate to our collection one third of the entire cost of operating the department, * * * which is certainly a very generous allocation, * * * the cost of collections throughout this administration would be 1-1/10 per centum of the amounts collected. This is an extremely moderate cost for this type of work.

The following is a detailed statement of the number of ordinary collection claims referred to this department during this administration classified under appropriate headings.

	Open Cases 1/1/31	New Cases Received 1/1/31 to 11/1/34	Collected in full or otherwise closed 1/1/31 to 11/1/34	Open Claims 11/1/34

Except for liquid fuels tax claims, the cases, which prior to January 1, 1931 had been referred to this department for action, were small in number. The Emergency Relief Sales Tax Act had not been passed; and many of the claims subsequently referred arose under it. The Department of Revenue had previously attempted to take care of escheat cases. No procedure had been worked out for the orderly transmittal of miscellaneous accounts. The procedure for the transmittal of corporation tax accounts, maintenance accounts and accounts for medical and surgical services was still in a formative process. It might, therefore, be said that we completely reorganized the collection procedure relating to delinquent accounts and placed it on a workable basis, centralizing all of this work under the direct control of the Department of Justice as was contemplated by The Fiscal Code of 1929.

A word of explanation is necessary regarding the cases still open on November 1, 1934. In many of these cases partial collections have been effected and the prospects are good that the accounts will ultimately be liquidated under the impetus already given to them. A large group consists of claims for corporation taxes against bankrupt estates where no collection has been made or where a partial collection only has been made. This type of case is closed to all intents and purposes; but the files cannot be formally closed until a final investigation has been made by the Department of Revenue and an order cancelling the accounts has been put through that department and the Auditor General's office. In the majority of liquid fuels tax cases the claims have been collected substantially in full. The files, however, remain open because there are still unpaid penalty and interest items due as to which there is still a prospect of collection.

The foregoing schedules, however, do not complete the picture of collection activities. Thousands of accounts for delinquent liquid fuels taxes were referred to us by the Department of Revenue not for collection but for authority to mark them uncollectible on the books, * * * to remove them from the active accounts receivable ledgers. In each case the request was supported by an investigator's report and other data which enabled us to conclude that the request should be granted. In each case, however, we addressed demand letters to the debtors as an additional check upon the information furnished to us. If we received replies to these letters we refused to grant the authority requested, but instead opened an active collection file in the case.

Likewise we were asked to pass upon the proposed charging off of thousands of medical and surgical and insane maintenance accounts. The information considered with each account was carefully checked and appropriate action taken. Records of all of these charge-offs have been maintained in our files.

The Liquid Fuels Tax Acts of 1929 and 1931 required the dealers and distributors, respectively, to furnish bonds to the Commonwealth to secure their compliance with the provisions of the acts. Nine bonding companies, furnishing liquid fuels tax bonds, failed during the last four years. It was necessary for us to prepare and file with the receivers of these bonding companies claims for all amounts due to the Commonwealth under bonds of delinquent tax payers. The extent of the work connected with this activity may be gathered from the fact that against one company, the Equitable Casualty and Surety Company, claims aggregating $175,000.00 were filed, practically all of which were under $500.00 in amount. The total number of claims filed was 1653 although only one miscellaneous accounts file was and is maintained.

As required by law we have maintained a complete docket of all collection cases. We also maintain a card index showing all open and closed cases which have been and are being handled by this department. The docket, which is chronological, is cross referenced to the card index, which is alphabetical, by means of docket numbers. We maintain in a separate docket all tax appeals to the Dauphin County Court. The question involved and the present status of each case is stated. A complete list of all cases forwarded to local counsel in the 67 counties is kept, showing the cases in the hands of each attorney and whether or not they are open or closed.

Special credit is due to Deputy Attorney General John Y. Scott for the efficient handling of collection matters by this department throughout this administration.

In connection with our collection work the following methods warrant particular mention:

Liquid Fuels Tax

The Liquid Fuels Tax Act of 1931 became effective on June 1, 1931. The act changed the former system for collecting this type of revenue. In setting up the administrative machinery for the operation of the act numerous questions were raised by the Department of Revenue all of which were taken care of. The act has been successful and we were glad to cooperate with the administrative officers in working out procedure for the present smooth operation of the act.

It was found that wholesale evasion and fraud had been practiced under the previous liquid fuels tax acts. Prompt and effective prosecutions instituted and carried through by this office in several localities, particularly in Philadelphia and Wilkes-Barre, stamped out the so-called gasoline bootleg ring so that no extensive fraud has been practiced under the present liquid fuels tax act.

Prior to 1931 bonding companies were seldom forced to pay their liabilities on liquid fuels tax bonds. This situation has been corrected. The bonding companies for the most part have liquidated their liabilities in cases of this type. Suits against bonding companies which were originally necessary need not now be instituted. When a case is discovered at the present time payment is usually forthcoming upon demand.

Corporation Tax

During this administration we established the first lien status of corporation tax accounts.

A series of cases, culminating in Special Deputy Attorney General Weinrott's victory in Commonwealth v. Stocker, Trustee, 70 F. (2d) 453 (1934), has established the Commonwealth's right to be paid prior to claimants of the same rank as the Commonwealth against bankrupt estates. We also satisfied referees in bankruptcy that the six months limitation within which claims must generally be filed against bankrupt estates does not apply to the Commonwealth.

Many delinquent corporation tax accounts have been compromised after consideration by this department, the Department of Revenue and the Department of the Auditor General, as provided by The Fscal Code. This resulted in a fair recovery to the State in a great many old cases in which no collection could otherwise have been effected, and in a general clearing off the books of uncollectible accounts receivable. Much of this work is not disclosed in the figures heretofore given.

Insane Maintenance

We have advised the Department of Revenue in connection with the setting up of its administrative machinery for the collection of these accounts under statutes passed within the last four years, which placed the burden of collection entirely upon the Commonwealth instead of dividing the responsibility between the Commonwealth and the several counties.

Medical and Surgical Service Accounts

Although this type of case represents a very minor part of our activities, we have been successful in coming to satisfactory adjustments with a large self insurance carriers concerning their liabilities to State hospitals for Compensation cases treated at such hospitals.

Sales Tax

The Sales Tax Act was adopted in 1932. Numerous questions of administration, involving legal points, were raised and advice and assistance was given to the Department of Revenue. All claims of this type which have been transmitted to us for collection have been sued out, and practically all of them reduced to judgment. Collection of delinquent accounts of this type, however, is extremely difficult because of the nature of the tax and the irresponsibility of many of the tax payers.

Escheats

We have worked out and established a system for the handling of all escheat cases where appearance in court is necessary. Many of the open cases now in the files are matters in which eventually there may be an escheat; but time alone will determine this fact.

In the cases of Miles v. Metzger, et al., 316 Pa. 211 (1934), and Kelker v. Metzger, et al., 316 Pa. 211 (1934), the Supreme Court clarified the Escheat Law and particularly pointed out the rights and liabilities of the Commonwealth to unclaimed funds in the hands of fiduciaries. The court also greatly clarified the obligation of the Commonwealth to pay informers' and escheators' fees.

Miscellaneous

Included among the miscellaneous claims which we have handled have been several claims against political subdivisions for motor vehicle fines improperly paid over to such subdivisions by the fining officers, instead of to the Commonwealth as required by the Motor Vehicle Code. We have been generally successful in compelling recognition on the part of political subdivisions of our interpretation of this portion of the Motor Vehicle Code. Notably we have recovered claims of this type from the County of Cumberland in the amount of $2,500.00, the City of Altoona in the amount of $1,000.00, and the County of Dauphin in the amount of $12,638.84.

The remaining miscellaneous accounts, with the exception of claims against bonding companies on liquid fuels tax bonds, are trivial in amount and extremely diversified in character.

Interstate Commerce Questions

Many users of liquid fuels, using liquid fuels in connection with the transportation business, raised the question of liability for liquid fuels tax on the ground that the use of the liquid fuels was in interstate commerce. All of these cases were satisfactorily adjusted on a basis which resulted in recovering all the revenue to which the State was entitled. The principal cases adjusted after appeals had been filed in court were:

Westridge Transportation Company
Frank Martz (Operation of interstate buses)
Erie Railroad Company
Lehigh Valley Railroad Company

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company Case has not been finally closed but an agreement has been reached. The principles established in these cases have been applied by the Department of Revenue to other similar situations with satisfactory results.

In Commonwealth v. Wiloil Corporation, 316 Pa. 33 (1934), we secured a decision in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania that liquid fuels sold in Pennsylvania were taxable regardless of the fact that such liquid fuels were acquired by the seller in another State for the purpose of completing the sale. This decision is of the utmost importance in liquid fuels and mercantile license situations. The case is now on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States and will shortly be heard.

Department of Highways Claims

At the beginning of this administration we were confronted with a large number of uncollected claims for amounts due the Department of Highways by political subdivisions of the State covering their share of the cost of road construction done by the department in past years.

The uncollected claims aggregated $1,211,662.87. Of this amount $639,894.85 have been collected, $81,377.44 have been charged off as uncollectible; and practically all of the uncollected claims have been reduced to judgment, thanks to the efforts of Deputy Attorney General John A. Moss.

Litigation Against and Collections from Sureties

As already stated, we collected during this administration $6,229,704.46 from surety companies on bonds given to secure State deposits in State and National banks.

In 57 cases it became necessary for us to enter judgment against the surety companies. A number of actions were begun by the companies to open the judgments, but thus far all of them have been determined in favor of the State.

We also brought a suit against a surety company which claimed to have cancelled the depository bond held by the State Treasurer. We took the position that the bond was noncancellable. The case is still pending. See Commonwealth v. Globe Indemnity Company, 313 Pa. 498 (1934).

Three suits by surety companies in the Federal courts, to enjoin the Attorney General and the State Treasurer from collecting amounts due on depository bonds, were decided in favor of the defendants.

We have already discussed our collection on bonds given by dealers in liquid fuels.

We also collected through suit against the surety an item of $30,725.76 due to the Eastern State Penitentiary, (prisoner's deposits) by a closed band. Commonwealth v. Great American Indemnity Company, 310 Pa. 201 (1932). (prisoner's deposits) by a closed bank. Commonwealth v. Nelson-Pedley Construction Company, 303 Pa. 174 (1931) and 3 companion cases, determined the liability of the contractor's surety companies, to repair the damage to the Education Building occasioned by fire during the course of construction. The State was saved at least $1,000,000 by this victory.

Litigation is still pending to determine the liability of the sureties on bank depository bonds for approximately $128,000 involved in the so-called "Animal Indemnity Frauds." During the previous administration a former State employe and an accomplice defrauded the State of this sum by forging endorsements on a large number of checks. Court of Common Pleas No. 4 of Philadelphia County has decided these cases in favor of the Commonwealth, but appeals to the Supreme Court will doubtless be taken.

Federal Tax Questions

One of the most interesting items of litigation during your administration was the dispute between the Federal and Sate governments regarding the power of the Federal government to require the State to procure Federal licenses for the operation of our State liquor stores, and to impose a floor tax on the liquor owned by the State on January 12, 1934.

We applied to the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County for an injunction against the Federal collectors of internal revenue, to restrain them from interfering with our State stores, and from collecting the floor tax. The court granted a preliminary injunction. Commonwealth Docket, 1934, No. 19—Equity Docket, No. 1104—In the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County.

Thereupon, the Federal authorities removed the case to the United States District Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania.

We made a motion to remand which denied. 7 Fed. Supp. 729 (1934).

Subsequently the case was heard on the merits: and a decision is now being awaited.

The case involves approximately $1,000,000.

We have also participated in proceedings involving the question whether Federal income tax is payable as the salaries of the superintendents of our State-owned and operated hospitals. A final decision has not yet been rendered.

And the extent to which the Federal processing tax affects the State and its institutions was the subject of Informal Opinion No. 491, dated December 20, 1934.

Assistance to Registers of Wills and County Treasurers in Collecting State Revenue

Prior to this administration the Auditor General, with the approval of the Attorney General, appointed a number of attorneys in various parts of the Commonwealth to assist registers of wills in collecting inheritance tax, and county treasurers in collecting mercantile and other State license fees. This practice was discontinued as of June 1, 1931. Subsequent to that date the expense of legal assistance to county officers in collecting State revenue has been paid out of the appropriations to this department.

In Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties alone the lawyers attached to this department who have been appointed to assist the registers of wills of those counties in the collection of inheritance taxes have particiuated in collecting during the period beginning September 1, 1931, and ending November 1, 1934, $26,096,480.52.

Salaried attorneys in Berks, Delaware, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Luzerne, and Montgomery Counties not only attend to the general legal business of the department in their counties but also assist the registers of wills in collecting this tax.

This work is extremely important and brings into the State Treasury in collections which would not be made without their services many times the salaries paid to our lawyers. It consists of checking all appraisements, construing wills for appraisers, ordering supplemental appraisements when necessary, attending all audits, examining all adjudications, taking exceptions to items of credit which are deemed improper, issuing citations to file accounts, to appear before appraisers or before the Orphans' Court, presenting petitions for attachment against fiduciaries who have failed to pay the tax, filing liens, taking appeals from appraisements and adjudications, and generally, of supervising and advising on every detail involved in the collection of the amount of tax lawfully due the State.

The regular attorneys of this department in the various counties have assumed throughout this administration the duty of assisting county treasurers in collecting license fees.

The men who handle this work in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh have, with but two exceptions, been engaged in it for many years and are experts in inheritance tax law and procedure. Political considerations did not enter into their employment by my department when they were transferred to its payroll.

Inheritance Tax Collections

Appeals to the Orphans' Courts

During the period from March 16, 1931, to November 1, 1934, inclusive, 254 transfer inheritance tax appeals (exclusive of those which arose in Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties) were referred to this department by the Department of Revenue for attention. Of these appeal cases, 145 have been closed and 109 remain open. Of those remaining open, 46 have been decided by the courts and will be closed as soon as the Department of Revenue advises this department that the tax found to be due has been paid. The remaining cases have either been heard and argued, but not decided by the court, are about to be heard, or are being investigated for the purpose of being compromised.

Six of the appeals referred to this department arose in Dauphin County, and were handled directly by this department. Of these appeals, three have been closed, and three, which were recently filed, are still pending.

A few appeals arising outside of Dauphin County were also handled by us instead of being referred to local counsel.

In order to ascertain that all appeals assigned to local counsel will be disposed of promptly, each file is taken up periodically, according to the type of case, and, if necessary, local counsel are requested to give a report of the present status of particular cases or are urged to be more diligent in bringing their cases to an early conclusion.

When an appeal case is referred to local counsel, it is our established practice to have him forward us a copy of the appeal immediately, to the end that we may be in a position to call to his attention any recent decisions that may have been handed down in other counties on the subject involved, or to recommend to him what action he should take in a particular case which may be unusual in any respect. This procedure also enables us to have counsel withhold from the local courts any case involving a question which has arisen in another county and is about to be tested in the Supreme Court.

While appeals in Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties are not handled through our office at Harrisburg, we often consult with our deputies in those counties concerning unusual questions that arise in particular cases.

Delinquent Inheritance Tax Claims

Delinquent inheritance tax claims are handled apart from our general collection work.

During the period from March 16, 1931, to November 1, 1934, inclusive, 343 claims for delinquent inheritance taxes were referred to this department by the Department of Revenue for collection. This figure is exclusive of delinquent claims for inheritance tax arising in Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties and in those counties where we employ local counsel on a salary basis, because in those instances the registers of wills refer delinquent claims directly to our local representative instead of routing them through this department.

Of the 343 claims mentioned, 190 have been closed. In 36 of these 190 cases it was ascertained that the estate was insolvent and no tax was due, and in at least 20 instances it was found that the claims were uncollectible.

Of the claims remaining open on the books, many are filed against the estates, and many others have been held filed against the states, and many others have been held open in the hope that the financial status of the parties involved would improve to the extent that collection might be made. Arrangements have been made for the payment of some of the claims on an installment basis. In several cases executors absconded with the funds of the estates, and while they have apprehended and are in prison, there are no funds available for the collection of our claims.

As many of the pending delinquent claims represent small amounts due from small estates, we have experienced difficulty in collecting them, particularly because of the current depression.

Formerly, many of the registers of wills permitted inheritance taxes to become delinquent over a long period of time before they were turned over to our department for collection, with the result that it was impossible to effect collection. Of the 153 delinquent claims remaining open at this time, at least 60 were of this character, and the possibility of collection in these cases is very remote. Today, the Department of Revenue requires registers of wills to turn delinquent inheritance tax claims over to our department or our local counsel who are on a salary basis, shortly after they become delinquent.

Defaulted Bonds

During this administration we have adjusted, collected, or enforced payment by suit of claims growing out of defaults on investments held by the State Employes Retirement Fund, the Public School Employes Retirement Fund, the State Workmen's Insurance Fund, the School Fund, and the State Insurance Fund, as follows:

Number of municipalities whose defaulted items have been referred to this department for collection	153
Number of municipalities which have paid defaults in full	102
Total amount referred to us for collection	$869,363.52
Amount collected	649,220.80
Balance uncollected	220.142.72

In all cases we have collected interest on the defaulted items from date of default to date of payment. This interest has amounted to $28,131.91.

It was necessary to bring 8 suits, in all of which judgment was obtained in favor of the Commonwealth.

One of the defaulting debtors to the Commonwealth was the State of Arkansas. We asked leave of the Supreme Court of the United States to file a bill in equity against the debtor State. Leave was granted. Pennsylvania v. Arkansas, 290 U. S. 596 (1934).

Subsequently, the Governor of Arkansas called a Special Session of the Legislature, which authorized a satisfactory adjustment to be made with the State's bond creditors. This avoided a very substantial loss to the State Workmen's Insurance Fund which owned the bonds.

Special mention should be made of the efficient work done by Deputy Attorney General O'Hara in protecting the Commonwealth's interests in these default matters.

Closed Bank Work

One of the heaviest tasks of this department during this administration has been the legal work incident to the liquidation of closed banks.

On November 1, 1934 there were 149 closed banks whose legal work was being handled by attorneys appointed by me for this particular purpose.

Just as your administration began, banks were closing almost daily and it became necessary to provide counsel for the Secretary of Banking as receiver promptly as banks closed.

In the past it had always been the practice for the Secretary of Banking to appoint an attorney on a fee basis for each closed institution. There was no coordination of the work of lawyers handling closed banks in various parts of the State and no uniformity in the method of determining the amount of compensation. The fees charged and allowed in all such cases constituted a substantial item of the cost of liquidation.

Shortly after the beginning of this administration, we determined to place on a salary basis the lawyers doing this type of work and to place them under the supervision of a special deputy attorney general appointed for the express purpose of coordinating this work throughout the State.

This work has been under the supervision of Special Deputy Attorney General Shippen Lewis of Philadelphia. As of November 1st, 77 lawyers were employed under his supervision. 71 of them were paid on a salary basis. The other 6 were compensated on a fee basis because the volume of work does not justify an annual salary.

The salaries range from $1,800 to $5,000 per annum. The annual salary roll totals $284,000, and the average cost of legal services per bank is slightly more than $1,900 per annum. As of the date of closing the assets of our closed banks exceeded $300,000,000 on value. For the four-year period, the cost of this branch of legal service was less than one-third of one per cent of the assets. This is obviously extremely low for this important type of work.

In the early stages of this work closed bank lawyers in the centers where the largest number of banks closed met in bi-weekly conference to discuss the problems which had arisen since the last meeting, and to arrive at solutions which would be adopted as the future rule to be followed by all attorneys engaged in this work.

Periodically bulletins were prepared by Mr. Lewis, mimeographed, and circulated among all the lawyers, stating new problems and the rulings applicable to them.

The tremendous volume of this work has been done systematically and without any divergence of policy or rule.

Figures are not available to indicate in detail the quantity of work which our closed bank lawyers have done. They have furnished legal advice to the deputy receivers in charge of the several banks. They have brought thousands of suits to collect amounts due the banks. They have foreclosed thousands of mortgages held by the banks. They have brought suits to collect assessments from shareholders of State banks. They have represented the Secretary of Banking as fiduciary of approximately 31,000 trust estates valued at $189,000,000, and as accountant for many of these estates. They have represented the Secretary of Banking as fiduciary of mortgage pools formerly conducted by trust companies. They have done the legal work incident to obtaining loans totalling many millions of dollars from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for 97 of the closed banks.

In addition to handling the legal work of from 1 to 10 closed banks, each of our closed bank attorneys has been asked, without extra compensation, to attend in his county to work forwarded to him by deputy receivers of closed banks in other counties. This extra work has been substantial in the larger counties.

To prevent any abuses from arising, I made it a rule that our salaried closed bank attorneys might not serve as attorney for the substituted trustee of a mortgage pool conducted by a trust company to which he was assigned, and that closed bank attorneys might not receive from trust estates formerly handled by closed banks fees for work done for these estates, unless all the beneficiaries consented in writing and the payment was approved by me or by my deputy.

Special mention should be made, not only of the splendid service rendered by Special Deputy Attorney General Shippen Lewis, but also of the great energy and ability displayed by Deputy Attorney General Harold D. Saylor, who regularly attended to the legal work of the Department of Banking, and who supervised our closed bank work prior to Mr. Lewis' appointment, and after Mr. Lewis was appointed co-operated with him wholeheartedly.

I am satisfied that the handling of our closed bank work under the system which I have described has saved closed bank depositors at least a half million dollars in counsel fees during your administration.

Title Work

Prior to this administration practically all title work required by the Commonwealth was done under contract with one or more incorporated title companies.

Throughout this administration this department has supervised this type of work and it has been done by a group of employes who have from time to time been transferred from the payroll of one department or board to another as the work was done for the department paying the employes. The force consisted of 4 abstracters and 4 stenographer assistants.

The largest single item of this work during this administration was that incident to the acquisition of the new military reservation at Indiantown Gap.

The consideration for lands acquired by the Commonwealth during this administration under titles examined and approved by this department was upwards of $1,300,000.

The total acreage acquired was 289,000. Title examinations cost an aggregate of $64,145.

The number of projects involved was 549, so that the average cost was $116.84 per project. The title examination cost per acre was 22 cents.

Prior to this administration the average cost per acre of title work for game lands acquired by the Commonwealth was 48.6 cents and of title for forest lands, upwards of 27 cents per acre.

During this administration the cost per acre of examining title to game lands averaged slightly more than 33 cents and of examining title to forest lands slightly more than 6 cents.

The cost of examining the title to 280 properties comprising 11,534 acres for the new State Military Reservation at Indiantown Gap averaged $1.02 per acre. This particular item raised the average cost of our work substantially.

From the figures given it is quite apparent that the performance of this work directly by this department has saved the Commonwealth many thousands of dollars during this administration.

Our title work has been under the supervision of Deputy Attorney General Paul L. Hutchison who, however, had the benefit of the valuable experience in title law, of Deputy Attorney General James W. Shull.

Codification of Laws

With your approval, I requested the 1931 Session of the Legislature to make appropriations of $5,000 per subject for the codification by my department of the Corporation Laws, the Banking and Building and Loan Association Laws, the Insurance Laws, and the School Laws.

The appropriations were made as requested, but at the 1932 Special Session of the Legislature each of these appropriations was reduced to $4,000.

There had not been a general revision and codification of the corporation laws since 1874. Not only were the laws on this subject obsolete, but they were embodied in a large number of unrelated acts.

Although the laws governing the organization, regulation, and liquidation of banks, trust companies, and building and loan associations were not as ancient as our corporation laws, they also were badly in need of revision and codification.

In the case of the school laws, the necessity for codification arose principally from the fact that since the adoption of the School Code in 1911, hundreds of amendatory acts were passed rendering it extremely difficult for those charged with the administration of the school laws to work under the great number of effective statutes. Certain changes in the law were also regarded by the Department of Public Instruction and others as highly desirable.

Although the insurance laws were revised and codified in 1921, there was a feeling among many persons that the time had arrived for a new codification.

Shortly after the approval of the appropriations I assigned to the work of revising the corporation laws Special Deputy Attorney General E. Russell Shockley, employed Assistant Deputy Attorney General Bernard G. Segal to revise the banking and building and loan association laws, and Assistant Deputy Attorney General Paul H. Rhoads to prepare the codification of the school laws. Deputy Attorney General Harold D. Saylor assumed the responsibility for preparing a revision of the insurance laws, with the assistance of Assistant Deputy Attorney General George W. Keitel.

All of these codifications were introduced into the Legislature at its regular 1933 session. The revisions of the school laws and of the insurance laws were rejected, but the Legislature enacted the Business Corporation Law and the Nonprofit Corporation Law, both of which were approved by the Governor on May 5, 1933, the Building and Loan Code, which the Governor also approved on May 5, 1933, and the Department of Banking Code and the Banking Code, both of which the Governor approved on May 15, 1933. The preparation and passage of these five codes are outstanding achievements of this department and of your administration.

The new Corporation Codes are modern and up to date in every respect; and the Banking and Building and Loan Codes were tremendous steps forward in our State's legislation on these important subjects.

Our Banking Code anticipated by a number of months many of the improvements in banking law which Congress applied to National banks during its Session of 1933.

After these codes were passed, this department prepared, for the use of the departments administering them and of lawyers, banks, building and loan associations, and the public generally, two volumes presenting the new statutes with annotations.

Mr. Shockley prepared the volume entitled "Pennsylvania Corporation Laws," and Mr. Segal the volume entitled "Pennsylvania Banking and Building & Loan Codes." Both volumes were published by the Department of Property and Supplies and offered to the public at the cost of publication. The volume on corporations sold at $1.50 per copy, and the volume on banking and building and loan laws at $2.00 per copy. Many thousands of copies of each of these volumes were distributed.

It is interesting to note that many efforts had been made in previous years to have codifications of the laws on these subjects enacted. The effort to have the corporation laws revised dated back to 1915, and as early as 1917 the Legislature created a commission to prepare a revision of the banking and building and loan laws. That commission worked on the subject until 1923, but the Legislature failed to adopt the result of its work.

In 1931 this department prepared and the Legislature enacted comprehensive amendments to The Administrative and Fiscal Codes. In each case a single amendatory act was passed embodying all the changes which were deemed necessary in these important statutes.

It is our opinion that after any subject of statutory law has once been codified, subsequent sessions of the Legislature ought to enact in a single act all amendments made to any code. We prevailed on the 1931 Legislature to follow this procedure, not only with respect to The Administrative and Fiscal Codes, but also in dealing with the Borough Code, the County Code, the Game Code, the School Code, the Vehicle Code, the Tractor Code, and the First Class Township and Third Class City Laws. This was a precedent which ought to have been followed in 1933, and which should guide future sessions of the Legislature; but, unfortunately, we were not as successful in 1933 as in 1931. However, in that year only one amendatory law was passed making amendments to the Borough Code, the First Class Township Law, the Fiscal Code, the School Code, and the Third Class City Law. But in the case of other codes a number of separate unrelated amendatory acts were passed.

Assistance to Workmen's Compensation Board and Referees

During prior administrations the Department of Labor and Industry, with the approval of the Attorney General, appointed lawyers to assist the Workmen's Compensation Board and referees in the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Law.

As of June 1, 1931, these lawyers became direct employes of this department and have since then been compensated out of the appropriations made to this department.

This work consists of legal advice to members of the Workmen's Compensation Board and Workmen's Compensation Referees and includes assistance to indigent claimants in the presentation of their claims for compensation.

Thousands of claimants have been assisted in this way.

During this administration through the co-operation of the Philadelphia Bar Association a Committee of Philadelphia lawyers was created to give assistance to needy local claimants for workmen's compensation. It was found that the lawyers employed by this department to aid the compensation officials in Philadelphia County could not adequately give assistance to the number of persons requesting it. Our appropriation did not warrant the appointment of additional attorneys and for this reason the plan was conceived of having a voluntary committee of local lawyers created for this particular purpose.

The plan has been in operation only a part of a year and is an experiment. However, thus far it has proven to be helpful and satisfactory.

Contracts

Every contract to which the Commonwealth, or any department, board, commission or officer of the Commonwealth is a party, must be approved by this department; and all bonds for the faithful performance of their duties by State officers, must be approved by the Attorney General.

Examination of contracts and bonds was concentrated, during this administration, as the special work of Assistant Deputy Attorneys General Charles P. Addams and George W. Keitel.

The following figures indicate, in part, the volume of this work:

General construction contracts approved	455
Supplies contracts and performance bonds approved	4,422
Fidelity bonds approved	7,555
Leases approved	3,005
Highway agreements approved	927
Fuel contracts approved	302
Welfare construction agreements approved	146
Special printing bids approved	803
Total	17,615

Many forms of contract to be used by the various departments, boards and commissions in their day to day work, were also prepared by this department.

Bond Issues

In 1933 and 1934, $75,000,000 of State bonds were issued, pursuant to the action of the Legislature and the affirmative vote of the electors.

Through our regular staff we attended to all of the legal work incident to these bond issues.

Municipal Bond Issues

Throughout this administration we have furnished assistance to the Bureau of Municipalities, Department of Internal Affairs, in connection with its duty to pass upon all municipal bond issues outside of cities of the first and second classes. Formerly a special deputy attorney general was especially assigned to this task, but since February of this year, we have handled it through our regular staff.

The work has been capably done by Deputy Attorney General A. Lee Edwards.

Between June 1, 1931 and November 1, 1934, we approved 919 municipal bond proceedings.

Forfeiture of Charters

Throughout this administration we have been cooperating with the Department of Banking and the Insurance Department in having the courts declare forfeited the charters of banking and insurance companies which are no longer functioning.

Quo warranto proceedings were instituted in the Dauphin County Court against 22 banking institutions. In 21 of these cases charters were forfeited and one proceeding was withdrawn.

The charters of 147 insurance companies were forfeited by court decree and one forfeiture proceeding is still pending.

Eleven proceedings were instituted for the dissolution of charters of insurance companies and beneficial associations and the liquidation of their affairs by the Insurance Commissioner. Ten of these companies have been dissolved. One proceeding has not yet been concluded.

Extraditions

One of the duties of this department is to examine and approve or disapprove all applications for the requisition of persons charged with crime.

During this administration we examined and approved 707 requisitions of other states and 527 requisitions on Pennsylvania, making a total of 1,234 extradition proceedings. Hearings were held in 61 cases.

Rate and Service Controversies

On behalf of Muncy Industrial Home for Women we participated in a gas rate case before The Public Service Commission; and on behalf of Laurelton State Village we opposed before the same body, the application of Pennsylvania Greyhound Transit Company for permission to abandon bus service to the institution.

Neither of these cases has been decided.

Veterans' Compensation

This department cooperated, not only in preparing, but also in administering the legislation providing for the payment of adjusted compensation to veterans of the Spanish-American and subsequent wars, their widows orphans.

Deputy Attorneys General Thomas W. Bender and Paul L. Hutchison assisted greatly in making possible the record-breaking promptness with which bonus payments were made by the Department of Military Affairs.

Bid Openings

Throughout this administration, a member of the staff of this department attended all bid openings held by the Department of Property and Supplies.

Dockets

As required by law, we have maintained dockets, listing all law suits to which the Commonwealth is a party.

We have also maintained a separate docket for appellate court cases, and, as already stated, complete collection dockets.

Alcohol Permit Board and Liquor Control Board

Due first to the legislation of the manufacture and sale of beer, and subsequently to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and the passage, late in 1933, of legislation establishing the State Store System for the sale of liquor and the licensing of hotels, restaurants and clubs for the sale of liquor for consumption on the premises, this department's work in this field was very extensive during this administration.

Prior to December 8, 1933, our services were rendered in assistance of the Alcohol Permit Board, * * * which administered the Alcohol Law of 1926, and therefore had the responsibility of licensing breweries. On December 8, 1933, the Liquor Control Board superseded the Alcohol Permit Board, and since then we have cooperated with that Board in administering the 1933 liquor legislation. (Acts of November 29, 1933, P. L. 15 and December 8, 1933, P. L. 57.)

Alcohol Permit Board

Actions before the Board:

A plan of cooperation with the Federal prohibition authorities was formulated at the beginning of the administration to enforce the provisions of the Alcohol Act of 1926 and the regulations of the Alcohol Permit Board. Six proceedings to revoke permits were instituted before the Board and in all cases the permits were revoked. In two, however, appeals were taken to the Common Pleas Court, and in action of the Board was reversed.

Hearings were conducted on all applications for permit to determine the fitness and reputation of the applicant.

Bond Collections:

Whenever a permit was revoked by the Board under the Act of 1926 and the Board's action was not reversed by the court, the accompanying bond in the amount of $10,000 was entered of record. Judgments on four bonds, in the total amount of $40,000, were entered. A total of $30,311.17 was collected of bonds entered, and payments are now being made on account of those partly collected.

Liquor Nuisances:

Padlock proceedings were brought in the City of Philadelphia upon request of the Director of Public Safety. 678 proceedings were filed in the five Common Pleas Courts between January, 1931, and January, 1933. The properties padlocked total 421, in 254 cases bonds were filed, and in 3 the proceedings were dismissed. A plan was inaugurated for the use of the padlocked properties, rent free, by destitute families.

These proceedings were brought without any ultimate costs upon the Commonwealth, as in each case the costs were assessed and entered as a judgment against the violator.

Similar proceedings were also brought in many other counties.

Breweries:

Proceedings were brought against 17 breweries in 11 counties, resulting in closure of 13. Proceedings were dismissed in 4 cases.

In connection with the padlock proceedings against the Reiker Brewery in Lancaster, a prosecution was also brought against Michael Benedict, the operator of the brewery, for bribing a State officer, resulting in his conviction and sentence to two years imprisonment.

Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board

General:

Assistance was given to the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board at the time of its organization in preparing the necessary forms, which were distributed within twenty-four hours after the passage of the Liquor Control Act. The procedure on applications, including hearings, was established and regulations prepared under direction of the Board. Every effort was made to keep the public generally informed upon the many questions that arose under the laws of 1933, and numerous opinions were rendered to the Board.

Hearings on Applications:

Hearings were regularly conducted before the Board on all applications for liquor licenses, whenever there was a question as to the reputation of the applicant or the place. The record, including the testimony, was fully prepared in each case, to be available in case of appeal.

Appeals on Refusal of License:

The Board was represented in the various courts of Quarter Sessions throughout the State on all appeals from the decision of the Board refusing licenses and location of liquor stores.

Revocations:

A large number of proceedings to revoke liquor licenses have been instituted. Upwards of 50 licenses have been revoked or suspended.

In all the cases where the license was revoked, a demand has been made for the payment of the bond in the amount of $2,000, and in every case where the payment has been refused judgment has been entered on the bond.

Quo Warranto Proceedings Against Clubs

This procedure was invoked to combat the chartered club "racket" which came into existence with the licensing of clubs for the sale of beer and liquor. Under the Liquor Control Act, nonprofit clubs incorporated for at least six months are entitled to a Club Liquor License, and the Board has no discretionary power to refuse such a license on account of reputation of place or individual. This was established by the Court of Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia on January 12, 1934, on the appeal of the Neptune Club from the decision of the Board refusing the license.

Under a club liquor license, liquor may be sold at all hours except on Sunday, and in addition, a club may maintain a bar without any requirement as to space, kitchen, equipment, employes, or service of meals, as in the case of hotels and restaurants. The license fee for a club is fifty dollars, while the hotel and restaurant fee in Philadelphia is six hundred dollars. As a result, every "speakeasy" operator in Philadelphia proceeded to obtain a charter of some defunct organization in order to obtain and operate under a club license.

The demand for old club charters was largely met by a few unscrupulous persons. Charters of clubs long out of existence were copied from charter books in the recorder of deeds office, presented to the recorder for certification, and then elaborately engrossed. Records and minutes were prepared to show continued existence, and then the charter and records were sold to persons for the purpose of obtaining a club liquor license.

The Board was flooded with applications for club liquor licenses, and was without legal authority to refuse them. This condition threatened, at the time, the entire licensing system created by the Liquor Control Act. An appeal was made to Superintendent Joseph A. LeStrange of the Philadelphia police force, who, in a fine spirit of cooperation, ordered a city-wide investigation of every nonprofit club in existence. The police seized the charter of every organization which could not satisfactorily explain where it was obtained, or which could not show continued existence from the time of incorporation. During this drive, while making an investigation of a questionable club, a police officer was killed. Approximately two hundred charters were seized and lodged in city hall. Of this number, fifty-three had club liquor licenses issued by the Board. When the charter was seized, the place was ordered closed by the police and further operation ceased. This included places holding liquor licenses.

Subsequently, petition in quo warranto were filed to rescind these charters. A total of one hundred ninety-two cases were prepared by the city police under our supervision, and filed in the five common pleas courts. Following are the results:

Charters of unlicensed clubs rescinded	73
Charters of licensed clubs rescinded	30
		103
Proceedings dismissed		11
Proceedings pending		15
(Includes 66 started August 18, 1934)		197

Of the 79 cases pending, 19 hold club licenses. Three of these licenses were revoked for liquor law violations and the quo warranto proceedings continued pending the collection of the bonds.

None of the 103 clubs whose charters were rescinded had a record of violation of the liquor law. Most of them had been in operation as clubs only a short time and closed when the charter was seized by the city police. Seventy-three of these had no license and no bond. The remaining 30 had club liquor licenses, with bonds of $2,000 each. But as none of these licensed clubs was charged with liquor law violations, no grounds existed for a revocation of the license and the collection of the bond. Hence it was impossible to enter judgments and make collections in these cases.

Special Deputy Attorney General Knauer was untiring in his zealous prosecution of this branch of our work; and the other men especially assigned to it have cooperated splendidly.

Liquor Floor Tax Cases

By the Act of November 22, 1933, P. L. 5, the Legislature imposed a floor tax at the rate of $2.00 per gallon upon all spirituous and vinous liquors in the Commonwealth on or before the fifth day after the act's approval. Upwards of 7,000,000 gallons of liquor became subject to this tax.

Immediately after the approval of the act, suits in equity were brought in the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Pennsylvania, asking that the Attorney General, the Secretary of Revenue, and its agents be enjoined from collecting the tax from A. Overholt and Company, Inc., Large Distilling Company, and Joseph S. Finch and Company. The bills in equity alleged that the tax act was unconstitutional under the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution.

On November 27, 1933 the District Court granted temporary injunctions.

The contention of the plaintiffs was that a preponderance of the taxed liquor was green whiskey having a value far less than the tax imposed upon it and that therefore the tax was confiscatory.

Subsequent to the granting of the preliminary injunctions negotiations were begun looking towards the adjustment of the controversy; and it was finally agreed that the suits would be withdrawn if the Liquor Control Board would undertake to purchase from the floor taxed distillers during the year 1934 a quantity of liquor equal to that upon which the tax was imposed and that extensions of time would be granted to the distillers to pay the floor tax so that as the Commonwealth paid for a gallon of whiskey the distillers would pay floor tax on a gallon. The Liquor Control Board entered into these agreements and the suits were discontinued with the understanding, however, that if the Liquor Control Board failed to fulfill its agreement to purchase the stipulated quantity of whiskey from the plantiffs, they shall have the right to renew their suits without prejudice.

It was estimated that the quantity of whiskey which the board agreed to purchase was approximately one-half of one year's supply, based on pre-prohibition consumption; but it developed that the demand for whiskey after the repeal was far less than prior to prohibition. Therefore, it became necessary for the Liquor Control Board to ask for extensions of time from the plaintiff distillers for carrying out the board's commitment to purchase whiskey. The distillers agreed to the extensions requested.

The result of the settlement of these law suits is that the Commonwealth has been collecting its floor tax, but because of the inability of the board to purchase whiskey in the quantities stipulated in its agreements with the plaintiff distillers, the tax will not be paid in full until sometime in the future.

Examining Boards

This department, throughout your administration has cooperated wholeheartedly with the various boards established by the Legislature to examine applications to practice various professions and occupations.

This work was handled first by Deputy Attorney General Penrose Hertzler and after his resignation, by Deputy Attorney General A. Lee Edwards. These men have attended most of the meetings of a number of these examining boards and have supervised many prosecutions for violation of the various regulatory laws.

Following is a statement showing enforcement activities of some of these boards:

	Prosecutions	Convictions	Acquittals
State Board of Medical Education and Licensure	56	43	13
State Board of Undertakers	2	1	0
Dental Board	13	9	0
Pharmacy Board	129	125	6
Real Estate Board	14	10	3
Beauticians Licensing Division	52	34	12

Milk Control

At its 1933 regular session the Legislature authorized a legislative investigation of the production, preparation, distribution, and marketing of milk. See Joint Resolution of May 25, 1933, P. L. 1034.

Special Deputy Attorney General Charles Klein was assigned to assist the Joint Legislative Committee in conducting its hearings and preparing its report.

Subsequently, Deputy Attorney General Bernard G. Segal was assigned the task of preparing for the 1933 special session of the Legislature a milk control act. Aided by a joint committee of the House and Senate, Mr. Segal drafted the Act of January 2, 1933, 1933-34, P. L. 174, which became effective immediately upon its approval by the Governor. A large portion of Mr. Segal's time since January 2 of this year has been devoted to the work of the Milk Control Board. The facts regarding the work of that board are contained in the board's report to you, and need not be repeated here.

Delaware River Joint Commission

From January, 1932, to date we have provided Pennsylvania's share of legal assistance to the Delaware River Joint Commission, without cost to the Commission. Deputy Attorney General Saylor accepted this assignment in addition to his other work for the State.

Special Prosecutors

Under Section 907 of The Administrative Code the Attorney General is authorized, upon request of the president judge of the court of any county, to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate and prosecute any alleged violations of the criminal law.

During this administration special prosecutors have been requested and appointed in the following cases:

Commonwealth v. Ralph J. Rinalducci, Joseph Trunk and Brooks Cassidy—Montgomery County.

Charges—Assault and battery, conspiracy to commit aggravated assault and battery, false imprisonment, and conspiracy to commit false imprisonment.

Special Prosecutor, Deputy Attorney General Herman J. Goldberg.

Mr. Goldberg served without additional compensation, and obtained a conviction of all the defendants. The conviction was sustained by the Superior Court, but set aside by the Supreme Court. Mr. Goldberg, having been appointed a Public Service Commissioner, resigned as Special Prosecutor and Lemuel B. Schofield, Esquire, of Philadelphia was appointed in his stead. On a retrial of the case the defendants were acquitted.

Commonwealth v. Jake Lehman, George Steiner, James Dineno and Michael Gallagher—Montgomery County.

Charge—Murder.

Special Prosecutor, Samuel H. High, Esquire.

The defendants were convicted and the convictions were sustained by the Supreme Court. Mr. High's compensation was fixed at $5,000.

Commonwealth v. 111 defendants in separate cases—Montgomery County.

Charged with various crimes.

Special Prosecutor, J. Stroud Weber, Esquire.

Mr. Weber concluded the work assigned to him and his compensation was fixed at $750.

Investigation of Certain Election Frauds Alleged to Have Occurred in Lackawanna County at the Election Held in November, 1933.

Special Prosecutor, Joseph B. Jenkins, Esquire, and Assistant Special Prosecutors, George Morrow, Esquire, Harry W. Mumford, Esquire, and Henry Nogi, Esquire.

After investigating the charges, presentments were made by the grand jury and a large number of defendants were indicted and convicted.

Mr. Jenkins' compensation was fixed at $5,000.

Commonwealth v. Howard S. Greene, David Ballentine and F. K. Moran—Chester County.

Charge—Conspiracy at common law, involving jury wheel tampering.

Special Prosecutor, Deputy Attorney General Herman J. Goldberg, who served without additional compensation.

Commonwealth v. Bruno et al.—Schuylkill County.

Charge—Murder.

Special Prosecutor, Albert C. Thomas of Meadville.

Assistant Special Prosecutor, George H. Rowley, Esquire, of Greenville, Mercer County.

As this report is written, indictments have been found, but the cases have not yet been tried.

Investigation of the Public Service Commission

Early in this administration charges of improper conduct were made against certain members of the Public Service Commission. This department was requested to cooperate with a committee of the State Senate in investigating the charges.

A large amount of evidence was obtained by this department and brought to the attention of the Senate Investigating Committee.

One member of the Public Service Commission resigned before the investigation got under way, and as the result of the disclosures made during the investigation the Chairman of the commission also resigned.

The services of Special Deputy Attorney General Charles Klein were particularly noteworthy in connection with this investigation.

State Board of Pardons

At the beginning of this administration the Rules of the Board were completely revised.

Changes were made which simplified the practice before the Board, reduced the cost of making applications and eliminated excessive fees of attorneys.

Prior to the change in the rules applicants for clemency were compelled to file transcripts of the notes of testimony and a certified copy of the court record, including the docket entries, minutes of the court, copies of indictments, pleas, verdicts, and sentences. The cost of the transcripts varied but very few cost less than the entire amount now paid properly to present a case to the Board.

Under the new rules the total cost of presenting a case is $11.00, which represents a charge of $1.00 for a set of forms, and a $10.00 filling fee.

Under the old rules, applicants were compelled to advertise notice of intended applications once a week for two consecutive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county or city in which the convictions were had, and proof of publication had to be filed with the Board. The cost of advertising, especially in metropolitan newspapers, was a considerable burden on most applicants.

Under the old rules the applicant was also required to serve notice of intention of applying for clemency, with a complete copy of the application, on the trial judge, if living, and if not living, on the president judge of the court or one of the courts of the county in which the conviction was had, on the present district attorney who prosecuted the case as well as on the private prosecuting attorney, if any, on the warden or keeper of the prison in which applicant was confined, and in cases where conviction was had for the commission of crime in any city of the Commonwealth, on the mayor and head of the police department of such city.

Under the new rules, applicants file one original and nine copies of the application on forms furnished by the Board. The Board advertises cases listed for hearing, and serves copies on the judge, the district attorney, the board of trustees of the institution of confinement, and the state supervisor of paroles.

Formerly all cases filed were heard in open session by the Board.

Under the new rules, the Board considers all except capital cases, first in executive session. If a case appears to have merit a hearing is granted; otherwise a hearing is refused.

Before the Board considers any case, comment is invited from those to whom copies of the application were sent. So that there may be no question about the propriety of comment by the judge and district attorney, the Board requested the Legislature to pass the Act of April 24, 1931, P. L. 71, rendering it the mandatory duty of these officers upon request to give to the Board information and advise regarding pending applications.

Two important questions must be answered on the forms now furnished by the Board.

The first relates to employment. All applicants must show that they will have legitimate employment, unless disabled by reason of age or health before the Board will recommend clemency. The applicant must also tell by whom he will be employed, and this as well as other averments in the application are investigated by parole officers during the interim between the granting of a hearing and the date of hearing. The Board has also required a guarantee of employment from all prisoners confined in penitentiaries who have been recommended for release on parole at the expiration of their minimum sentences.

In addition the applicant must state the fee which he or any other person has paid or has agreed to pay the person appearing before the Board in his behalf. This has eliminated from practice before the Board, a certain type of lawyer who for a fee, usually exorbitant, guaranteed to prisoners their freedom. Fees have been carefully scrutinized by the Board, and in some cases attorneys were ordered to reduce their fees.

Applicants for clemency instead of being confused by a complicated and expensive system of procedure as they were under the old rules, now have only three steps to take. They must:

(1) Secure a set of forms for $1.00 from the Board and have them properly filled out.
(2) Return original and eight copies to the Board with a $10.00 filing fee.
(3) If a hearing is granted, have some one appear in Harrisburg to present the case.

The members of the Board have shown an unusual interest in the work of the Board. They have met with the boards of trustees of the Eastern and Western State Penitentiaries, and the Pennsylvania Industrial School to discuss problems of clemency and parole. The Board has cooperated with the Federal Government in deportable cases, and in such cases has required a waiver of objection to deportation before recommending parole.

The work of the Board has also been conducted at a substantial saving of money to the State. Formerly a calendar was printed for each session of the Board. The cost of printing ranged from $25.00 to $50.00 per month. The calendars are now mimeographed at a cost of approximately fifty cents per month. A Kardex system was installed, replacing an antiquated system of keeping the records. Prior to this administration no fees were charged for filing and there were no official forms. The fees now charged have made the work of the Board practically self-sustaining.

The Board in the present administration up to November 1, 1934, considered 2,616 cases, and recommended to the Governor 53 pardons, 464 commutations of penitentiary or reformatory sentences, and 6 commutations of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

A detailed comparative summary of the recommendations of the Board of Pardons from 1915 to November 1, 1934, is attached.

It will be noted that the present Board recommended comparatively few pardons. All but four of those recommendatiins were for persons who had already been released from confinement and who over a period of years had clearly demonstrated their ability to avoid criminal activities. These recommendations were made only for good and sufficient reasons. Mere good behavior subsequent to release was not sufficient. Proof that a pardon was needed to improve economic status, restore certain rights lost by conviction or to prevent deportation when deportation would have been a cruel and unnecessary punishment were some of the reasons for which the Board recommended pardons.

The reasons for recommending pardons for the four prisoners were, in one case, to prevent deportation and on recommendation of the Federal authorities, and in the other three, after-discovered evidence establishing innocence.

Parole Supervision

Parole supervision by the State was authorized by the Acts of May 1, 1929, P. L. 1182, 1183, and 1184. Under those acts this department is responsible for the personnel of our parole service, but the work is done under the direction of the State Board of Pardons.

It was not until the close of the last administration that the parole service was actually inaugurated, and when this administration began the service had been established only in the Counties of Philadelphia and Allegheny. Thus on January 1, 1931, 596 parolees had been placed under supervision. At that date the personnel of the service consisted of one Supervisor, one Chief Parole Agent, two Senior Parole Agents, nine Junior Parole Agents and three stenographers.

Immediately after the approval of the appropriation for this work for the biennium beginning June 1, 1931, the service was extended to cover the entire State. Six district headquarters were established and the entire State was divided into the same number of districts.

On November 1, 1934 our parole service had under supervision 3,724 Pennsylvania cases and 333 cases of other states, making a grand total of 4,057.

We supervise parolees from other states under reciprocal agreements with California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey and New York. All of these states in return for our supervision of their parolees supervise Pennsylvania parolees in their respective states.

The following table shows the distribution of the 3,724 Pennsylvania cases under supervision on November 1, 1934:

	E.S.SP.	W.S.P.	P.I.S.	Fem.	Total
Reporting regularly ...	1,569	1,053	584	10	3,216
Not reporting	45	5	14	0	64
Uncaptured violators ..	130	77	27	2	236
Captured violators	88	63	57	0	208
	1,832	1,198	682	12	3.724

Included in the 3.724 active cases are 454 cases whose sentences were commuted by the Governor upon the recommendation of the Board of Pardons. The following table will show the distribution of these cases:

	E.S.P.	W.S.P.	Fem.	Total
Reporting regularly	218	213	2	433
Not reporting	1	1	0	2
Uncaptured violators	6	3	0	9
Captured violators	4	6	0	10
	229	223	2	454

Our present force consists of a State Supervisor of Paroles, seven Senior Parole Agents, twenty Junior Parole Agents, and twelve stenographers, a total of forty employes. The present cost of this service is at the rate of $240,000 per biennium.

There is no doubt whatever but that this service saves to the counties of Pennsylvania in costs of confining prisoners in our penitentiaries and reformatories several times the amount of the State appropriation.

In addition, apart from monetary considerations, this service is invaluable in redeeming hundreds of persons who have committed violations of the criminal statutes.

The service includes not only active supervision over the activities of parolees through the submission by them of monthly reports, but also includes such activities as obtaining employment, hospitalization, and other aids to those who have in the past transgressed, but who, through this service, are being given an opportunity to be useful, upright citizens.

It would be a calmity if this service were to be abandoned.

Board of Commissioners of Uniform State Laws

During this administration this Board has consisted of President Judge Wm. M. Hargest of the Court of Common Pleas of Dauphin County, Wm. R. Scott, Esquire, of Pittsburgh, and the Attorney General.

The Commissioners have attended the annual meetings of the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and have faithfully performed their duties.

Judge Hargest was honored by the Conference by election as its president during the years 1931 to 1933, inclusive; and the other commissioners have filled important committee assignments.

During this administration the Legislature enacted the Uniform Automobile Liability Security Act (1933) and the Uniform Firearms Act (1931).

Board of Finance and Revenue

The Attorney General is a member of this Board. During this administration the Board's work has increased tremendously, due to the duties imposed upon it by The Fiscal Code of 1929.

Deputy Attorney General Philip S. Moyer, by designation of the Attorney General, with the approval of the Governor, was assigned to sit at all hearings before the Board, instead of the Attorney General. A very large portion of his time was devoted to the Board's work.

Board of Property

The Attorney General is a member of this Board but throughout this administration Deputy Attorney General James W. Shull has served in his stead, by designation of the Attorney General with the approval of the Governor, as authorized by Section 213 of The Administrative Code.

The Board considered 12 applications for warrants and held hearing in 9. Much testimony was taken in the 9 cases and opinions were written containing findings of fact and conclusions of law. The cases consumed months of time and involved many thousands of dollars. No appeals were taken from the decrees entered by the Board.

Personnel

The number of employes engaged in the legal work of this department has increased during this administration from 35 (at the beginning) to 72 (at present).

These figures exclude employes of the Board of Pardons and of the parole supervision division of this department.

The assumption by this department of new duties, as previously outlined in this report accounts for an increase of 16 lawyers; as follows:

Assistance to registers of wills, 10 at total salaries of $38,300 per annum.

Assistance to Workmen's Compensation Board and referees, 5 at total salaries of $14,800 per annum.

Title work, 1 at $4,200 per annum.

Of the remaining 21 employes added to the payroll of this department 6 are lawyers attending to the local work of the department in their respective counties who have been put on a salary basis instead of on a fee basis. These lawyers not only attend to our general work but also assist registers of wills and county officers in collecting Commonwealth revenue.

As previously stated these lawyers are employed in Berks, Lancaster, Delaware, Montgomery, Lackawanna, and Luzerne Counties. The annual salary of these 6 men is $11,500. Placing these men on the salary roll has unquestionably accounted for a substantial saving to the Commonwealth as against the fees we would have been obliged to pay lawyers in these same counties for doing the same volume of work.

The 15 remaining additional employes are:

Lawyers	3
Collection assistant	1
Investigator	1
Administrative force	10
Total	15

This represents a 20% increase in the lawyers attending to the general work of the department and a 50% increase in our administrative staff.

In view of the fact that there were three special sessions of the Legislature during this administration, that he general work of his department was at least twice as heavy as during the preceding administration, and that our collections were four times those of the last preceding administration, it is obvious that both the legal and administrative forces of this department have done many times more work per dollar of expense than was done during the previous administration.

This does not reflect any discredit on the prior administration, but it is definite evidence of the zeal, the loyalty and the unselfish devotion to their duties of the men and women of this department. No staff could have co-operated more splendidly than they have done.

When the system of furnishing legal assistance to county officers in collecting State revenue was changed in 1931, we reduced the payroll for all legal assistance in Philadelphia and Allegheny Counties from $77,700 per annum to $54,900 per annum, a saving of $22,800 a year, or $45,600 a biennium. Since then the cost has been increased only $1,000 a year or $2,000 a biennium, so that there has been a saving of more than $20,000 a year to the Commonwealth in the cost of this work during more than 3 years of your administration.

The maximum salary paid to any member of our staff during this administration was $6,000 per annum.

Pardon Board

The Pardon Board employes were formerly carried on the payroll of the Department of State. During this administration they have been carried on the payroll of this department. The number of employes has increased by one, and the total payroll by $780 per annum.

The salary of the secretary was reduced from $3,600 to $3,000. The one additional employe was necessitated by a complete change in the method of handling applications for pardon and the papers evidencing the Governor's action upon recommendations of the board.

Formerly a large part of this work was done by the general stenographic staff of the Department of Justice. Now all of the Pardon Board work is done by the employes particularly assigned to that work.

In addition, it is only fair to say that during the last year of the previous administration one stenographer on the general payroll of the Department of State was constantly assigned to the Board of Pardons to assist in its work.

The increase of one is, therefore, not an actual increase, but merely a shift in payroll accounting.

Parole Supervision

The number of employes in this service has been increased from 16 to 40.

At the beginning of this administration only 2 counties of the State were organized for parole supervision—Allegheny and Philadelphia.

Now our parole supervision is State wide in scope covering, through 6 districts, every county in the State.

This service today is undermanned with the result that our employes are carrying case loads which are almost 50% heavier than they ought to be.

The work could be much more effectively done if we had an adequate number of field agents to do it.

Conclusion

It has been a privilege and a pleasure to serve as Attorney General during this administration. There has been a splendid spirit of cooperation among all of those who participated, directly or indirectly in the Commonwealth's legal work.

To you I express my appreciation for having at all times given me a free hand to select those to assist me who were qualified to do the work at hand.

And I wish to, repeat that from every member of the department, whatever his or her position, I have uniformly received the most loyal and self-sacrificing assistance. But for this, it would have been impossible to accomplish the results outlined in this report without a very substantial increase in cost to the State.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION

James N. Rule, Superintendent

To the Governor:

Herewith is a report of the work of the Department of Public Instruction during your Administration.

Although 20,000 or more schools had to close in the United States during the depression, not one in Pennsylvania had closed under the minimum legal term. This is Pennsylvania's outstanding record at the close of the first one hundred years of public education in the Commonwealth.

Celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Common Schools Law of 1834 marked the closing year of this Administration.

The school centenary also marked accomplishment during this Administration of a program of efficiency, economy, and general improvement in school operation and management that has been of material help to public education.

Keeping all public schools open has been no easy task during the depression years. But schools have been kept going while high school enrollments have increased almost fifty per cent since 1930.

Much that has been accomplished in maintaining the school program and improving it along instructional lines has come about primarily because of the desire on the part of the citizens of the Commonwealth to cooperate with governmental agencies in the formulation of a well-balanced plan serving the educational needs of both children and adults.

The period through which we have just passed has been more than a period of evaluation and refinement. Many cooperative endeavors have been engaged in for the purpose of establishing a firm basis for the State's program of public education and the establishment of aims and objectives which will, when placed in operation, improve the schools of the Commonwealth.

Costs Reduced 10 Per Cent

Recommended economies in school expenditures saved taxpayers more than $20,000,000 in 1933. This represents a good ten per cent reduction from 1932 school costs. It means annual per pupil costs were $15.00 lower than in 1932 and $21.50 lower thain in 1929.

These reductions were necessary because local school revenues dropped, and are still decreasing. With this condition existing the only thing that would save the schools was an emergency fund.

Emergency funds totaling $6,250,000 were recommended and passed by the General Assemblies of 1931 and 1933. It is only by these and other timely measures that the school doors in Pennsylvania have been kept open. There has been excellent cooperation of school directors, citizens, school officials, and teachers. All have done their share in the interest of the children of the Commonwealth. Teachers alone contributed several million dollars in food and clothing to keep children in their classrooms.

At all times the Administration urged economy in local school districts, but with due protection for teachers' salaries. Every item of non-instructional cost was watched closely and from time to time the Department of Public Instruction made practical economy suggestions to school directors and administrators.

Emergency aid to many school districts has been conditioned on the submission and approval of budgets. Bringing the school district budget into line with approved school administrative practice has helped the children in these districts to get the greatest benefit from available public school funds.

Protection for Teachers

The keystone of good schools is good teachers. An administrative measure passed at the 1933 Session of the General Assembly gave teachers some degree of protection in their positions for the biennium 1933-1935.

Act 48 protected teachers temporarily against the unnecessary slashing of salaries. To aid extremely poor districts it was provided that cuts below ninety per cent of the legal minimum must be approved by the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

This act stopped the pernicious practice of beating down teachers' wages through the device of voluntary contributions, and took teaching positions in Pennsylvania off the auction block.

Two hundred districts in 1933-1934 asked permission to reduce teacher's salaries below the ninety per cent level. An investigation revealed that in ninety-nine of these cases the application was justifiable and temporary permission was granted. During the current school year only fifty districts have asked to reduce salaries below the legal level and only four have received permission.

During the Administration total subsidies to public schools to $125,992,975, which compares with $108,636,971 in the previous four years. In 1932 the cost per pupil in average daily attendance was $91.13, while the average cost in the United States was $87.67. Twenty other states spent more for each child than Pennsylvania.

Awake to the changing needs in education to meet changing times, the Superintendent of Public Instruction provided in 1931 for thorough studies of all phases of the educational program. A Commission for the Study of Educational Problems was appointed. This group, including many laymen and women, strengthened the educational program. Economy and efficiency of school organization and administration have been included as objectives of various committees assigned to these studies.

100th Anniversary of Free Schools

Authorized by the General Assembly, celebration this year of the one hundredth anniversary of the enactment of the Common Schools Law has attracted attention of the public to current educational problems. Inaugurated by the Department of Public Instruction, pageants showing the work of the schools in retrospect and prospect were developed as parts of commencement programs and educational gatherings throughout the State.

Serious Problems Encountered

Focusing attention upon the educational needs in Pennsylvania has resulted in a three fold school recovery program that is enlisting support throughout the Commonwealth. This program includes what is called "The 3 R's of School Recovery in Pennsylvania"—Restoration of the instructional program, Reorganization of school districts, and Revision of the system of school support.

Since 1931 there has been steady advancement in improvement of teaching service. In that year only ninety per cent of the teachers had two years or more of special preparation beyond the high school. Today ninety-nine per cent of our 62,000 teachers qualify for standard certification, a most enviable record. To further insure our 2,000,000 school children being taught by competent teachers, standards for admission to State Teachers Colleges have been increased, thereby weeding out unqualified applicants.

With the cooperation of teachers and higher institutions of learning the Department has prepared and revised during the past three years thirty bulletins to aid teachers in their daily work and to serve administrators in the more effective organization of their schools.

Greater Demands on High Schools

The removal of children from trades and industry, general unemployment, shortened working week, modification of established governmental, social, and industrial agencies, and increased crime on the part of youth, have presented problems with important educational implications.

Since 1930, the total enrolment in Pennsylvania public schools increased from 1,902,000 to 1,994,000, exclusive of kindergartens. Enrolment in grades 9 to 12 during the same period increased from 296,372 to approximately 426,000. The high school growth is accounted for partly by a return to day school of some 35,000 continuation pupils, reduction of failures in the elementary school, and greater demands by Pennsylvania youth for increased schooling. A narrow curriculum cannot meet the needs of the pupils in the schools of today.

Considerable progress is being made to bring the curricula of both the elementary and the secondary schools into line with modern needs. Departmental committees and reports in the various fields have contributed to this reorganization.

Department Reorganized

Reorganization of the Department of Public Instruction, including consolidation of all functions of the Department within three major bureaus, was effected during this Administration. Efficiency and economy in handling the State's educational affairs were obtained by logical assignment of departmental duties on a functional basis—instruction, school administration and finance, and professional licensing. Duplication has been avoided and service to school districts made more effective.

IN 1922 THE COST OF ADMINISTERING ALL MONEYS APPROPRIATED TO AND ACCOUNTED FOR BY THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION WAS TWO PER CENT OF THE TOTAL, WHILE IN 1932 THE COSTS OF ADMINISTRATION HAD BEEN REDUCED TO EIGHT-TENTHS OF ONE PER CENT. FOR THE BIENNIUM 1933-1935 THIS COST OF DEPARTMENTAL ADMINISTRATION HAS BEEN REDUCED TO LESS THAN SEVEN-TENTHS OF ONE PER CENT.

In all agencies of the Department of Public Instruction, including the State Teachers Colleges and other State-owned educational institutions, from January 15, 1931, to November 15, 1934, the decrease in number of employes was 279, and the decrease in annual salaries amounted to $762,445.

Licensing

Striking results have been accomplished for protection of public health and welfare from the practice of unlicensed practitioners in the seventeen professions and occupations. Acts regulating barbers and beauty culturists, passed by the General Assembly in 1931 and 1933, respectively, have been placed in successful operation.

Information for the Public

In September, 1933, the Department inaugurated the publication of a monthly PUBLIC EDUCATION BULLETIN "for information of boards of school directors, administrative officers of the public schools and of State institutions of higher learning, and interested citizens, in accordance with Section 2904d of the School Laws." This publication is distributed monthly to approximately 14,000 school people and citizens interested in public education.

School Recovery

In 1931 the effects of the depression were beginning to be felt in the schools. This Administration lost no time in inaugurating surveys and studies intended to seek out and institute desirable changes that would provide, with economy and efficiency, a school system that would meet the new demands of a new day.

The small school district laid out in the horse and buggy era has become obsolete, and 2,582 separate districts still exist when fewer than 500 are necessary. Not enough State aid is going to the poorer districts and local real estate is compelled to bear from eighty to eighy-five per cent of the school cost when it represents less than forty per cent of the taxable wealth of the Commonwealth.

To overcome some of these undesirable conditions, a new School Code was introduced in the 1933 session of the General Assembly. But protests against consolidation of school districts came from all parts of the State, and blocked enactment at that time of any but emergency and makeshift legislation. A campaign to educate the public on educational matters therefore became a necessity.

Early in 1934 a program of "School Recovery in Pennsylvania" was announced by the Superintendent of Public Instruction. It led directly to the first state-wide gathering of citizens and school people ever held in Pennsylvania for discussion of emergency school problems.

A "Citizens' Conference on School Recovery in Pennsylvania," called jointly by the Governor and the Superintendent of Public Instruction, brought 2,000 people to Harrisburg on October 10 and 11, 1934. The purpose was to present the more important phases of school recovery from depression conditions, problems involved in getting the schools back to normalcy, and to lay the foundation for similar conferences in local communities throughout the State so that the public could be advised as to the gravity of the situation and the need for immediate action through proper and timely legislation.

Commission for the Study of Educational Problems

For many years public school officials of the Commonwealth had been confronted with many difficult problems of public education service and of public school support. With each passing year these problems became more apparent and the need for their solution more urgent. Public school enrollments were nearing the 2,000,000 mark and selection and careful study of such problems in all departments and at all levels became highly desirable.

Therefore, in 1931, there was appointed a Commission for the Study of Educational Problems in Pennsylvania. Outstanding leaders from all sections of the State, including representatives of the State School Directors' Association, taxpayers' associations, and numerous other civic, agricultural, professional and business organizations interested in education, were included in the personnel of the study committees working under the direction of the commission.

The chief objectives of the State study are two-fold:

1. In the interest of an adequate educational service as expressed by the Superintendent of Public Instruction in "Pennsylvania Educational Charter." The Charter is intended to express the educational rights guaranteed to the boys and girls of the Commonwealth by the Constitution and provided, in principle at least, in our present school laws.

Pennsylvania's Educational Charter

FOR EVERY CHILD in Pennsylvania protection of his constitutional right to an education.

FOR EVERY CHILD a school term sufficient in length to enable

FOR EVERY CHILD an adaptable educational program—instruction and practice in how to become a competent citizen—training and guidance to do some part of the world's work well—activities for the development of worthy home membership, wise use of leisure time, health, culture, and character.

FOR EVERY CHILD a school term sufficient in length to enable him to profit to the full extent of his capacities from opportunities offered by education.

FOR EVERY CHILD safe, sanitary, hygienic, and properly equipped school buildings and grounds.

FOR EVERY CITIZEN of the Commonwealth provision for a continuing education—to make up for opportunities lost in earlier years and to provide means whereby the individual may adjust himself to new civic, social, and economic responsibilities.

2. In the interest of greater economy and efficiency in school administration:

a. To reduce school costs so as to meet the current financial situation adequately and constructively and at the same time to preserve the equity which the future citizens of the Commonwealth have in their present educational opportunity.

b. To discover and develop lines of efficient administration which will preserve these economies in school administration and conserve the educational equities of oncoming generations.

The commission established various committees, each of which has been conducting careful studies on the subject assigned. These are: Educational Objectives and Principles, the Local Unit of School Administration, School Finance, Teacher Preparation, Legislation and Recodification of School Laws, Instructional Program and Procedure, Elementary Education, Secondary Education, Extension Education, and Higher Education.

Liquor Control Act Examinations

On November 29, 1933, the Governor approved the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Act which contained a provision that the Department of Public Instruction should select by competitive examinations the personnel for the operation and administration of all State liquor stores and establishments. The liquor stores were to be opened on January 2, 1934.

The stupendous task confronted the Department of selecting by competitive examination, the necessary personnel to open and man over two hundred liquor stores in Pennsylvania in less than one month's time. At that time reliable statistics indicated that 900,000 men and women of Pennsylvania were unemployed and all who were of voting age were privileged to apply for a position.

Within a week after the approval of the Act, applications, forms, and circulars of information were available. In such a short time, however, the Department had received thousands of requests for application blanks by mail, messenger, and long distance telephone calls. By December 7, 1933, which was the last day upon which the Department could accept applications, 150,000 application forms had been distributed.

Fifty-nine thousand persons actually filed applications and desired to take the examination. Thirty-four thousand eight hundred and twenty-four applicants were declared eligible on the basis of the qualifications prescribed by the Liquor Control Board, and 32,569 persons were examined on December 16, 1933.

To handle this emergency and to keep faith with this great number of citizens, practically the whole Department staff, augmented by a special staff from the State-aided higher educational institutions and the public schools of the Commonwealth, was called upon to assist in the task of preparing for, administering and scoring the examinations, ranking and placing the successful competitors in positions as required by law.

This was done so that on Christmas Day, just twenty-six days after the measure was signed, 1,300 competitors were notified that they were to report for instructions.

Competitors were appointed on the basis of their rank, the examination papers having been marked by committees composed of representatives of the Department and colleges and universities receiving State aid from the Commonwealth. The person receiving the highest rank was the first appointed, and so on.

Nine batteries of examinations and a special series for executives were prepared and administered. Thirty-four types of positions were to be filled. The examinations were given at the same time in thirty-six cities. Fifty high school buildings were used.

Unusual precautions were taken to safeguard the examinations from those who might wish to defeat the intent of the law. The examinations were carefully inventoried at every step. State Police guarded them or saw to it that they were guarded from the printing press to the examination center and the scoring center, and back again to the Department.

We believe that an exceptionally high type of personnel has been selected, principally due to the tremendous competition. For example, out of the 244 state store managers appointed, eighty-two or one-third of them are college graduates. Eighty per cent have had at least one year's educational training beyond high school, and all are high school graduates. In addition, they have an average of twelve years of business or clerical experience back of them.

Since December 16, 1933, other examinations have been held at the request of the Liquor Control Board to select administrative and enforcement officers. The law requires that examinations shall be held twice a year when positions are to be filled.

It is the Department's intention to check and evaluate the selections from these competitive examinations against performance on the job. This will be a most useful contribution to the general knowledge of the value of competitive examinations in selecting public employes.

Reorganization of Secondary Education

A movement begun some years ago in Pennsylvania having for its purpose a reorganization of secondary education to include grades 7, 8, and 9 as part of the secondary school, has continued even in the face of reduced school budgets. At the present time more than fifty per cent of the 600,000 boys and girls enrolled in secondary schools organized to care for grades 7 to 12 are in reorganized schools. In addition, the problem of readjustment of the earlier years of the college is giving considerable concern throughout the State. There is a growing feeling that the first two years of the college constitute an integral part of secondary education.

Rural Education

To assist the six thousand teachers of one-room schools a program of intensive reorganization of instruction has been started. This includes the preparation of modified types of programs and also the preparation of curriculum materials especially adapted for one-room schools.

Adult and Extension Education

While continued emphasis was placed upon programs of retraining and a continuation of the regular adult education program, through funds granted by the State Emergency Relief Board it was possible for the Department of Public Instruction, in cooperation with Eric H. Biddle, State Emergency Relief Administrator, to organize an extensive program of emergency education, carried on primarily at the adult level.

This program reached 113,000 people and gave employment to almost 1,800 who qualified as instructors. The 1934-35 program will give work to more than 5,000 unemployed and reach many more thousands of adults in instructional and recreational projects.

The experimental work carried on through emergency education in the field of child development, workers' education, illiteracy, and general adult education, is serving as a stimulus to communities throughout the State. Many permanent programs have been developed.

State Library and State Museum Achievements

Early in the Administration the 360,000 volumes comprising the State Library collection were moved to the new and more commodious quarters in the Education Building. This additional space made possible many changes which makes more available the present collection and permits much expansion. Two new sections of much needed activity were organized—a Document Section in connection with the Law Library, which is being extensively used, and a Genealogical Section, filling a long felt want.

In addition to its usual services the State Library extended reference and book service to 17,000 boys in CCC camps, issued packet and traveling libraries to schools and villages without library service, added a Reader's Counsellor to the staff as an aid to the unemployed, and sponsored special projects under CWA, PWA, and Emergency Education activities.

During the four years just ending, the State Museum has achieved outstanding results. A contributing factor to these achievements has been the merging of the State Museum with the directorship of Visual Education.

All the display rooms have been completely renovated, the exhibits rearranged in systematic order, and a wealth of valuable material acquired without cost to the State. Additional space was provided through removal of the State Library to new quarters in 1931.

Other Activities

During the four years beginning January 15, 1931, the membership of the School Employes' Retirement System increased from 72,350 to 75,450, and the reserve in the School Employes' Retirement Fund increased from $80,500,000 to $120,000,000, approximately one-half of which represents the contributions of the 75,450 school employes who are members of the Retirement System.

During the past four depression years the Retirement Board has been investing about $20,000,000 per year in school district and other bonds of Pennsylvania, the proceeds of which have been used to build school buildings, roads, and other improvements, thus helping to furnish much needed work relief.

In the work of the State Board of Censors the total number of subjects approved for exhibition in Pennsylvania from June 1, 1931, to October 1, 1934, was 22,846, comprising 57,073 reels. The total amount of revenue for the same period was $432,318.10. Inspections made in theatres from June 1, 1931, to October 1, 1934, totaled 27,573.

Outstanding in the activities of the State Historical Commission was commemoration of the 250th anniversary of the birth of William Penn observed throughout the year 1932. Public schools contributed through special commencement and other observances with concentration on Penn Day, October 24. It was in this year that the Commonwealth formally accepted from the Warner Sand and Gravel Company its gift of nine acres, including the site of Pennsbury Manor, the home built by William Penn on the banks of the Delaware, near Tullytown, Bucks County, in 1682-1683. The Commission has made progress in the restoration of the site and plans are being made for rebuilding of the house and out-buildings in their original form.

During the past four years archaeological surveys were completed at Safe Harbor and partial results of the expeditions have been published by the Commission as "Safe Harbor Report No. 1." The Commission authorized an intensive archaeological survey of western Pennsylvania counties during the summer of 1934.
